FLORAL PARK.
20 Minutes From Broadway.
Lot $300. $10 Down & $5 Monthly

With improvements, running water, etc.; no interest or taxes for one year. Title guaranteed. This is without a doubt the most beautiful and attractive piece of property and investment that was ever placed on the market before. Everybody knows John L. Childs, the seed and flower raiser; this property adjoins his handsome estate; it is also right at the depot and trolley. Floral Park has the best railroad service on Long Island, owing to four branch roads running through it. These lots are as good as 100 per cent. investment and could not be bought for less than that in a year from now, and a beautiful home site for any one wishing to build. All the new Penn. R. R. tunnels and improvements go straight to this property. For free tickets, booklets, etc., apply to and of how many happy and independent HOME OWNERS it has made throughout the UNITED KINGDOM?

HAVE YOU EVER HEARD OF THE

We are operating the same safe and conservative system here in OUR COUNTRY, and it has proven very successful, because the money you have paid heretofore in rent each month through our system is a payment towards a HOME, and you pay no more than you now pay in rent, and in a few years you will have YOUR HOME all paid for.

You have to pay only $5.00 down on each thousand you wish to invest in a home; $2.50 per month on each thousand (for three months), receiving credit for $2.00 of the $2.50. After the home has been purchased for you, you then pay us $7.00 per month per thousand, receiving credit for $5.00 of the $7.00 each month on the principal.

NEW BRONX TROLLEYS TO BE OPENED MAY 1

New York City Interborough Announces Its Plans.

TRANSFERS AT MANY POINTS

Announcement was made yesterday by the New York City Interborough Railway Company that it would open its many new trolley lines in the Bronx on May 1.

The first section of the company's new lines in the Bronx will be put in operation simultaneously with the completion of the Subway station at Broadway and 181st Street, and important transfer arrangements between the Subway, the elevated, and the Union Railway lines are officially promulgated.

Passengers leaving the Subway at the 181st Street station will be able to take the new line of the New York City Interborough trolley system on the Manhattan side of the Washington Bridge, cross the bridge, go north on Aqueduct Avenue to Fordham Road, thence east to Third Avenue and 189th Street, to the Zoological Garden, Bronx Park, continue south on Southern Boulevard to 180th Street, thence west to Third Avenue. This affords rapid transit facilities to the University Heights and the Fordham Heights districts, as well as connecting the west side of Manhattan with the Bronx Park.

Arrangements have been made with the Subway and the Manhattan elevated roads for a three-cent transfer to both systems, and a free transfer will be given to all the Union Railway lines at the following points:

Boscobel Avenue and Aqueduct Avenue.
Burnside Avenue and Aqueduct Avenue.
Fordham Road and Aqueduct Avenue.
Third Avenue and Fordham Road.
Jerome Avenue and Fordham Road.
Webster Avenue and Fordham Square.
Third Avenue and 180th Street.

The transfer at Fordham Square from the elevated railroad and the Union Railway will be a convenience in reaching Bronx Park Zoological and Botanical Gardens, as there are now no transportation facilities except a few hacks at Fordham Square to carry the thousands of persons who visit the park, especially on Sundays and holidays.

The additional crosstown lines will be opened on Tremont Avenue and on Kingsbridge Road as soon as the transverse roads under the Concourse are completed, appropriation for building which has been made by the Board of Estimate.

The work on the company's other lines will be pushed forward as rapidly as possible.

The New York City Interborough Railway Company has franchises for more than forty miles of street surface lines, and will furnish a comprehensive system of crosstown lines in the Borough of the Bronx and feeders to numerous stations of the rapid transit system in Manhattan and the Bronx as follows:

Subway station, 207th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, Manhattan. (Franchise applied for.)
Subway and New York Central Railroad joint station, 225th Street and Broadway, Manhattan. (Franchise applied for.)
Manhattan elevated station, 195th Street and Webster Avenue. (One block distant.)
Subway station, 180th Street and Boston Road.
Subway station, 177th Street, West Farms square, and Boston Road.
Subway station, Longwood and Prospect Avenues.

Arthur Turnbull is President of the company, Andrew Freedman is Vice President, and D. W. McWilliams is Secretary and Treasurer. The Directors are Alfred Skitt, W. J. Fransioli, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Walter G. Oakman, E. More Davidson, Jordan J. Rollins, Robert C. Wood, together with Messrs. Turnbull and Freedman.

DOUBTS HOSPITAL REPORT.

Coroner Harburger Investigating Insane Patient's Death.

Coroner Harburger says he intends to investigate thoroughly the case of Cornelio Cologero, the Italian who died on Saturday in the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane on Ward's Island partly from injuries, including six fractured ribs, received at the hands of some person unknown.

Dr. Philip Smith of the hospital said on Saturday that Cologero died from a complication of heart disease, paralysis, and nephritis in conjunction with eight broken ribs sustained through two falls. Coroner Harburger had Dr. Philip O'Hanlon, his physician, investigate the case and then said:

"The circumstances surrounding this matter are very suspicious. The hospital authorities assert that an insane patient inflicted the injuries, but it seems peculiar to me that they can't give the name of that patient. I'm going to look into the matter until I get at the facts."

Church Gets Stained Glass Window.

In commemoration of the confirmation yesterday of their two daughters, J. Henry Dick, the sugar refiner of Brooklyn, and his wife presented to the English Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, at Bedford Avenue and Hewes Street, Williamsburg, a stained glass window valued at $2,000 and representing "The Ascension."

FIRE PATROL'S PERIL.

Investigation disclosed yesterday that between thirty and forty automobiles were destroyed in the early morning fire in the Imperial Garage, at 56 West Sixty-seventh Street. The seventeen members of Fire Patrol Company No. 3 narrowly escaped being trapped in the basement of the building.

The owner of the garage is W. H. Hubbell. The building was insured, but most of the cars were not. The owners of the machines are the heavy losers. A partial list of the machines and their owners is as follows:

J. F. B. Herreshoff, 41 West Sixty-ninth Street, father of the yacht designer, two cars.
Raymond Hitchcock, one car.
The Societie Anonyme Westinghouse, offices 11 Pine Street, two cars imported Wednesday from France and uninsured.
William S. Devery, one car.
R. C. Seymour, one car.
C. Bernheim, 52 West Seventy-first Street, two cars.
Dr. J. P. Stewart, 200 West Seventieth Street, one car.
J. P. Sousa, Jr., 37 Madison Avenue, two cars.
George F. Chamberlain, one car.
Colgate Hoyt, 25 Park Avenue, two cars.
Dr. Julian P. Thomas, the balloonist, 172 West Seventy-second Street, one car.
Dr. D. O. Edson of 42 West Seventy-first Street, son of the former Mayor of New York, one car.
J. Edward Addicks, one car.
Gottfried Piel, 148 Riverside Drive, two cars.

The fire was a spectacular one, and three alarms were sent in, there being danger that the St. Nicholas Rink would be destroyed. There was only a three-foot alley between the garage and the rink, and the former building was destroyed. The flames ate into the rink and got a start on it, but the firemen managed to fight off the progress of the fire in that direction.

The fire patrol, in endeavoring to save the expensive machines stored on the three floors of the building, used the elevator until the flames crept up on them. Then they dragged the cars down the runway to the street until they were compelled to desist. They managed to get out about fifteen of the automobiles, and it was dangerous work, for the heat was intense and the gasoline tanks threatened explosions for each shift of men engaged in the work.

After the runway was cut off, the patrol went to the cellar to try and save the machinery. They were knee deep in water, with barrels of gasoline about them, when the rafters of the second story crashed under the weight of automobiles to the first floor, and the first floor itself was smashed in, sending showers of sparks sputtering into the water-filled cellar. Capt. Johnson ordered his men out immediately, and they scrambled to the sidewalk of Sixty-seventh Street in good order, not a man of them hurt.

When the first company reached the building the blaze had such a start that second and third alarms were sent in immediately. The fire quickly devoured the rafters of the roof, and when the flames began to tower high in the air the neighborhood was thoroughly alarmed. Patrons of Healy's restaurant, adjoining, hurried from the place, but the restaurant was not damaged.

Yesterday one after another of the automobile owners appeared at the burned garage to ask for their machines, the fine Springtime day being ideal for motoring. Some of them were admitted to the ruins and they stood and looked sadly at the ruins and ashes under which were their costly vehicles. The values of the destroyed autos ranged from $500 to $7,500.

DESTITUTE AT 103.

Poor Old Woman and Septuagenarian Son Seek a Hospital.

An emaciated couple made their way along Madison Avenue yesterday afternoon, asking how to get to a hospital. They had to stop now and then to rest from sheer exhaustion.

At the Presbyterian Hospital, at Seventy-first Street, they gave the names Rosa and John Delaferne, and said they were ill and destitute. An examination showed that their condition was complicated with chronic coughs, and they were sent to Bellevue.

Rosa is John's mother. She is 103 years old, they said. Her son is 73. The hospital attendants believed their statements. All possible care is being taken of them. Their dread was that they might be separated.

Fifty-three years ago they came from Italy. The mother then was able to do some work. John earned enough for both until four weeks ago, when he became unable to work. Their little room in Harlem had to be given up, and then the aged couple, confessedly, began to beg in the streets. But the coughs grew worse with the precariously acquired food and lodging, and yesterday they resolved to seek out a hospital.

"Mere skin and bones" was the medical comment they excited. But last night they had good food and warm beds and said they were happy.

VOLUNTEER FIREMEN SUE.

Say the City Supplied Horses, but Not Hay and Oats.

Suit against the city has been begun by Jones Hook and Ladder Company of the Woodhaven Fire Department. On Sept. 10, 1902, the city sent two horses to the volunteer fire company to be used in drawing its apparatus. The firemen bought hay and oats for them. They paid for feed $139.60, and tried vainly to get the city to reimburse them.

Members of the company acted as hostlers, and have not charged anything for that service, considering it as part of their fire duty. The firemen say that ample provision was made in the city budget to feed the horses, but that the money was diverted to other uses.

The Deraismes Engine Company of Woodhaven will sue the city for about $900 for feed and care of horses if the other suit is decided in favor of the firemen.

MISS FIELD MUCH BETTER.

Granddaughter of the Late Chicago Merchant Rallies from Operation.

Miss Gwendoline Field, the 11-year-old daughter of the late Marshall Field, Jr., who was operated on at the New York Hospital on Saturday for appendicitis, is on the road to quick recovery. Miss Field was taken to the hospital by her mother from their home in Lakewood Saturday. A suite of rooms on the seventh floor of the hospital was engaged for her, together with several special nurses.

EXPRESS CLERK ARRESTED.

Martin Is Accused of Stealing $100 from the Adams Company.

Detective Sergeant Woolridge of the Central Office arraigned before Magistrate Moss in the Tombs Court yesterday Herbert Martin, a clerk employed in the incoming accounting department of the Adams Express Company at 61 Broadway. Martin is 41 years old, and lives at Orange, N. J. He was arrested on Saturday night, charged with the larceny of $100, and will get a hearing this morning.

PLAYWRIGHTS SCORE THE DRAMATIC CRITICS

THIS AT PLAYGOERS' CLUB

"Shore Acres" Pointed Out as One of Many Plays That Have Succeeded Despite Criticism.

With Miss Amelia Bingham presiding, the American Playgoers and their friends met last night in the Hotel Astor's small ballroom and applauded heartily as Thomas Dixon, Jr., and William A. Brady tore the critics apart in a discussion of the topic of the evening, "That the Criterion of a Successful Play Is Proved by the Box Office Receipts."

Every one took the affirmative save Mr. Brady, who insisted that it required a manager with a bank roll as large around as a horse's neck to give the box office a chance. He gave as examples the adverse criticism of "Shore Acres" and other plays that, he declared, have won their way to the money-making point because they had behind them managers with large bank accounts who stood by them despite the adverse opinions of the critics.

"I do declare, and can prove it," said Mr. Brady, with some vehemence, "that in the play 'The Triangle' the playwright had a great scene in his last act, and that five out of six critics who reviewed it wrote their criticisms, and their criticisms were in cold type before that last act was played. It had to be sent to the storehouse, and the poor devil who wrote it had his work for naught. It is not the man who can stand the adverse criticism, but it is the manager who can stand the financial strain who can make the box office tell on his play finally, and get judgment from the box office.

"The great American play 'Shenandoah' was condemned in New York. Some of the criticisms—the funny criticisms—nearly broke poor Bronson Howard's heart. I don't know that he ever wrote another equally successful play. But he had a manager who stuck, and years afterward it became a great play and the box office began to tell. Some one of our wits in criticism called 'Shore Acres' a b'gosh drama, invented the term for it, but it is to-day one of the big money-makers."

The Rev. Thomas Dixon was cold and deliberate in his onslaught on the critics. He fastened his eyes on the newspaper men in the ballroom and said:

"The box office is the only rational criterion of the drama. The receipts represent the minds of the audience. It is the only court of appeal for the artist. The audience uses its powers of reasoning, and if there is anything wrong with your play it will not stand for it. It condemns the weak spots in your production in a perfectly remorseless manner. No playwright may hope to fool an audience.

"Of all judges of a play the critic—the professional critic—is the least competent. They are a tired and weary set of men. They are nauseated with the drama and ready to kill a playwright because he has brought them to the playhouse. I knew a dramatic critic once who was a clever man—"

Mr. Dixon paused and the applause came.

"He threw up his job," he resumed, "changed his name, and started life all over again, when he had sickened of the task of seeing and writing about plays. There ought to be a new set of critics every six months in New York. Any man who sits down and tries to write a book or a play for a professional critic's approbation is a fool. I tried a chapter of my first successful book on my ten-year-old son. He cried when I had finished writing it. I was assured of its success. I took it to the publishers and told them that it would be a great big seller. They took the book, but laughed at me and my ideas of its sale. It has already sold 300,000 copies, and is selling in three languages.

"The fresh mind is always the critic that helps and tells. The professional critic may tell me that I know nothing of technique. I admit that I know nothing of the technique of the laying of an egg, but I declare, with a North Carolina editor, that no hen in the United States is a better judge of an egg than I."

A. St. J. Brennan, a theatrical critic, pulled down his waistcoat and removed his tie from its lodgment under the lobe of his left ear as he took the platform.

"I'm in no fit condition to speak on the question," he said, and the audience applauded. "But I will try. We are wearied and blasé, it is true, as Mr. Dixon says, but we are fatigued by the bad plays that are supplied us. It is not a very high criterion Mr. Dixon offers when he substitutes a ten-year-old boy, a relative of his, for Winter, William Archer, and the other great critics of this day, with those who have lived in the past plumb back to Aristotle, who knew something about dramatic criticism."

Max Jacobs, a young violinist, played a romanza with a theme so soft and luscious that even the sting of the critic beraters disappeared with its last note, and the reception following the session was quite a cordial affair.

GREEKS CELEBRATE HERE.

Struggle with Turkey for Freedom Began April 7, 1821.

What might be called for lack of a better name a "Fourth of July" celebration for the 10,000 Greeks in this city took place yesterday. April 7, 1821, saw the beginning of the agitation which resulted in the independence of Greece about nine years later. The New York Greek was far too busy to celebrate on Saturday, so Sunday was set aside as the day when he should meet his fellows and hear again the stories of his country's struggles for freedom.

As usual, there was dissension in the ranks of the Greeks. From best accounts the trouble arose because one local Greek paper scored a "beat" on the announcement of the fact that their Independence Day was approaching. The other two decided therefore to discount the advisability of celebrating the day at all, lest the rival paper should gain undue credit. The controversy has been bitter, so that only one faction met in Webster Hall, 119 East Eleventh Street, yesterday afternoon. The hall was packed with patriots.

There was some more patriotic singing, and then colored pictures dealing with great events in the history of ancient Greece were thrown upon a big sheet on the stage by a stereopticon, while Prof. John P. Leotosakos told about them. His explanations always started off in the past tense; they ended each time with an appeal for the future. The ultimate freedom of all the Greeks under Turkish rule was first in his mind as he talked of the past.

TO DISCUSS FRESH AIR WORK.

On behalf of a dozen or more charitable agencies of New York Dr. Linsly R. Williams is arranging for a conference on the afternoon of April 18 to consider means for bettering fresh air and Summer hospital work for children during the Summer.

Some of the subjects to be discussed are the present provisions for country or seashore treatment of sick babies, sick and convalescent mothers, older boys, and other wage earners; how co-operation may make it possible for one agency to take the mother and baby during the same week that another agency plans to take older children; the use dispensaries, hospitals, and schools may make of fresh-air homes, and the importance of the "day party."

is pronounced by the greatest musical authorities, like Richard Strauss, Sir Edward Elgar, Humperdinck, Paderewski, Hofmann, Joseffy, Lhevinne, and innumerable others, the most marvelous achievement in modern Upright Piano building. At the price of $500 it is the greatest value ever offered to the public.

Used pianos of any make taken in exchange and time payments accepted if desired.

Also Pianos for Rent, by the Month or Season.

BISHOP LAYS A CORNERSTONE.

New Italian Methodist Church Will Face Jefferson Park.

Surrounded by several thousand Italians waving flags and banners, Bishop Edward G. Andrews laid the cornerstone of the new Italian Methodist Episcopal Church, at 114th Street and First Avenue, yesterday afternoon. The exercises proved exceedingly picturesque, for, being in the heart of "Little Italy," they were carried out in true Italian style, with a great show of color and a brass band.

The Rev. F. A. Taglialatela, pastor of the church, introduced the Rev. F. M. North, D. D., Secretary of the New York City Church Extension and Missionary Society, who made the principal address. It was translated into Italian by the pastor. After a brief address Bishop Andrews laid the cornerstone. Among others who spoke were Michele Nardi, an Italian evangelist; the Rev. C. H. Grubb, Prof. Charles P. Fagnani, and the Rev. J. M. Buckley, D. D. At the conclusion of the exercises all joined in singing "America," led by the band.

The new church, which is to cost $100,000, will include a roof garden, gymnasium, and social hall. It is the outgrowth of a little mission fostered by the Church Extension and Missionary Society.

CIRCUS WINTER QUARTERS.

Plan to Move Them from Bridgeport to Long Island Being Considered.

A proposal to sell a tract of land of thirty acres on Long Island has been made to J. A. Bailey for new Winter quarters for the circus. The offer is now under consideration, and there is some likelihood that it may be accepted. The growth of the show and the accumulation of cages and railroad cars with the other properties has been so great in the last ten years that the Bridgeport plant, which covers fifteen acres of ground, is now too small.

The location of the proposed new Long Island station of the Pennsylvania Railroad, with the rail connections by bridges and tunnels to all points East and West, is a factor in moving Mr. Bailey to a favorable consideration of the Long Island property. Its proximity to New York and Brooklyn, too, would bring the new quarters in direct communication with the head offices in this city, thus centralising, to some extent, the departments.

Removing the Winter quarters of the show would mean the erection of from fifteen to twenty large iron and brick buildings, some of them, such as the car shops, fully 1,000 feet long.

CHINAMAN LOST HIS QUEUE.

A Chinaman, dressed in his Sunday silks and with a three-foot queue dangling from his head, boarded a Sixth Avenue car at Tenth Street yesterday afternoon. At Fortieth Street he got off at the front end of the car before it stopped, and, true to the traditions of his native country, he stepped down backward.

The result was disastrous to John. In the fall his queue was caught by the truck under the car. The wheels passed over the hair within three inches of the Chinaman's head, severing it as though it had been done with a sharp knife.

Before the car had pulled up, John was on his feet grinning broadly and holding the tail end of his queue in his hand. To the conductor's request for his name and address the man replied:

"Go long, me all light; me no hurt."

ROCKEFELLER IN TOWN AND SEES HIS GRANDSON

From Lakewood to Tarrytown and Then Back to the City.

IS IN FINE GOOD HUMOR

Laughs Heartily, Has His Picture Taken, and Chats Agreeably While Railroading Around.

After four months of seclusion at his estate in Lakewood, N. J., John D. Rockefeller came to town yesterday.

He left Lakewood with his daughter, Mrs. E. Parmelee Prentice, on the 8:13 o'clock train yesterday morning in the car Hiawatha, and on reaching Jersey City came over on the ferry to Twenty-third Street. A carriage was awaiting him there, and he drove immediately to the Grand Central Station, where he caught an early train for his other country home at Pocantico Hills, near Tarrytown. He remained in Tarrytown for several hours. Then he boarded a train and came back to New York.

Last night Mr. Rockefeller was at his home at 4 West Fifty-fourth Street, where, it was said, he would remain until to-day. He visited his son's home across the street, and for the first time saw his grandson, John D. Rockefeller III.

Laughed Heartily.

Mr. Rockefeller's plans were not made known. Inquiry at several places failed to elicit just how long he intends to stay in New York or where he is going when he leaves the city.

Since the beginning of the Missouri investigation of Standard Oil by Attorney General Hadley yesterday was the first time that the President of the Standard Oil Company has been seen in public. With no danger of process servers, the trip of the Standard Oil head from Lakewood to his Tarrytown home was in the nature of a picnic.

When he took the Twenty-third Street Ferry, with his arm in that of his daughter, Mr. Rockefeller remarked that he had always been used to heading for the Liberty Street gates, a habit formed in the days when he was actively engaged downtown.

Mr. Rockefeller himself was the only one of the family who did not throw or attempt to throw a cloud of mystery over his journey to the outer world from his Lakewood estate. He was in good humor, and when he was comfortably seated in the women's cabin of the ferryboat, with his daughter and valet, he laughed long and heartily when he was approached in the ferryboat by reporters eager to get a word from him. Mrs. Prentice seemed to enjoy the experience as much as he.

"Are you going to see the new baby?" he was asked.

His first response was a laugh full of good nature.

"Oh, I can't say anything," he replied, laughing again, and he turned his eyes full upon his questioner, the eyes echoing the laugh.

"Whenever I have anything to say," he resumed, "I send it to the papers, you know. I can't say anything about my plans, really."

The merriment of Mr. Rockefeller and of his daughter made the other passengers in the cabin look up. His attendant, red-haired, athletic of build, and said to be a man of education and with a knowledge of many languages, smiled as the reporters turned away.

A photographer snapped Mr. Rockefeller and when he felt assured that he had got "a plate," asked him about the identity of his woman companion.

"Mrs. Prentice, my daughter," said the Standard Oil President kindly. His good humor had not deserted him.

At Twenty-third Street a carriage awaited him. There was a coupé for Mrs. Prentice. He handed his daughter into her carriage and then entered his own carriage with his companion. The carriages proceeded up Eleventh Avenue to Twenty-fifth Street, and then across town, at last landing their occupants at the Grand Central station. Mr. Rockefeller's companion was sent to a public telephone booth to order a carriage to meet them at the Tarrytown station. The Rockefeller stables at Pocantico Hills were called up and the instructions given. Mr. Rockefeller leaned over the telephone operator's desk apparently quite at ease. He wore an iron gray wig, a flat-topped derby of remote style, a gray overcoat, and a black suit. A reporter approached him and told Mr. Rockefeller he had a minute or two before train time and didn't need to hurry. The reporter received the cheerful response that Mr. Rockefeller was always at his ease.

"But my train is ready and I must get aboard," said the Standard Oil President, and then he passed through the gate to take the train to Tarrytown.

At Tarrytown.

Mr. Rockefeller arrived at Tarrytown on the 10:45 train. His visit had been unannounced, and there were few people at the station when he arrived. He walked immediately to the carriage stand, evidently expecting a vehicle to drive him to his home, but there was none there. Mr. Rockefeller walked back into the station to Baggageman Fairchild, one of his old acquaintances.

"John," said Mr. Rockefeller, addressing one of his companions, "I wish you would telephone up to the house and let them know I'm here and want a carriage."

"It's against the rules, Mr. Rockefeller, for any one to use this 'phone," he said politely. "There's another one across the way, and I guess your carriage will be here in a minute."

Mr. Rockefeller smiled in assent. He was obliged to wait at the station for half an hour, during which half a dozen reporters and photographers stood guard at the door trying to talk to and photograph him. About 12:30 o'clock Mr. Rockefeller's carriage drove up to the station, and, nearly hiding his face behind his umbrella, Mr. Rockefeller stepped into the vehicle.

"Drive to the house as soon as possible," he said to the driver. The latter gave his horses a slash with the whip, and Mr. Rockefeller was driven off at a rapid clip. Mr. Rockefeller remained at his home on the Hills only a short time. After a light luncheon and a rest he returned to the station in time to catch the 2:37 train for New York. He was early, and was obliged to wait a quarter of an hour before the train ran into the station. During this time Mr. Rockefeller remained in his carriage. As the train drew up John notified him that it was coming, and Mr. Rockefeller alighted.

Felt Very Well.

"Good-bye," he said to John, shaking his hand, "and take care of yourself."

"Oh, don't worry about that," replied John, "I'm all right. See that you take care of yourself, Mr. Rockefeller."

Mr. Rockefeller smiled again and walked toward the train. As he started for a private car on the train he recognized the conductor standing by the steps of a car and walked up to him.

"How are you?" he said, still smiling. "I'm mighty glad to see you."

"Very well, thank you," answered Mr. Rockefeller.

Just before he stepped upon his train Mr. Rockefeller said to a friend who talked with him at his carriage door that he would probably return to Tarrytown about Easter.

"I simply came up to see how the Spring work was getting along," he said.

It was expected that Mr. Rockefeller would head for his town house when he arrived from Lakewood yesterday. His quick discovery by the reporters may have switched him to his Tarrytown residence, for everything was in readiness for him at his Fifty-fourth Street residence and the servants seemed to expect him. At his son's house, across the way, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was said to have left the city on a vacation which he announced to his Bible class last Sunday he would take. He is said to have started on a hunting trip.

The elder Rockefeller's city house connects with that of his daughter in Fifty-third Street, a narrow gate opening from his yard into hers. There is nothing secret about this entrance, for it is plainly visible from Fifty-fourth Street, and is just the sort of convenience father and daughter would desire were they living in such proximity. But the swarm of newspaper photographers seemed to fear that Mr. Rockefeller would make great effort to hide his movements. They surrounded the Prentice and Rockefeller homes, with lenses adjusted, and braved out a shower of sleet and rain all day in the hope that the start for Pocantico Hills was a false start and that Mr. Rockefeller would suddenly appear disguised to the taste of a dime novelist and make a mysterious trip from house to house.

When a batch of the shivering and coughing camera sleuths had very nearly reached their tether-end of endurance one of them volunteered to make a sortie to Sixth Avenue for provisions. He took the orders and returned with a large tin of hot coffee, a bundle of sandwiches, and cuts of pie.

ROCKEFELLER HELPS FARMER.

Gives $100 to a Man Who Lost His All in a Fire.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., April 9.—John D. Rockefeller did an act of charity on Saturday that vastly increased his popularity among his neighbors here.

William Hall, a farmer who lives a mile east of the Rockefeller place, lost a horse and a cow and several tons of hay in a fire which destroyed his barn last week. There was no insurance on the property, and Hall had no money. Mr. Rockefeller was told of Hall's loss, and found that he was a deserving and industrious man with a large family. He promptly sent Hall a check for $100 and gave him assurances of further help.

YOUNG WIDOW ACCUSED.

Insurance Company Says She Conspired to Poison Her Husband.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., April 9.—The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has charged Mrs. Annie McCarthy, a young widow of South Amboy, with conspiring to poison her husband, who died suddenly at South Amboy about a year ago. The charge is made in answer to a suit brought by the young woman to collect $2,000 life insurance which her husband carried. The widow knew that the company would set up such a claim before she started her suit to get the money, but she laughed at the idea of having poisoned her husband, and decided to compel the company to prove its charges in court.

Thomas McCarthy was a big, powerful man who was employed on the coal docks at South Amboy supervising men. His fatal illness was sudden. Last Summer Prosecutor Berdine ordered the body of McCarthy exhumed. Dr. J. A. Deghuee later reported that he had found enough white arsenic in the man's organs to kill him. The Grand Jury examined witnesses, but could not get any evidence to connect any one with the poisoning of McCarthy, and upon the discharge of the jury it recommended that the investigation be continued by the next Grand Jury.

Between these two Grand Jury inquiries Mrs. McCarthy's suit against the insurance company is to come to trial.

KID GLOVE WORKERS BARRED.

Kansas Farmers Don't Want the White Waistcoat Kind as Harvesters.

Special to The New York Times.

TOPEKA, Kan., April 9.—Stafford County wheat farmers to-day appealed to the State Employment Bureau for 2,500 harvesters from other States. They estimate that the county will harvest 8,000,000 bushels of wheat this year.

They say they want real laborers who are not afraid to work. College students in white waistcoats and kid gloves need not apply.

ROOSEVELT INDORSES BAILEY'S AMENDMENT

But Will Still Try to Have His Own Proposal Adopted.

CULBERSON FIGHTS BAILEY

Morgan Comes Out Against the Rate Bill—McLaurin Injects Politics Into the Debate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—President Roosevelt has indorsed the Bailey amendment to the Rate bill, which would prevent suspension by the courts, pending litigation of rates made by the Inter-State Commerce Commission. Senator Culberson is now the chief obstacle to its acceptance and to an agreement among Republican and Democratic supporters of the Administration.

Word was brought to Mr. Bailey to-day by a leading Democratic Senator who had been to the White House that the amendment was satisfactory to the President. Mr. Roosevelt gave this Senator full permission to make this announcement in any way he chose.

At the same time Mr. Roosevelt will not do anything to insure the acceptance of the amendment by his Republican supporters. So far as the latter have any information the President still stands by the Long amendment. The conclusion reached by most of those who have talked over this situation is that Mr. Roosevelt would be satisfied with either the Long or the Bailey amendment.

The Bailey amendment would stand a good chance were it not for Senator Culberson. That gentleman has turned away several Democratic Senators who but for his opposition would have swarmed to the Bailey proposition. Culberson's jealousy of Bailey is notorious, but this is the first time it has had any particular effect on legislation. Texas is too small for both of these men. Bailey at first made overtures to Culberson, but they were never accepted, and Bailey has ceased to make them.

Wise Senators have been watching the movements of Senator Aldrich all through the pending debate. Numerous conferences which he has had of late with Democratic Senators have aroused no little curiosity. To-day Democratic Senators awakened to the belief that he had a better idea of what they believed individually and collectively than any one of themselves.

Senator Bailey will to-morrow make his long-expected speech on the constitutionality of his amendment and the question whether there is such a thing as judicial power distinguished from jurisdiction.

A curious scene was witnessed in the Senate to-day. Mr. Morgan, who, though nominally a Democrat, makes up his mind on every question in accordance with his own State's rights principles, spoke against the Rate bill. It was an old-fashioned State's right argument, in favor of leaving such questions to the States. Mr. Knox and the other Senators of the group who are opposed to the President's policy sat around him with upturned faces, drinking in his words.

Mr. Morgan said he was opposed to the bill because it created a National commission that would be under the control of the railroads.

"In the end," he said, "the United States will own all the railroads," a condition which he did not like to contemplate. "The demand for the control of the railroads is a sudden growth," he continued, "and is due to the enormous increase of commerce. But it must be remembered that much of the business is done by the State railroads, and the rights of the States must be respected."

He spoke of the dangers of the management of the railroad systems of the United States by fifty magnates, and predicted "a cyclone of Socialism with consequent wreckage of values as the result of their unbridled control of this great power." He believed the States could control the roads single-handed, but if aid from the National Government was necessary it could be granted by a few simple enactments.

Senator McLaurin of Mississippi also spoke to-day. He announced himself in full sympathy with both the leading propositions of the Bailey amendment—that for a full court review and for a prohibition of temporary injunctions. The latter part of the speech was devoted to a discussion of the political aspects of the question.

"We frequently hear from Republicans and read in Republican newspapers," he said, "of the non-partisanness—if I may coin a word—of this measure. But these Republicans and Republican newspapers in discussing it speak of it as the President's policy—as if the President was the Columbus of it."

He declared the Long amendment was similar to the Bailey amendment, which was put out first, but the Democrats are now invited to go over and help carry out the President's policy.

"If this is non-political legislation," he continued, "what good reason can be given for ignoring the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas? It is far more explicit and better adapted to do justice and reach the just end sought to be attained. This is not a policy discovered and copyrighted or patented by the President. It is a policy proclaimed and advocated by the Democratic Party long since, and opposed by the President and Republican Party until less than a year and a half ago, when the President seems to have first seen its beneficence."

SAYS NEGRO RACE IS DYING.

Medical Expert Tells President Deaths Here Exceed the Births.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Dr. Seale Harris, Professor of Medicine in the University of Alabama, at Mobile, talked to the President to-day about the ravages of consumption among the negroes of the South.

He said it was the opinion of medical men generally in the South that the negro race was likely to become extinct in this country through the ravages of disease, especially consumption. Statistics showed, he declared, that the death rate among the members of the race in America was greater than the birth rate.

JAMES A. BAILEY VERY ILL.

Circus Proprietor Suffering from Acute Erysipelas.

James A. Bailey of the Barnum & Bailey Circus is seriously ill at his home, The Knolls, in Mount Vernon. He is suffering from an acute attack of erysipelas, induced by overwork and exposure during the installation of the circus in Madison Square Garden. Last evening his condition showed a decided improvement.

The first symptoms of Mr. Bailey's illness developed a day or two after the arrival of the circus, but he continued to personally attend to the preparations for the big show until after the opening. Then he yielded to necessity and placed himself under the direction of Drs. Janeway, Delafield, Harper, and Henson. For several days he was unable to leave his bed, and on Sunday his condition caused serious alarm.

The news that Mr. Bailey's condition showed improvement last night was a great relief to the members of his staff, to whom Mr. Bailey is more of a friend than an employer.

RUSSIAN LOAN $460,000,000.

Big Sum Will Not Be Sufficient for the Government's Needs.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 9.—I hear that a ukase will be published explaining the destination of all moneys to be borrowed. The total loan will be £92,000,000 ($460,000,000) at 5 per cent. issued bankers at 85, France taking £50,000,000, London, Amsterdam, and New York each £4,000,000, and Russian banks £30,000,000, the amount originally assigned to Berlin.

The Government will obtain a little over £80,000,000. Of this, £25,000,000 will be required to pay the recent issue of short bonds, while the remaining £55,000,000 will not suffice to cover the expenses of the war, famine relief, and deficit in the budget.

The Opposition organs continue to complain against the conclusion of a foreign loan before the Douma meets. They are afraid that the Government, having obtained a large sum of money, will try to terrorize the Douma, just as it terrorized the elections, but the money to be borrowed now will barely suffice to pay the most pressing debts, and will leave no surplus in the Government's hands, and consequently will not encourage any inclination to browbeat the Douma, more especially in view of the sweeping victory of the Opposition.

A prominent financier said that unless the loan was procured within a month, the Government would be unable to meet its payments. The persistent drain of gold, the difficulty of collecting revenue, and other adverse conditions resulting from the sins of the Government have brought the country to the very verge of bankruptcy.

FREE PASS BILL VETOED.

Gov. Warfield Says He Is Willing to Pay His Fare.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 9.—Gov. Warfield does not approve of free passes for State officials on the railroads. The Legislature just adjourned made it hot for the railroads throughout the session, concluding its war upon those corporations by passing a two-cent-a-mile rate bill and a measure to compel the railroads to furnish free transportation to all State officials, including members of the Legislature.

To-day the Governor vetoed both these bills, and in explaining his disapproval of the free pass bill said:

"I veto this bill because I don't think the railroads should haul me or any other State official free. I have no favors to ask of corporations, and I am willing to pay my fare."

NO LIMIT ON FRANKING.

All Sorts of Printed Matter May Be Sent by Congressmen.

Special to The New York Times.

SALT LAKE, April 9.—That there is no law governing the character of printed matter which a Congressman may authorize to be sent through the mails under his official frank is the gist of a decision rendered to-day by Judge John A. Marshall of the United States District Court.

L. R. Anderson, Chairman of the Republican Committee of Sanpete County, Utah, was indicted for alleged illegal use of the frank of Congressman James A. Tawney of Minnesota. Anderson used the Congressional frank for distribution in Utah of political matter in no way related to the proceedings of Congress. A speech by President Roosevelt on irrigation was included in the matter.

Judge Marshall dismisses the charge against Anderson.

ASSEMBLYMAN INDICTED.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, April 9.—Albert P. Beebe, Assemblyman from Monroe, Fourth District, was indicted by the Grand Jury this afternoon on the charge of violating Subdivision 1, Section 41, of the Penal Code in giving money to a voter at the last State election. The penalty upon conviction is not more than five years in prison and not less than one year.

The indictment charges that Assemblyman Beebe, in the Town of Parma, in November last, bought the vote of Monroe Palmer for $2. Assemblyman Beebe at his own request was permitted to appear before the Grand Jury and make a statement. Later a bench warrant was served on him. He was released on $500 bail.

NEW CARFARE BILL.

Senator Quinn's Measure Provides Transfers to All Lines.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 9.—Senator Quinn to-night introduced a bill providing for a five-cent continuous fare in one direction in the City of New York and a transfer from any of the existing lines to lines running transversely, whether subway, elevated, or surface. The bill was advanced to third reading.

"I desire to say that this bill was prepared under the direction of the Tammany Hall organization and is introduced by me at the request of that organization," said Mr. Quinn in introducing the measure. "This is by no means all the relief to which the Democratic organization believes the people to be entitled, but it is at least a step in the right direction."

FALLS FROM AEROPLANE INTO SURF AT FLORIDA

AUTOS RAISED AIR CRAFT

But Strain of the Ropes Shattered the Light Framework—Rescuers' Quick Work.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC BEACH, Fla., April 9.—As a curtain raiser to the automobile tournament which begins on the beach here to-morrow Charles K. Hamilton of New York, who navigated an aeroplane over the North River last Summer, to-day made a flight on the beach with the improved Ludlow aeroplane.

Hamilton completed the construction of the airship at 5 o'clock, and ten minutes later the huge structure was attached to two powerful automobiles with 500 feet of rope. When all was ready the word "Go" was given, and the automobiles at once went off with a rush.

The daring navigator was soon 100 feet in the air, and continued to rise as the towing machines increased their speed until he was 200 feet high. Then a crashing sound was heard and the airship collapsed, the frame having given way under the strain of the ropes.

It seemed at first as though Hamilton would fall fifty feet out at sea. The wind was strong, however, and it blew inlond and carried the falling wreckage within a few yards of the shore line.

Hamilton was falling head down as the ship had turned over in its rapid descent. Within fifty feet of the water it turned again, and Hamilton landed on his feet in the surf. The bamboo structure of the airship broke his fall. Rescuers were at his side in a moment, and he was carried out of the surf. It was found that except for a slight cut on his nose from a wire he was practically unhurt. He declared that he would repair his airship and go up again on Wednesday.

Charles Hamilton is 20 years old. He made some flights last year from Trenton, N. J., and other places in the Baldwin airship, called the California Arrow. Last February he took the Arrow to Ormond Beach, Florida, and attempted a series of experiments, first being towed a certain distance by an automobile, endeavoring in that way to attain sufficient momentum to make a high ascent and long flight. After the first or second trial, he fell to the sand, but was not hurt seriously.

Last Fall he assisted Israel Ludlow in the latter's flight over the Hudson River, in which Ludlow's airship obtained momentum by being towed by a tugboat. Hamilton had made arrangements to assist Ludlow in some flights in Florida this week.

HAS MUCK RAKE SPEECH ALSO.

Longworth Denounces the Fashion of Assailing Public Men.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Congressman Nicholas Longworth was the guest of honor at a dinner given to-night in the Auditorium Hotel by the Hamilton Club, in celebration of the forty-first anniversary of Appomattox Day, and made a speech which was considered as a forerunner of the "muck rake" oration that his father-in-law, the President, is to make on Saturday.

"I want to say with reference to politics and the present situation in general," said Mr. Longworth, "that it seems to be the fashion nowadays to assail all our public men, to belittle their character, and to impugn their motives. If you believe all you read and hear, you might well reach the conclusion that there is not a man to-day in public life whose motives are free from suspicion. You might well believe that politics means graft, and that graft means politics. If you don't happen to agree with the views of the political man to-day you assail his motives and you insinuate that there are corrupting motives behind him.

"It seems to me that the fashion of assailing public men is amounting almost to hysteria. If the government of our cities, of our States, is shameful; if our Judges are corrupt, if the United States Senators are traitors, what hope is there for this country? How is it to continue to grow and prosper?"

SHERMAN TO RUN CAMPAIGN.

New York Member Heads Republican Congressional Committee.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Representative James S. Sherman of New York was to-night elected Chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, which will have charge of the coming Republican Congressional campaign. Representative James A. Tawney of Minnesota was elected Vice Chairman; Representative Henry C. Loudenslager of New Jersey, Secretary, and Representative William B. McKinley of Illinois, Treasurer.

The Chairman was authorized to name the Executive Committee and to fill vacancies on the Congressional Committee. The changes in officers were made at a dinner given to-night by Chairman Babcock and other retiring officers to the new committee.

RAILROAD GETS CANAL STRIP.

Buffalo Aldermen Authorize Its Sale Over Mayor's Veto.

BUFFALO, April 9.—Mayor Adam this afternoon provisionally vetoed the sale of the Hamburg Canal strip to Lee, Higginson & Co. of Boston on their bid of $901,000. The Mayor recommended that further consideration be given certain features of the resolution, the principal one being the contention that the city cannot give a clear title to the entire strip owing to the Lake Shore Road having acquired a right of way across it. The Board of Aldermen later tabled the veto, and then reaffirmed the sale by a vote of 21 to 4.

While the actual names of the bidders for the property have not been made known, it was authoritatively announced that the strip was wanted by a railroad company on which to build a passenger and freight station, the former to front on Main Street.

Steamer Dewey Disabled at Sea.

NEWPORT, R. I., April 9.—A wireless message from the Nantucket South Shoals lightship was received at the naval torpedo station to-day, stating that the steamer Admiral Dewey of the United Fruit Company's line had signaled the lightship as follows: "Starboard high-pressure piston broke. Proceeding to Boston." The Admiral Dewey sailed from Boston March 29 for Port Antonio, Jamaica.

STAYS ON VESUVIUS.

Matteucci, Still at His Post, Reports on Eruption.

ROME, April 9.—Prof. Matteucci, Superintendent of the Mount Vesuvius Observatory, telegraphed from the observatory at 6:30 o'clock this evening as follows:

"The explosive activity of Vesuvius, which was very great yesterday and accompanied by very powerful electric discharges, has diminished. Yesterday evening and during the night the expulsion of rock ceased, but the emission of sand increased, completely enveloping me and forming a bed over ten centimeters deep, which carried desolation into this elevated region.

"Masses of sand gliding along the earth created complete darkness until 7 o'clock. Several blocks of stone broke windows in the observatory. Last night earthquake shocks were stronger and more frequent than yesterday, and displaced the seismic apparatus.

"Yesterday afternoon and this morning torrents of sand fell. While I am telegraphing several balls of fire rise without rumbling from the enlarged crater and the new elevated crevasses."

WENT 96 MILES AN HOUR.

Central's 20th Century Limited Makes 108 Miles in 99 Minutes.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, April 9.—It was given out to-day at the Lake Shore general offices that the New York Central Twentieth Century Limited ran at a rate of ninety-six miles an hour part of the way from here to Toledo last night.

From here to Elyria the train was speeded up to eighty miles an hour, and when the train struck Vermillion it whirled through so fast that the lights made a blur. The indicator was showing ninety-six miles an hour, and top speed had not been reached.

It was necessary to slow down a little for some railroad yards, and the next stretch showed ninety-one miles an hour, then eighty-two, and then eighty, as the settlements became thicker and the yards more troublesome. The train pulled into Toledo, having covered the 108 miles in 99 minutes.

SENATE PASSES RACING BILL.

It Gives More of Track Receipts to Agricultural Societies.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 9.—The Coggeshall bill, providing for an extra allowance from the race tracks to the agricultural societies of the State, which was the price The Jockey Club paid for having killed the Cassidy bill to prevent pool selling on the tracks, passed the Senate to-night.

It provides that instead of the 5 per cent. of the gross receipts which the race tracks now pay to the State they shall in future pay 6¼ per cent. in 1906 and 1907, 7 per cent. in 1908, and 7½ per cent. thereafter. This will give the country fairs about $60,000 more a year on the average.

MISS EVA BOOTH ILL.

Commander of the Salvation Army Said to Have Tonsilitis.

Miss Eva Booth, Commander of the Salvation Army in the United States, left this city Sunday night for Detroit, where she was to have delivered a dedication address last evening at a new Salvation Army building.

Between the Grand Central Station and Mount Vernon Miss Booth contracted a sore throat, and she decided to postpone the trip. She sent her first secretary to Detroit to make the speech and then got off the train and went to the home of G. Reinhardsen at 29 North Terrace Avenue, Mount Vernon. Dr. George C. Weiss said she had an attack of tonsilitis from which she would recover in a few days. Miss Booth is at the Reinhardsen home.

SMUGGLERS ON WARSHIP?

$750,000 in Contraband Said to Have Been Taken Off the Oregon.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 9.—The Evening Post publishes a story to-day to the effect that there is a strong belief that dutiable goods valued at $750,000 were smuggled ashore in launches from the battleship Oregon, just before she departed for the Bremerton Navy Yard.

The Post says that an order has been issued to the Inspectors at Bremerton to delay every man on the battleship until the whole matter has been sifted to the bottom. The customs authorities throughout the country have been notified to find and examine the questionable packages if possible.

The battleship was scheduled to get away for Bremerton on Saturday morning, but was delayed on account of not having received sailing orders.

The Post says the record of the Wells-Fargo Company shows that they gave receipts on 2,890 packages taken from the Oregon. The Santa Fé Railway gave shipping bills for 1,600 trunks and cases, many of which weighed several hundred pounds. Acting Inspector Hamilton said an investigation was being made, but as yet nothing definite has been established.

NEW TUBERCULOSIS CURE.

Japanese Bacteriologist Announces Success with Antitoxin.

LONDON, April 10.—A dispatch from Tokio to The Daily Telegraph says that at a meeting of the medical societies of Japan Dr. Ishigami, an eminent bacteriologist, announced the result of a year's experiments with an antitoxin against tuberculosis which he had discovered, and which, he said, unlike other antitoxins did not result in a rise in the patient's temperature.

Dr. Ishigami asserted that the antitoxin had resulted in cures on an average of one-third of the patients experimented upon. The treatment, however, he said, is not applicable in advanced cases.

FLEEING DESERTER KILLED.

He Was Making His Third Attempt to Escape When Guard Shot Him.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 9.—Lewis Persell, a military prisoner at Fort McPherson, was shot and killed to-day while making his third attempt to escape. He was driving an army team, and lashed his mules into a run in the endeavor to escape. Guard Lawrence Ludlam, who had Persell in charge, called to him to stop, and fired when the third command was not obeyed.

Persell, whose home was at Washington, Tenn., enlisted with the Thirteenth Cavalry at Knoxville last September as a private. He deserted at Fort Riley last December and surrendered at Birmingham, Ala. While being brought to Fort McPherson to await trial, he made a second successful attempt at escape by jumping from a train. He was recaptured and brought to Fort McPherson.

VOLCANO VICTIMS MAY NUMBER 500

200 Dead in San Giuseppe District Alone.

CHURCHES CRUSH PEOPLE

Weight of Ashes on Roofs Destroys Structures.

ITALY'S KING IN PERIL

His Auto Nearly Overwhelmed by Cinders — 150,000 Refugees —Lava Streams Cooling.

NAPLES, April 9.—Reports of fatalities consequent upon the eruption of Mount Vesuvius are coming in. According to information received late to-night, probably 500 lives were lost. More than 200 perished in the District of San Giuseppe, while from the ruins of a church which collapsed, owing to the weight of ashes on the roof, forty-nine bodies were extricated. It is asserted that at San Giuseppe thirty-seven persons were killed by falling houses.

The streams of lava are almost stationary. Troops are erecting barriers in the direction of Pompeii, to prevent further danger in that quarter.

King Victor Emmanuel is now in the heart of the devastated district. He exposed himself to serious peril in visiting the sufferers in various villages. It was feared for a time this afternoon that the automobile in which he was riding had been overwhelmed by ashes borne by a heavy windstorm, but the King came through the adventure unscathed.

At midnight the situation appears more assuring, the lava streams having diminished in volume and in some directions having stopped altogether, while a copious rainfall is cooling the fiery torrents.

Almost equally with the devastation wrought by the lava is the damage done by cinders and ashes, which in incredible quantities have been carried great distances. They have caused the practical destruction of San Giuseppe, a village of 6,000 inhabitants.

All except 200 of the people had fled from the village, and these assembled in a church to attend mass. While the priest was performing his office the roof fell in and about sixty persons were badly injured. These unfortunates were for hours without surgical or medical assistance. The only thing left standing in the church was a statue of St. Anne, the preservation of which the poor, homeless people accepted as a miracle and promise of deliverance from their peril.

At Ottojano, with a population of 4,160, five churches and ten houses fell under the weight of ashes and cinders, which lie four feet deep on the ground. In the fall of the buildings about twelve persons were killed and many were more or less severely injured. The village is completely deserted by its people. After the evacuation of the place the barracks and prisons fell in.

Cavalry proceeding to the succor of the inhabitants of the devastated section have been unable to make progress, the rain, falling on the ashes a foot deep, having made it impossible for the horses to travel.

The sea is greatly agitated. The sky has cleared, but heavy clouds hang over the east, threatening a further downpour.

Reorts from coast and inland towns depict terrible devastation. San Giorgio, Cremona, Portici, Resina, and Torre del Greco have been almost completely abandoned.

Sommia Vesuvian is another village which has suffered most severely.

CRUSHED UNDER THEIR HOMES.

Most of the buildings in the villages are of flimsy construction and have flat roofs, and so are but poorly designed to bear the weight of ashes and cinders that have fallen upon them. Inevitably it will be found that a considerable number of people have perished by the falling of their homes.

Although the eruption is less violent than it was twenty-four hours ago, the ashes are still falling in great quantities.

The high cone of the volcano has gone almost entirely, having been swallowed up, so that the height of the mountain is nearly 600 feet less than formerly. On the north side of the mountain new craters have been formed.

Refugees from the threatened or destroyed villages are pouring into Naples by the thousands, arriving in every description of conveyance and on foot. The roads are crowded with processions of men and women carrying crosses and crying piteously.

Special railway trains, warships, and steamboats are employed in conveying the homeless people from their localities to Naples, Rome, and Castellamare, while large numbers of people are fleeing overland in the direction of Caserta. Not less than 15,000 refugees have reached Castellamare, where the steamer Princess Mafalda is anchored. That vessel left the Island of Capri with 1,000 passengers, including many foreigners, on board, but she was unable to reach her destination owing to the stifling clouds of ashes and the fumes of gases from the volcano which enveloped her a mile from the coast.

The King and Queen Helena have further endeared themselves to the people by their activity in behalf of sufferers by the eruption, and the Government is exerting itself for the relief of the destitute. This work, however, is obstructed by the congestion of all means of transportation, which are monopolized in the carrying of passengers out of the scene of danger.

KING SOUGHT PERIL.

The King and Queen and their suites arrived at Naples this morning from Rome. When the royal train reached the station the eruption of the volcano was almost at its worst, but both the King and Queen insisted upon leaving immediately for Torre dell' Annunziata, his Majesty declaring:

"If Torre dell' Annunziata is in danger, it is my duty to be there."

Traveling in automobiles, the King and Queen, the Duke and Duchess of Aosta, and the Princess of Schleswig-Holstein, who is a guest of the Duchess, set out without delay for the afflicted districts. The royal party was received with cheers and weeping, expressions of thanks, and frantic gesticulations of joy. By the King's order there was no attempt to keep the people away from him. Women kissed the King's hand and the Queen's gown, exclaiming, "God sent you to us!"

"If thou art our King, order the volcano to stop."

The sovereigns visited Santa Anastasia, Cercola, and Somma Vesuviana, where they were greeted with great enthusiasm. It was on this trip that the royal party was struck by a small cyclone carrying ashes and cinders, which partly blinded, choked and stopped them. As the King's motor car was the first and was some distance ahead of the car in which the members of his suite were riding, it was lost sight of for some time in the clouds of whirling ashes, and considerable anxiety was felt for his Majesty's safety.

It was found, however, that the King had ordered his automobile to be driven at full speed ahead, and had crossed the path of the cyclone with great rapidity.

A short distance further on the ashes were four feet deep, making it impossible for the party to continue their route in the motor cars. Consequently the King and his suite descended and continued their way on foot.

Later in the afternoon the royal party returned to Naples and visited the temporary lodging places prepared for the fugitives from the Vesuvian towns and villages.

LAVA CHANGED DIRECTION.

The conditions at Torre dell' Annunziata and Pompeii improved to-day, owing to the change in the direction taken by the lava.

Fear was felt early in the day for the people in the vicinity of Caserta, a place of about 35,000 inhabitants, as the lava was then flowing in that direction.

Nola, an old place of 15,000 inhabitants twenty-two miles from Naples, has suffered severely by the fall of ashes coming from the crater, which were carried by the wind as far as the Adriatic Sea.

About 150,000 refugees from the district of Somma Vesuviana have sought shelter here and elsewhere. Four thousand persons are lodged in the Granile Barracks, this city.

The stream of lava which had been threatening Torre dell' Annunziata has remained stationary since Sunday evening, so that the danger that the place would be overwhelmed appears to have passed.

When the last train was leaving Bosco Trecase yesterday a fresh crater opened near the observatory station.

The quantity of ashes and cinders thrown up by Mount Vesuvius yesterday was unprecedented. An analysis showed this discharge to be chiefly composed of iron, sulphur, and magnesia. When dry the whole region seemed to be under a gray sheet, but now, after a fall of rain, it has taken on the appearance of an immense lake of chocolate colored mud.

Some of the parish priests refused to open their churches to people who tried to obtain admittance, fearing that an earthquake would destroy the buildings when full of people and thus increase the list of disasters. Crowds of women thereupon attacked the churches, pulled down the doors and took possession of the pictures and statues of the saints, which they carried about as a protection against death.

Many people camped along the roads and in the fields outside of Torre dell' Annunziata and Ottajano, where they thought they would be safer than in the towns, defying the elements though nearly blinded by ashes and wet to the skin.

Only about 2,000 out of 32,000 inhabitants of Torre dell' Annunziata dared to remain in the town, which was patrolled by troops.

All the railway trains were delayed today owing to the tracks being covered with cinders, and telegraphic communication with all points was badly congested.

The Minister of Finance has suspended the collection of taxes in the disturbed provinces. The military authorities are distributing rations, and have placed huts and tents at the disposition of the homeless.

Prof. Di Lorenzo, the celebrated scientist and specialist in the study of volvanoes, estimated that the smoke from Vesuvius has reached the height of 25,000 feet.

The statement is made here that in the vicinity of Ottojano cinders and ashes from the volcano lie to a depth of 150 feet.

TORRE DELL' ANNUNZIATA, April 9.—A rumor was started to-day to the effect that the visit of the King and Queen of Italy and the Duke of Aosta would result in a miracle. Singularly enough, shortly after the arrival of the sovereigns, and while the King and Queen were trying to console the people, repeating frequently "Courage! Be strong!" the wind suddenly changed and the atmosphere, which up to that moment had been impregnated with sulphurous gas and suffocating fumes, cleared away, the sun burst forth, and the stream of lava stopped its march, after having destroyed a section of the northeast part of the suburb and the adjacent cemetery.

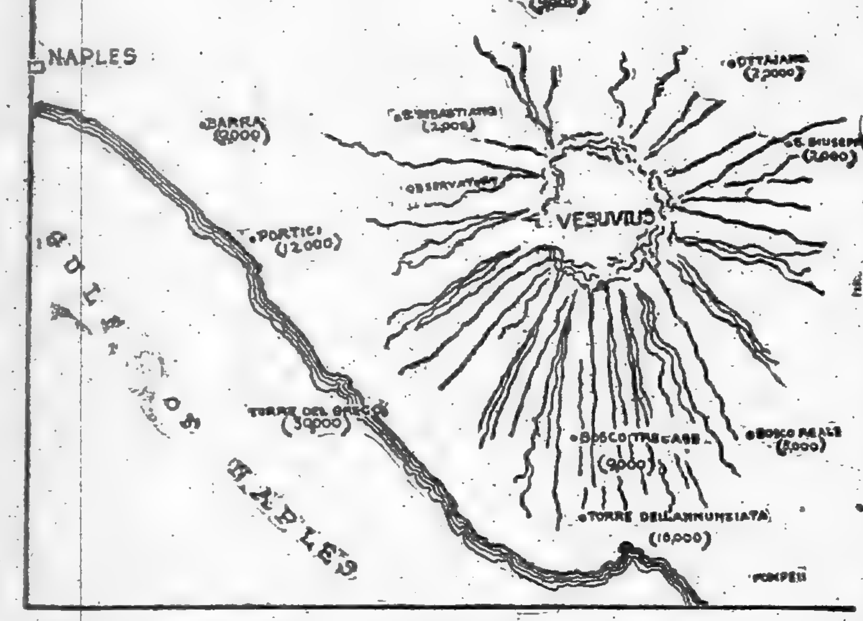
The air immediately rang with benedictions for the King and Queen. Hope at once returned and their Majesties were preparing to continue their journey, but the people insisted that they remain, begging the sovereigns not to abandon them. The King and his party wished to visit other villages which had suffered from the eruption, but the railway was interrupted and their Majesties were forced to return to Naples, whence later they went to Ottojana and Torre del Greco.

ROME, April 9.—The Giornale d'Italia this afternoon published a dispatch from Naples giving an interview with Lieut. Ciarrocchi, commanding a detachment of troops, who witnessed the destruction of Bosco Trecase as a result of the eruption of Mount Vesuvius. The Lieutenant is quoted as follows:

"All was quiet in the town just before its destruction, the people believing that they were safe from the stream of lava. But after midnight terrific rumblings were heard, followed by violent earth shocks, which shattered the windows and cracked the walls. The lava then began flowing from Mount Ciramella, near where a fresh fissure opened a few days ago. A wild panic ensued. The Ciramella crater by that time was hurling forth masses of incandscent rock and a current of fire was sweeping down the mountain with terrific speed, flowing in two streams. One of them, 200 yards broad, was moving toward the centre of the town. The population fled in terror to Torre dell' Annunziata, while the soldiers visited the houses in order to see that all the inhabitants escaped. In so doing they rescued several bed ridden old people who had been left behind by their terrified relatives.

"The town was hardly evacuated when a river of fire invaded the houses, and soon afterward Bosco Trecase seemed to be enveloped in flames. After passing Bosco Trecase the two streams of lava joined and flowed toward Torre dell' Annunziata."

VESUVIUS AND TOWNS IN PERIL.



Almost all the towns shown on the above map have either been destroyed or are threatened with destruction by the lava and ashes from Vesuvius. The most important town so far destroyed is Bosco Trecase, a place of 9,000 inhabitants, from which the ascent of Vesuvius on the south side was usually begun.

San Giuseppe, a station on the branch railway from Caserta to Castellamare, has also been practically destroyed, but while Bosco Trecase was overwhelmed by lava, San Giuseppe was destroyed by ashes and cinders.

Torre dell' Annunziata, a prosperous town of 16,000 inhabitants, with a small harbor, is in imminent peril of destruction and has been evacuated by the people.

Bosco Reale, two and one-half miles north of Pompeii, is also in grave danger, and has already been badly damaged by lava.

Ottojano has been abandoned. Five churches and ten residences are known to have been destroyed there.

At Portici, which has been almost entirely evacuated, there is a small harbor formed by a mole. From this place one of the most beautiful views on the Bay of Naples could be obtained.

Nearly all the inhabitants of Torre del Greco have also fled to Naples. It had several good hotels and has been a favorite place for foreigners in the Winter and during the sea-bathing season for Italians. It stands on a lava stream which destroyed two-thirds of the older towns in 1631.

PERRET ESCAPES THE LAVA.

Observer on Mount Vesuvius Cables to His Brooklyn Home.

Mrs. Charles Perret of 428 East Twenty-first Street, Brooklyn, was greatly relieved early last evening when she received a cable message from her son, Frank Alvord Perret, assistant director of the Royal Observatory on Mount Vesuvius, saying that he was safe. The press dispatches telling of the destruction of the observatory had caused Mrs. Perret great anxiety, as she feared her son might have been cut off from escape by the lava streams. The cablegram from him was sent from Naples, indicating that he had reached that city. It read: "Safe. In no danger."

Mr. Perret is about thirty-five years old and is an electrical engineer. About eighteen months ago he went to Naples for the benefit of his health, and while there made the acquaintance of Dr. Matteucci, the director of the Royal Observatory. Mr. Perret took an interest in Dr. Matteucci's work and became an assistant to him. His duties at the observatory had chiefly to do with the care of the many delicate instruments used in making the observations. Mr. Perret, since he became one of Dr. Matteucci's staff, has written many articles for magazines and other publications on the subject of Mount Vesuvius.

ITALY'S FEARLESS KING.

Victor Emmanuel Has Often Gone to Aid His People.

His visit to the dangerous zone around Mount Vesuvius was not the first on which King Victor Emmanuel of Italy had exhibited his fearlessness and solicitude in coming to the aid of his people.

In September, 1905, after Calabria had been shaken by an earthquake, his Majesty first subscribed $20,000 for the relief of the families of the earthquake victims and then hurried by special train to the scene of the disaster. He was met by his Minister of Public Works, Ferraris, and the two journeyed through Monteleone, San Onfrio, Zammaro, and other villages, traveling by automobile and being gratefully welcomed by the populace.

Despite the danger of falling walls, his Majesty visited the ruins resulting from the earthquake, even going into a fissure from which a child had been taken alive after she had been there ninety-eight hours. The King wished to see for himself that no live person had been neglected by his soldiers.

All along the line he stopped and left his automobile to cheer crowds of weeping women and children who knelt by the roadside imploring succor. He questioned his people, gave them words of comfort, and, after inspecting their houses, ordered his military engineers to proceed with the utmost possible celerity in the construction of temporary quarters. He passed several nights on board of the train to see that provisions were distributed.

On another occasion during an epidemic in Southern Italy the King journeyed right into the heart of the stricken district to comfort his people and bring them relief. He did the same thing during a great flood in Italy, proving himself to be the most democratic sovereign in all of Europe.

He has an immense capacity for work, and is devoted to outdoor sports. In private life he is simple and unostentatious. In the morning, Summer or Winter, he rises at 6:30 o'clock, and after a cold bath has a cup of coffee and a roll. For this meal he dispenses with his servants, the Queen pouring his coffee. Two hours every morning and two hours every evening are devoted to State affairs. Thursday and Sunday mornings are entirely devoted to the affairs of his country. His chief amusement is motoring, which has led him to all sorts of trying places.

FAMOUS OLD VILLAS IN PERIL.

It Was from Bosco Reale That the Frescoes Now in New York Came.

The news that Bosco Reale, which is a place with about 5,000 inhabitants, two and one-half miles to the north of Pompeii, is threatened with destruction by the lava and ashes from Vesuvius has drawn renewed attention to the extraordinary Roman villas which exist there and which have provided some of the most beautiful specimens of Roman art hitherto discovered.

It was from Bosco Reale that the Bosco Reale frescoes now in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in this city came. The villa from which they were taken was discovered in 1900 by Signor de Prisco of Bosco Reale. In the villa were seventy frescoes, dating from the late republican era, which were detached with the greatest care from the walls and later were sold.

Another villa was uncovered in Bosco Reale in 1894-5. This villa is also on the land belonging to Signor de Prisco, who is a relative of the Archbishop of Naples, Cardinal Prisco. The remains of this villa, which are shown to visitors only by special permission, consist chiefly of the domestic offices. There are a wine press and an oil press, and a large court with capacious earthenware vessels (dolia) sunk in the floor to receive the wine conducted to them direct from the wine press.

It was in this villa that the "Treasure of Bosco Reale," now in the Louvre at Paris, consisting of ninety-four vessels of Alexandrian Greek and Roman workmanship of the first century, was found in 1895. Other objects from the villa are in a museum at Pompeii. They include a handmill, an olive press, and a bath with heading apparatus.

LITTLE ITALY MOURNS.

Funds to be Raised in New York for Relief of Volcano Victims.

"Little Italy," in Harlem, was greatly excited last night over the latest reports of the devastation wrought by the activity of Mount Vesuvius. Flags were displayed at half mast, many houses were draped in mourning, while impromptu meetings, at which the disaster was the subject of eager discussion, were held in the saloons and shops of the neighborhood.

The collection of several relief funds will be begun in the next twenty-four hours, and meetings are being arranged under the direction of several benevolent organizations.

Father Dolan, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, in East 115th Street, said that after the recent earthquake in Italy the church raised and sent $300 on short notice for the relief of the sufferers, and it is expected that a good sized fund will be raised in a couple of days.

Dr. D. Diborio, President of the Mount Carmel Benevolent Association, said that he would call a meeting in a day or two, and that another fund would be raised outside the church.

The Italian Benevolent Society of 411 East 114th Street, which has a thousand members and of which Vito Compessa is President, has called a meeting for Saturday night.

Italians by the score flocked yesterday to the Italian Settlement House, at 29 Front Street, Brooklyn, beseeching Supt. W. E. Davenport to give them information about the eruption.

"Many of the Italian immigrants here," said Mr. Davenport, "come from the towns and villages around Mount Vesuvius. About two years ago I visited Bosco Trecase, which is said to have been wiped out by the lava. It was the highest town on the southern slope of Vesuvius, and, being built on a ridge, was thought to be safe from streams of lava in case of an eruption, no matter what happened to neighboring villages. The inhabitants believed that the lava would flow past them in the valleys on either side. The fact that this was the first of the towns to be destroyed cannot fail to make a deep impression upon the inhabitants of the other towns and increase their fears."

The Younger Pliny's Account of the First Great Eruption.

DARKNESS; RAIN OF ASHES

Poisonous Vapor Which Killed the Elder Pliny—Description of the Panic-stricken People's Flight.

The most graphic account in existence of the first recorded eruption of Vesuvius, on Aug. 24, A. D. 79, is contained in two letters written by the younger Pliny to his friend the historian Tacitus.

Caius Plinius Caecilius Secundus was only 18 years old when the terrible eruption, which destroyed the cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum, occurred, but that his powers of observation were well trained at that age is evident from the two letters. The younger Pliny was adopted by his uncle, Caius Plinius Secundus, known as the elder Pliny, author of the celebrated "Natural History," who perished as a result of the eruption of Vesuvius.

Pliny's letters to Tacitus follow:

LETTER 1.

Your request that I would send you an account of my uncle's death, in order to transmit a more exact relation of it to posterity, deserves my acknowledgments, for if this accident shall be celebrated by your pen the glory of it, I am well assured, will be rendered forever illustrious. And notwithstanding he perished by a misfortune which, as it involved at the same time a most beautiful country in ruins, and destroyed so many populous cities, seems to promise him an everlasting remembrance; notwithstanding he has himself composed many and lasting works; yet I am persuaded the mentioning of him in your immortal writings will greatly contribute to render his name immortal. Happy I esteem those to be to whom by provision of the gods has been granted the ability either to do such actions as are worthy of being related or to relate them in a manner worthy of being read; but peculiarly happy are they who are blessed with both these uncommon talents, in the number of which my uncle, as his own writings and your history will evidently prove, may justly be ranked.

It is with extreme willingness, therefore, that I execute your commands, and should indeed have demanded the task if you had not enjoined it. He was at that time with the fleet under his command at Misenum. On the 24th of August, about 1 in the afternoon, my mother desired him to observe a cloud which appeared of a very unusual size and shape. He had just taken a turn in the sun and, after bathing himself in cold water and making a light luncheon, gone back to his books; he immediately arose and went out upon a rising ground from whence he might get a better sight of this very uncommon appearance. A cloud, from which mountain was uncertain at this distance, (but it was found afterward to come from Mount Vesuvius,) was ascending, the appearance of which I cannot give you a more exact description of than by likening it to that of a pine tree, for it shot up to a great height in the form of a very tall trunk, which spread itself out at the top into a sort of branches, occasioned, I imagine, either by a sudden gust of air that impelled it, the force of which decreased as it advanced upward, or the cloud itself being pressed back again by its own weight, expanded in the manner I have mentioned; it appeared sometimes bright and sometimes dark and spotted, according as it was either more or less impregnated with earth and cinders.

The Elder Pliny's Heroism.

This phenomenon seemed to a man of such learning and research as my uncle extraordinary and worth further looking into. He ordered a light vessel to be got ready, and gave me leave, if I liked, to accompany him. I said I had rather go on with my work, and it so happened he had himself given me something to write out. As he was coming out of the house he received a note from Rectina, the wife of Bassus, who was in the utmost alarm at the imminent danger which threatened her, for her villa lying at the foot of Mount Vesuvius, there was no way of escape but by sea; she earnestly entreated him, therefore, to come to her assistance. He accordingly changed his first intention, and what he had begun from a philosophical he now carried out in a noble and generous spirit. He ordered the galleys to put to sea, and went himself on board with an intention of assisting not only Rectina, but the several towns which lay thickly strewn along the beautiful coast.

Hastening then to the place from whence others fled with the utmost terror, he steered his course direct to the point of danger, and with so much calmness and presence of mind as to be able to make and dictate his observations upon the motion and all the phenomena of that dreadful scene. He was now so close to the mountain that the cinders, which grew thicker and hotter the nearer he approached, fell into the ships, together with pumice stones and black pieces of burning rock; they were in danger, too, not only of being aground by the sudden retreat of the sea, but also from the vast fragments which rolled down from the mountain and obstructed all the shore.

Here he stopped to consider whether he should turn back again, to which, the pilot advising him, "fortune," said he, "favors the brave; steer to where Pomponianus is." Pomponianus was then at Stabiae, (Castelamare,) separated by a bay which the sea, after several insensible windings, forms with the shore. He had already sent his baggage on board, for though he was not at that time in actual danger, yet being within sight of it, and indeed extremely near, if it should in the least increase he was determined to put to sea as soon as the wind, which was blowing dead inshore, should go down. It was favorable, however, for carrying my uncle to Pomponianus, whom he found in the greatest consternation; he embraced him tenderly, encouraging and urging him to keep up his spirits, and, the more effectually to soothe his fears by seeming unconcerned himself, ordered a bath to be got ready, and then, after having bathed, sat down to supper with great cheerfulness, or at least, (what is just as heroic,) with every appearance of it.

Meanwhile broad flames shone out in several places from Mount Vesuvius, which the darkness of the night contributed to render still brighter and clearer. But my uncle, in order to soothe the apprehensions of his friend, assured him it was only the burning of the villages, which the country people had abandoned to the flames; after this he retired to rest, and it is most certain he was so little disquieted as to fall into a sound sleep, for his breathing, which on account of his corpulence was rather heavy and sonorous, was heard by the attendants outside. The court which led to his apartment being now almost filled with stones and ashes, if he had continued there any time longer it would have been impossible for him to have made his way out. So he was awakened and got up, and went to Pomponianus and the rest of his company, who were feeling too anxious to think of going to bed. They consulted together whether it would be most prudent to trust to the houses, which now rocked from side to side with frequent and violent concussions as though shaken from their very foundations, or fly to the open fields, where the calcined stones and cinders, though light indeed, yet fell in large showers, and threatened destruction.

Tied Pillows on Their Heads.

In this choice of dangers they resolved for the fields, a resolution which, while the rest of the company were hurried into it by their fears, my uncle embraced upon cool and deliberate consideration. They went out then, having pillows tied upon their heads with napkins, and this was their whole defense against the storm of stones that fell round them.

It was now day everywhere else, but there a deeper darkness prevailed than in the thickest night, which, however, was in some degree alleviated by torches and other lights of various kinds. They thought proper to go further down upon the shore to see if they might safely put to sea, but found the waves still running extremely high and boisterous.

There my uncle, laying himself down upon a sail cloth which was spread for him, called twice for some cold water which he drank, when immediately the flames, preceded by a strong whiff of sulphur, dispersed the rest of the party and obliged him to rise. He raised himself up with the assistance of two of his servants, and instantly fell down dead, suffocated, as I conjecture, by some gross and noxious vapor, having always had a weak throat, which was often inflamed. As soon as it was light again, which was not till the third day after this melancholy accident, his body was found entire, and without any marks of violence upon it, in the dress in which he fell, and looking more like a man asleep than dead.

During all this time my mother and I, who were at Misenum—but this has no connection with your history, and you did not desire any particulars besides those of my uncle's death, so I will end here, only adding that I have faithfully related to you what I was either a witness of myself or received the news of immediately after the accident happened, and before there was time to vary the truth. You will pick out of this narrative whatever is most important, for a letter is one thing, a history another; it is one thing writing to a friend, another writing to the public. Farewell.

The letter which, in compliance with your request, I wrote to you concerning the death of my uncle has raised, it seems, your curiosity to know what terrors and dangers attended me while I continued at Misenum, for there, I think, my account broke off.

"Though my shock'd soul recoils, my tongue shall tell."

My uncle having left us, I spent such time as was left on my studies (it was on their account indeed that I had stopped behind) till it was time for my bath. After which I went to supper, and then fell into a short and uneasy sleep.

There had been noticed for many days before a trembling of the earth, which did not alarm us much, as this is quite an ordinary occurrence in Campania, but it was so particularly violent that night that it not only shook, but actually overturned, as it would seem, everything about us. My mother rushed into my chamber, where she found me rising, in order to awaken her. We sat down in the open court of the house, which occupied a small space between the buildings and the sea. As I was at that time but 18 years of age I know not whether I should call my behavior in this dangerous juncture courage or folly; but I took up Livy, and amused myself with turning over that author, and even making extracts from him, as if I had been perfectly at my leisure. Just then a friend of my uncle, who had lately come to him from Spain, joined us, and, observing me sitting by my mother with a book in my hand, reproved her for her calmness and me at the same time for my careless security; nevertheless I went on with my author. Though it was now morning, the light was still exceedingly faint and doubtful; the buildings all around us tottered, and though we stood upon open ground, yet as the place was narrow and confined there was no remaining without imminent danger; we therefore resolved to quit the town.

Effects of the Earthquakes.

A panic-stricken crowd followed us, and, (as to a mind distracted with terror every suggestion seems more prudent than its own,) pressed on us in dense array to drive us forward as we came out. Being at a convenient distance from the houses, we stood still in the midst of a most dangerous and dreadful scene. The chariots, which we had ordered to be drawn out, were so agitated backward and forward, though upon the most level ground, that we could not keep them steady, even by supporting them with large stones. The sea seemed to roll back upon itself, and to be driven from its banks by the convulsive motion of the earth; it is certain at least the shore was considerably enlarged, and several sea animals were left upon it. On the other side a black and dreadful cloud, broken with rapid, zigzag flashes, revealed behind it variously shaped masses of flame; these last were like sheet lightning, but much larger.

Upon this our Spanish friend, whom I mentioned above, addressed himself to my mother and me with great energy and urgency: "If your brother," he said, "if your uncle be safe, he certainly wishes you may be so too; but if he perished it was his desire, no doubt, that you might both survive him; why, therefore, do you delay your escape a moment?" We could never think of our own safety, we said, while we were uncertain of his. Upon this our friend left us, and withdrew from the danger with the utmost precipitation. Soon afterward the cloud began to descend and cover the sea. It had already surrounded and concealed the Island of Capri and the promontory of Misenum.

My mother now besought, urged, even commanded me to make my escape at any rate, which, as I was young, I might easily do; as for herself, she said, her age and corpulency rendered all attempts of that sort impossible; however, she would willingly meet death if she could have the satisfaction of seeing that she was not the occasion of mine. But I absolutely refused to leave her, and, taking her by the hand, compelled her to go with me. She complied with great reluctance, and not without many reproaches to herself for retarding my flight.

The ashes now began to fall upon us, though in no great quantity. I looked back: a dense, dark mist seemed to be following us, spreading itself over the country like a cloud. "Let us turn out of the high road," I said, "while we can still see, for fear that, should we fall in the road, we should be pressed to death in the dark by the crowds that are following us." We had scarcely sat down when night came upon us, not such as we have when the sky is cloudy, or when there is no moon, but that of a room when it is shut up and all the lights put out.

The Terror of the People.

You might hear the shrieks of women, the screams of children, and the shouts of men; some calling for their children, others for their parents, others for their husbands, and seeking to recognize each other by the voices that replied; one lamenting his own fate, another that of his family; some wishing to die, from the very fear of dying; some lifting their hands to the gods, but the greater part convinced that there were now no gods at all, and that the final endless night of which we have heard had come upon the world. Among these there were some who augmented the real terrors by others imaginary or willfully invented. I remember some who declared that one part of Misenum had fallen, that another was on fire; it was false, but they found people to believe them. It now grew rather lighter, which we imagined to be rather the forerunner of an approaching burst of flames (as in truth it was) than the return of day; however, the fire fell at a distance from us; then again we were immersed in thick darkness, and a heavy shower of ashes rained upon us, which we were obliged every now and then to stand up to shake off, otherwise we should have been crushed and buried in the heap.

I might boast that during all this scene of horror not a sigh or expression of fear escaped me, had not my support been grounded in that miserable though mighty consolation that all mankind were involved in the same calamity, and that I was perishing with the world itself. At last this dreadful darkness was dissipated by degrees, like a cloud or smoke; the real day returned, and even the sun shone out, though with a lurid light, as when an eclipse is coming on. Every object that presented itself to our eyes, (which were extremely weakened,) seemed changed, being covered deep with ashes as if with snow. We returned to Misenum, where we refreshed ourselves as well as we could, and passed an anxious night between hope and fear, though, indeed, with a much larger share of the latter, for the earthquake still continued, while many frenzied persons ran up and down heightening their own and their friends' calamities by terrible predictions. However, my mother and I, notwithstanding the danger we had passed, and that which still threatened us, had no thoughts of leaving the place till we could receive some news of my uncle.

And now you will read this narrative without any view of inserting it in your history, of which it is not in the least worthy, and, indeed, you must put it down to your own request if it should appear not worth even the trouble of a letter. Farewell.

Lecture-Recital on

CHOPIN

By THOMAS WHITNEY SURETTE

Lecturer on Music for American University Extension Society, Teachers College of Columbia University, Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. Editor Great Composers Course Music Lovers Library

With musical illustrations rendered on
The Metrostyle Pianola
THURSDAY, APRIL 12, AT 3 P. M.

Admission will be by card only, which may be obtained free of cost upon application

MR. SURETTE'S lectures are designed to interest and instruct the same audiences which listen to lectures on other subjects, and are by no means for musical people alone. The only requirement necessary in listening to them is a certain appreciation of beauty such as is common to nearly all persons, and a desire to be in touch with the thoughts of great men.

Mr. Surette's lecture on Chopin will be illustrated by the following numbers on the Metrostyle Pianola:

Nocturne, Op. 37, No. 2, in G
Polonaise Militaire, Op. 40, No. 1, in A major
Etude, Op. 10, No. 12, in C minor—Revolutionary
Ballade, Op. 23, in G minor
Also the Marche Funebre from Sonata Op. 35, on the Aeolian Pipe Organ

IN our vast display of new Spring models you will find hundreds of styles that are the composites of the highest art ideals of the master milliners of two nations. Hats of Paris origin, selected because of their rare beauty and elegance of design and then given certain modifications that bring them in closer accordance with American ideas.

But exclusive of the original Paris hats and adaptations which we are now exhibiting, we offer an almost countless number of striking styles designed by our own milliners, and which, though marked at a tithe of the prices, bear comparison with the best imported models.

It is easy to pick a becoming hat in a store like ours, where no style is accepted that is not in harmony with the most approved modes and at the same time possessing certain distinctive and exclusive characteristics that set it apart from the ordinary.

It is this striving toward the highest ideals—toward the most artistic modes of expressing the fashion thoughts of the hour—that has brought Simpson Crawford's to its present pre-eminence in the millinery world—a pre-eminence that is not even approached by any other house on this side of the ocean, and which consists not only in our ability to show the most styles, but to quote the lowest prices as well.

$3 Women tell us frankly that the reason they buy such low-priced shoes is that they are the most comfortable and at the same time smartest shoes obtainable.

Mr. Thos. G. Plant, long since recognized as America's foremost manufacturer of women's footwear, is the one man in the shoe industry who knows when a last is absolutely the shape of the human foot.

Buying leather for a daily output of 10,000 pairs, originating new style effects, advertising, marketing, and every branch of the vast business is placed in competent hands—but a new last must be approved by Mr. Plant before it is adopted, and in making shoes the lasts are first.

Women's Handsome Gibson Ties at $5.

In these, dull English calf and lustrous patent kid have been combined most effectively. They have two large eyelets with wide silk ribbon lacing, plain tapering toe, and medium weight flexible sole with slight extension.

For either street or indoor wear. These shoes will meet every requirement of the critical.

DOWIE'S STEEL REFUGE IS FOUND IN ZION CITY

WIFE RENOUNCED BY DOWIE

Declares He Will Never Live with Her—Son Again Threatens Exposure of Prophet.

ZION CITY, Ill., April 9.—Overseer Voliva, at a mass meeting in Shiloh Tabernacle to-night, said that John Alexander Dowie had a secret steel room in his home, which was for the first time entered by an outsider to-day.

"It will surprise you to learn," said Voliva, "that in Shiloh House there was the most curious room in America. The Czar of Russia may have one, and need one, but who would think there was one in the peaceful City of Zion? We knew there was a room kept always locked, and into which Dowie himself went seldom. We entered it to-day, but to do so we had to batter through two iron doors.

"The room was like a vault, except that the bolts and bars were mostly on the inside. Light came into the room through a bull's-eye window, the outside of which was protected by heavy iron shutters. Air was admitted through a funnel. There was a bed inside—a bed so curious that I cannot attempt to describe it. And this room—this cell—was built by and for a man who used to stand before you and ask you to tell him what fear was like."

At to-night's meeting final instructions were given by Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva, the new head of Zion's affairs, for the conduct of his followers when Dowie arrives. He and others urged members of the congregation to rob Dowie's return of any dramatic force by remaining away from the railway station and busying themselves as usual.

Five witnesses arose to tell of Dowie's polygamous teachings, sacrilege, and blasphemy. The testimony was that of Overseers John G. Speicher, J. G. Excell, and H. D. Bransfield, and Deacons Daniel Sloan and G. F. Lupon.

Among Dowie's quoted teachings were these assertions:

"There is nothing in the Bible contrary to the doctrine of polygamy."

"The father of Jesus Christ was a man."

"In life after death each man shall have several wives."

"In heaven those women who have been unmarried on earth shall have a husband and children."

"One woman is a good thing and a blessing; then two women are twice as much a good thing and a double blessing."

As these teachings were told there were cries of "never," hisses, and groans from the audience.

A carriage will be allowed to meet Dowie under the assumption that he is a sick man. He will be driven directly to Shiloh House and taken to apartments as far as possible from Mrs. Dowie's, Voliva having receded from his declaration of yesterday that Dowie would not be permitted to enter his home.

A dispatch from Little Rock, Ark., this afternoon quoting Dowie as saying that Mrs. Dowie will never be a wife to him again, was shown to Gladstone Dowie.

"Probably the idea is mutual," remarked the son of the "Prophet." Afterward he repeated his statement: "If the old man insists on a fight, the son has a trump card reserved for the last trick. What this card is has never been made public."

It is certain that there are some Dowieites still faithful to the old leader, and they will be at the station to meet him. To-day in the houses of two negro brothers lithographs of Dowie were placed in the windows and kept there despite numerous vigorous protests.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., April 9.—"If it is true that Mrs. Dowie said the things reported, then I shall never live with her again," said John Alexander Dowie to-day in the private car in which he is hurrying to Zion City to combat his followers who have rebelled against his rule.

"She is the cause of most of my trouble," he continued. "She has spurred on Voliva and the others until this dreadful trouble came and my persecution was complete. For years I tried to shield her, but her strange conduct has now passed beyond the point of human endurance.

"Money and jealousy were at the bottom of it all. She was incensed because I wanted to leave so much to Zion. May God forgive her. I offered her 2½ per cent. of the vast estate. It should have satisfied her, for it would have provided amply for her wants. As for her jealousy, who can account for that? I only know before my God that my life has been pure and blameless. These stories about polygamy are more than cruel—they are shocking."

Deacons Lewis and Peters, who were present at the interview, nodded approval to the sentiments expressed by their leader, and Deacon Lewis added that the world little knew of the trials through which Dowie has passed in recent years because of domestic infelicity.

"For years Dowie has shielded his wife," said Deacon Lewis, "but recently her conduct has been such as to render further forebearance a human impossibility."

"To-morrow I shall make a more substantial statement to the public," said Dowie. "I will say now that, owing to the delays incident to this trip, I may be a little later arriving in Zion than I had first expected. There will be no turning back, but I think it will be advisable for me to stop in Chicago and consult legal talent. I do not want to make any move at this time which shall in the slightest jeopardize my interest. When I go to Zion City I shall rest in Shiloh House, and under the protection of the Stars and Stripes."

He expects to reach Chicago early to-morrow morning.

"I am innocent, I am innocent;" he continued, "but only God knows this now. Why, if I were guilty of these things which they charge I should be taken out and shot like a dog."

The train conveying Dowie passed over a small bridge which was afire. Had it been ten minutes later it might have been wrecked. Dowie said that God had prevented the wreck.

On the entire trip Dowie has been guarded by a giant negro, who was picked up in Jamaica. This man is with Dowie, it is said, because Dowie is in constant fear of assassination.

35 Horses Burned to Death.

Thirty-five horses were burned to death early yesterday morning in a two-story frame stable, 608 Bergen Street, Brooklyn. The fire spread to five other buildings and caused a damage of $25,000. There were three explosions, which Fire Marshal Beers will investigate. The stable was owned by E. J. Haggerty, a contractor.

A DIMPLE MAKER.

Find a child with dimples and chubby arms and legs and you find a healthy child. Find one with drawn face and poor, thin body and you see one that needs Scott's Emulsion. Your doctor will no doubt tell you the child is fat-starved—its food is not nourishing it.

Nothing helps these thin, pale children like Scott's Emulsion. It contains the very element of fat they need. It supplies them with a perfect and quickly digested nourishment. Scott's Emulsion brings dimples and rounded limbs.

COLER STIRS METHODISTS.

Borough President Denounced as a "Butter-In."

The New York East Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now in session in the New York Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, was stirred yesterday by the reading of a letter from Borough President Bird S. Coler, and which bore on the trouble between The Methodist Book Concern and Typographical Union No. 6. Mr. Coler wrote as "a simple layman," adjuring the conference to "let no merely mercenary influence affect its relation with the wage-earners of the country."

The charges against the Book Concern were the direct cause of Mr. Coler's letter. He urged that these charges be thoroughly probed. After the letter had been read the Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckley characterized Mr. Coler as a "butter-in," and urged that nothing further be done in the case, as the whole matter had already been referred to the local Book Committee of the General Conference.

Dr. Buckley was sharply rebuked by the Rev. David G. Downey and several other members of the Conference. The Rev. F. J. McConnell, pastor of the New York Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, said that Mr. Coler had contributed substantially toward clearing the debt from his church.

After vigorous debate, it was determined to send Mr. Coler's letter to the local Book Committee of the General Conference, and to direct them, if the evidence warranted such action, to call the General Publication Committee together at once.

When the excitement caused by the reading of this letter and the subsequent action of the conference had subsided the Rev. F. J. McConnell caused another disturbance in reading the report of the Education Committee. In the course of this report the committee referred to the case of Prof. Mitchell of Boston University, the confirmation of whose appointment as an instructor was rescinded by the College of Bishops because of the views expressed by him in a work entitled "The World Before Abraham."

Mr. McConnell said that he did not intend to comment on the higher criticism, but the committee desired to call the attention of the conference to the fourth amendment in the general law of 1904. Under this, he said, a minister of the Church might be condemned by the Bishops without a hearing.

To obtain vindication he would have to go before a conference the Chairman of which would be one of those who had condemned him. This he declared to be fundamentally unsound, unconstitutional, and a blow at the liberty of a Methodist minister.

A member of the conference arose and declared this statement to be an attack on the Bishops.

"I don't think much of it as an attack on the Bishops," rejoined Bishop McCabe amid general laughter.

The motion to adopt the report was carried and Bishop McCabe said:

"I desire to say that the Bishops communicated with Prof. Mitchell and his answer was read in the College of Bishops. He was confirmed because he promised not to teach what he had written, but the confirmation was withdrawn when he broke that promise."

More than a dozen of the ministers here arose and shouted:

"I except to the remarks of the Bishop."

"I knew exception would be taken to what I said," replied the Bishop, "but I said it just the same."

A "FENCE" FOR BELL BOYS.

Detectives Think They Now Know Where Hotel Plunder Goes.

In the arrest of three men whom he locked up in the Tenderloin Police Station last night, Detective Sergeant Fogarty thinks he has unearthed a gang of thieves who stand in with bell boys of hotels and dispose of the property after it has been stolen by them.

The apartments of Cooper Lord in the Hotel Essex, at Madison Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street, were entered two weeks ago and robbed of four valuable scarf pins. Fogarty found one of the diamond pins in an Eighth Avenue pawnshop, and learned that it had been pawned by a woman whom he traced to 328 West Fortieth Street. He found that she was the wife of Frank Marshall, a bartender.

When Marshall was arrested last night he said he got the pin from Robert Leary, who was found in a Sixth Avenue saloon. Fogarty started with his prisoner for the West Thirtieth Street Station in a Broadway car. When it was nearly time to get off Leary made a run for the door and tried to throw a diamond pin away. The detective grappled with his prisoner and threw him to the floor of the car. Then he sat upon him while he got the pin out of his hand.

Half a dozen women in the car began to scream, and several men, who took the detective for a thief, tried to help Leary. Fogarty finally landed Leary in the station house, where he said that the pin he gave Marshall he received from John Murphy, a bell boy in the Hotel Essex.

MAHER AS A HOTEL KEEPER.

Receiver Appointed for Jockey's Interest in the Saranac House.

Danny Maher, the jockey; Fenton M. Johnson, and Louis N. Long formed a partnership with a capital of $15,000, three months ago, to take a three year lease at an annual rental of $15,000 on the old Rossmore Hotel, the name of which they changed to the Saranac, on Broadway, near Times Square. They bought the fixtures of the hotel from Patrick Roche for $25,000, payable $10,000 in cash and $15,000 in three notes of $5,000 each. Then the new management spent $4,000 in improving the place.

About a month ago Maher, dissatisfied with the way in which the hotel's affairs had been conducted, had an expert accountant examine the books. He reported that the assets were $35,181 and the liabilities $28,941. The jockey sailed for Europe to ride on the race tracks, saying that he wouldn't be held responsible for any of the debts of the firm.

Long then brought suit against the other two men, and yesterday Judge Newburger of the Supreme Court appointed John E. Chatfield receiver for the hotel, fixing his bond at $15,000. Long says he thinks the assets of the firm are $47,500, which includes good-will. The receiver appointed yesterday is allowed to continue the business of the firm.

RAND TO SEE THE MINUTES.

Grand Jury Records Opened to Counsel for the Burnhams.

Permission to inspect the minutes of the March Grand Jury as far as they relate to the indictment of President Frederick A. Burnham, First Vice President George Burnham, Jr., and Second Vice President George D. Eldridge of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company for larceny and forgery was granted yesterday by Judge O'Sullivan on a motion made by former Assistant District Attorney Rand on behalf of the defendants.

Mr. Rand contends that illegal evidence was admitted in the investigation leading up to the indictments. This evidence, he says, was furnished by lawyers formerly employed as attorneys by the defendants. Notice has already been given by Mr. Rand that he will make a motion to dismiss the indictment on the same ground when the defendants are brought into court to plead on Thursday.

PRESBYTERY DISPUTE WITH SEMINARY ENDED

Church Body Will Let Students Attend the Institution.

VOTING METHOD NOT CHANGED

Dr. Duffield's Plan Is Referred Back to the Committee After a Lively Debate.

The strained relations existing between the Presbytery of New York and the Union Theological Seminary will soon be a thing of the past, for at the Spring meeting of the Presbytery, held yesterday in the Old First Presbyterian Church in Fifth Avenue, it was resolved that Presbyterian students might attend the seminary if they saw fit.

The matter came up in the reading of a communication from the seminary, or, as the clerk of the session put it, a modus vivendi, which called attention to the provision made for the instruction of students of the Presbyterian Church. Then the Presbytery decided that students might attend the seminary.

The bitterness that existed arose when Dr. Briggs was tried on charges of heresy.

The session of the Presbytery opened yesterday morning. The Rev. George Nixon was re-elected Moderator and the Rev. J. C. Palmer temporary clerk. The report of the Trustees of the Presbytery showed that the Presbytery was in good financial condition, with real estate valued at $674,100 and ecclesiastical mortgages valued at $1,100,000. A recommendation was made that the various congregations take public action to celebrate the two hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Presbyterian Church in America, the celebration to be held between April 20 and May 20.

The plan suggested by the American Presbyterian Church of Montreal, to hold the 1907 session of the General Assembly of the Presbytery in Canada, was approved.

The clergymen who will go as commissioners to the General Assembly, which convenes in Des Moines on May 17, were then elected. They are the Revs. Drs. Antonio Arrighi, Anson T. Atterbury, Howard Duffield, Robert Mackenzie, Henry Sloane Coffin, William R. Richards, and Robert Johnston, the latter of Montreal. The lay delegates chosen were Elders Henry W. Jessup, Scott Foster, A. A. Booth, W. N. Crane, John Murphy, Charles Dunlop, and Dr. William E. Waters.

The Rev. Dr. Duffield, Chairman of the committee appointed at the March meeting to consider a suggestion on the method of voting, filed a report which, if adopted, might have resulted in disfranchising such ministers as did not have churches. It favored some radical changes in the methods of Presbytery voting, but after a lively debate it was referred back to the committee.

The Presbytery of Cleveland asked the Presbytery of New York to approve of a plan to urge the consolidation of the various Presbyterian boards with the Church, but this was voted down. A proposal of the Buffalo Presbytery that the New York Presbytery adopt a plan to hold members together by telling Buffalo when church members moved to that city was approved.

Much more happened at the session, it was said, but it was not made public. Reporters were not admitted.

FERRY HOLD-UP, SAYS MARKS.

Cooper Bill, He Charges, Plans Foisting Whole Plant on City.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 9.—In the Senate to-night Senator Marks of New York said that Senator Cooper's bill to amend the Greater New York charter relative to the purchase of ferries was the greatest hold-up that had ever been attempted on the City of New York. He said that it was a scheme for unloading the properties of the Union Ferry Company on the city at prices fixed by the company, and that the company, having found it unprofitable on account of the bridges to run their properties, sought, by Cooper's bill, to force the city to buy their entire plant.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Tuesday, April 10.—The Democrats, under the leadership of Palmer, began a campaign of obstruction in the Assembly last night in retaliation for the majority's tactics of Thursday. It could not have been instituted at a worse time for the Republicans, some of their most important measures of the session being on the calendar—among them the Elsberg Rapid Transit bill, the L'Hommedieu Niagara Power bills, the Saxe Tax bill, and the Malby bills changing the date of the city elections in Ogdensburg to coincide with the general elections, beginning in 1907, and over which the row arose on Thursday.

The campaign of delay began by the Democrats taking nearly two hours to fight the adoption of the journal of Thursday, in which Palmer demanded that the record of what he did on Thursday should appear. He made a bitter attack on the Speaker, declaring his methods revolutionary and unsafe "in a public body." He gave his version of what had occurred, and declared that never before had a Speaker acted so arbitrarily."

"He who attempts to deny free discussion in a legislative body is an enemy of his country," he said. "Anybody who throttles discussion and drives men into their seats by the use of the gavel fails properly to fill the high office to which he was elected. We don't want any such un-American methods."

After a violent discussion the journal of Thursday was finally adopted 86 to 29, all amendments thereto having been defeated by the majority.

Moreland made a defense of the Speaker and commended him for his "honesty, vigor, and impartiality, his patriotism, courage, and fidelity."

Then the calendar was taken up with the minority demanding an explanation of every bill as it came up, offering amendments and doing everything their ingenuity could devise for delay. A roll was had on the Democrats' insistence even on motions to advance. It took an hour to lay over the first bill and another hour to advance the four following measures. All the Republicans were studying their rule books and running with them to the Speaker, with suggestions for the checking of the dilatory tactics of the Democrats.

Merritt of St. Lawrence had let it be understood that the two Malby bills legislating Ogdensburg Democrats out of office must be passed, whatever the hour of adjournment, and the Democrats planned and carried their fight accordingly.

At midnight, Rogers made a motion to postpone action on all second reading bills and thereby reach the Malby Ogdensburg bills at once. Majority Leaders Moreland and Burnett forced most of the Republicans to vote against the motion, and this gave the Democrats more opportunity for delay.

Members began pointing to the clock, some protesting against being held under a close call. Others who had important bills on the calendar declared their willingness to stay until next month if necessary.

Motions to adjourn were made time and again, but all were defeated, and finally members began to send out for sandwiches and an unlimited supply of ice water.

Speaker Wadsworth at length called Mead of Albany to the chair and rushed to his lieutenants on the floor to devise ways and means to facilitate the work of the House. Shortly afterward the Democrats wearied of their tactics and the Malby bills were passed and the House adjourned at 1:30 o'clock, leaving dozens of important bills not acted upon.

FOWLER WATER BILL PASSED.

It Goes Through Senate with Only One Dissenting Vote.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 9.—The Fowler compromise water bill, which allows the City of New York to go into Ulster County on payment of certain agreed-upon damages, passed the Senate to-night, and will now go to Mayor McClellan. Senators Martin and Grady said the bill was approved by the Mayor and the city authorities generally.

Senator Saxe wanted the bill amended so as to include Dutchess County in the scheme for damages. Grady vigorously opposed the amendment, which he said was not made in good faith, and it was lost. The original bill then passed with only one negative vote.

SYRUP OF FIGS

Acts Gently;
Acts Pleasantly;
Acts Beneficially;
Acts truly as a Laxative.

Syrup of Figs appeals to the cultured and the well-informed and to the healthy, because its component parts are simple and wholesome and because it acts without disturbing the natural functions, as it is wholly free from every objectionable quality or substance. In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinal virtues of Syrup of Figs are obtained from an excellent combination of plants known to be medicinally laxative and to act most beneficially. An Immense Easter Gathering of Women's Suits and Frocks

THE NOTABLE SHOWING IN THE WINDOWS gives some hint of the variety and brilliance of the showing. But not until you visit the women's outer-wear sections on the second floor will you realize what a great and various and beautiful collection is here.

It Is Brooklyn's Most Authoritative Style Show

These new Suits and Dresses and Wraps reflect the style-beauty and originality that Paris has designed for this season. When you come to examine them closely, they show such care and perfection of workmanship as is rare except from the most expensive custom tailors. When you come to try them on, you find that the necessities for alterations are slight and that in many instances the fit is absolute perfection from the start.

The styles are so many that it is impossible to describe them. There are Princess Gowns; Eton Suits in many varieties; bolero, short and long semi-fitted and tight-fitting coats, pony coats—an assortment that is almost bewildering.

The materials are chiffon broadcloths, panamas, voiles, shadow voiles, cheviots, mannish mixtures, hair line stripes, silks, etc. Colors are mainly black, navy, mauve and the new pastel shades.

The price range is all the way from $12.98 to $150. It is the largest and most complete showing ever made in Brooklyn and any comparison which you care to make will show some price advantages in buying here.

"Narcisse" Kid Gloves.
The Highest Point Reached.

FINER FRENCH KID GLOVES than the "Narcisse" kid Gloves have never been made. They are the highest point reached.

They are made for us by Trefousse et Cie, of Chaumont, France, and that is guarantee of their quality. But they are the very finest Trefousse product—the leather, the cutting, the sewing, the dyeing—each being the very best that the Trefousse Glove people, who have made Gloves for more than one lifetime, can do.

Three clasp glace Gloves, sewn overseam, and in the beautiful Spring colorings as well as white and black. A great many Brooklyn women who know these Gloves will never be content with anything else.......$1.85 a pair

$1.25 Pique Gloves at 79c.

Probably the best Gloves ever sold at such a price—certainly the finest that have been offered anywhere this season. Those who have not already bought a pair or two will be glad to know that we shall start this morning with a full line of sizes in tan, modes, slates, brown, white and black. Main Floor, Bond Street.

Gray Suitings for Easter.

PERHAPS THE VERY SMARTEST of the Easter Gowns will be in gray. And certainly the smartest of the gray Suitings—as well as the largest showing—are here in this superb collection.

The prices are modest enough—least anywhere for fabrics so good and desirable.

46 inch gray and white check chiffon Panama Suiting, a popular French fabric.......$1 a yard
Silver gray English mohair Suiting, a late importation.....59c. a yard
50 inch light gray Suiting overplaided, a very stylish and effective pattern.......$1.25 a yard

Second Floor.

Easter Footwear.

NEW SHOES, OF COURSE, will be wanted for Easter morning and more than likely mid-April will bring the need for cool, low Shoes and Pumps. The past week's selling has demonstrated conclusively that nowhere else in Brooklyn are to be found such pretty Summer Shoes—or such values for the money as the

Loeser "Innovation" Pumps and Ties at $3.50

In patent leather and in the new gun metal kid, with new touches this season, the smart out-swinging sole, the short coquettish toe, the snug heel and the low cut that shows the graceful line of arched instep and embroidered stocking.

Every Brooklyn woman knows about the VALUE of "Innovation" Shoes at Loeser's, knows about the good leather, the fit, the comfort, the wear. It is the special beauty and style of these 1906 shoes—as perfect as you would look for in a five dollar shoe—that is bringing in the girls and young matrons by the score now. Second Floor, Rear.

WITTE RESIGNS AGAIN; CZAR GIVES NO ANSWER

Struggle Between Reaction and Reform Brought to a Head.

LIBERAL SWEEP CONTINUES

Constitutional Democrats Win in Overwhelming Victory in the City of Moscow.

ST. PETERSBURG, Tuesday, April 10.—The steadily swelling tide of Liberal successes and the overwhelming victory of the Constitutional Democrats in the election at Moscow has brought the struggle between reaction and reform to a head. Premier Witte late last night, according to information which has reached The Associated Press, again tendered his resignation to the Emperor, with a clear-cut intimation that the latter must choose, and at once, between him and Minister of the Interior Durnovo. The Emperor, according to report, took the resignation under consideration and returned no answer.

Since his return from Tsarskoe-Selo on Thursday of last week, when he pleaded with Emperor Nicholas to heed the voice of the people and grant a written constitution, Premier Witte has brought all possible pressure upon the Emperor to induce him to divorce himself from the reactionary cabal and alignment himself unreservedly with the new school.

Events now, as during the great October strike preceding the issuance of the imperial manifesto, have played the Premier's game. Every new election dispatch has made it clearer that any idea that the Imperial Parliament could be held in leading strings is utterly futile, and after the receipt of the returns from twenty-eight provinces and Moscow, Count Witte apparently felt strong enough to play his final card and force the issue.

If he wins he will replace M. Durnovo with M. Shipoff or some other liberal, working in agreement with the Government. If he loses, Durnovo, Trepoff, and Ignatieff will inherit the ticklish job of dealing with the accredited representatives of the nation.

The latest dispatches bring little comfort to the Conservatives. Reports continue to be favorable to the Constitutional Democrats. One of the most notable features is the election of Prince Urusoff, who resigned the Vice Ministry of the Interior to stand for the National Parliament. Michael Stakovich, the well-known Zemstvoist, has also been elected.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 9.—Belated returns to-day only increase the magnitude of the Opposition's victory. A summary of the official returns up to 6 o'clock this evening shows that fifty Constitutional Democrats, twenty-six Progressives, and thirteen unclassified members of the Lower House have been elected.

Kursk returned a solid Progressive delegation, headed by Prince Peter Dolgoroukoff. M. Sherkoff, one of the members elected to the Lower House of Parliament, is now in prison.

Vitebsk elected two Poles, a Catholic priest, one Progressive, two Constitutional Democrats, and two peasants.

Vladimir, one of the old capitals of Russia, where the orthodox faith is particularly strong, chose a Monarchist, but the Electoral College elected five Constitutional Democrats.

TO SAVE MARIE SPIRIDONOFF.

Distinguished Frechmen Protest Against Her Execution.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1906.]

PARIS, April 9.—In order to save Marie Spiridonoff, the young girl who assassinated Luzhenoffsky, Chief of the Secret Police of Tamboff, and has been condemned to be hanged, a committee of protestation has been formed here on the initiative of Paul and Victor Margueritte, the well-known authors, whose father, Gen. Margueritte, met a heroic death in the Franco-German war.

In a document they have drawn up and which is to be forwarded to the Czar, it is alleged that Marie Spiridonoff, after being arrested, was thrown naked into an icy cell, suspended by the hair and whipped, her hair torn out, one of her eyes destroyed, and her flesh burned with cigarettes by her Cossack captors. Finally, it is charged, a police officer named Abramoff completed the torture. These charges are acknowledged to be true by the doctor of the prison and the prosecuting lawyer, it is said.

Among those who already have signed the protest are Sully Prudhomme, the poet; Anatole France of the French Academy, Michel Bréal of the Institute, Maurice Maeterlinck, Joseph Reinach, and four professors of the Sorbonne.

TROUBLE STARTS IN PERSIA.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 9.—The long-expected troubles in Northern Persia, which are the outcome of the racial and religious conflict in the Caucasus complicated by local distress, at last broken out.

Twenty Europeans, presumably Armenians, have been killed or wounded at Meshed, capital of the Province of Khorassan. It may be necessary for Russia to send troops to restore order.

HONOR SOLDIER FOR MURDER.

Czar Frees and General Rewards Man Who Killed a Civilian.

WARSAW, April 9.—Emperor Nicholas has granted full pardon to Pavloff, the soldier of Gen. Bogdanovsky's regiment who murdered a civilian for casting aspersions on the Emperor. The civil court attempted to take jurisdiction of the case, but the military authorities carried the case to the Emperor, who acquitted the accused soldier, whereupon Gen. Bogdanovsky made the following speech to the regiment, which was distributed to all the troops as an order of the day:

"You see, brothers, from whom you must take an example, from the brave Pavloff, whose loyalty to the Emperor was greater than his fear of responsibility. I order that he be given $5 and two months' vacation. Hurrah for Pavloff!"

ROUND-UP OF CHINAMEN PROPOSED BY SARGENT

Would Deport All Who Cannot Show Proper Certificates.

NEW YORK'S PERJURY SCHOOL

Old Chinaman Gets Witnesses for Either Side — Gompers Wants the Japanese Excluded.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Reregistration of all Chinamen now in America and deportation of all who cannot show proper certificates was proposed before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs by Commissioner General Sargent of the Immigration service. He declared that such a law would soon demonstrate that the country and even Washington held great numbers of Chinamen who are here illegally.

Mr. Sargent declared that to-day Mexico was flooded with Chinamen who were schooling themselves for fraudulent entry into the United States. He had not been able to make an agreement with the Mexican railroads that would greatly aid in controlling the situation, and it would take the whole American Army to patrol the border line and keep the Chinamen out. The situation as to Canada is very much better than it was several years ago, because of an agreement with the Canadian railroads.

Mr. Sargent recounted an experience he had in New York shortly after he became the head of the service. He at that time saw in Pell Street the operation of a school for witnesses carried on by an old Chinaman, who had been doing a lively business in furnishing Chinese witnesses both for the Government and for Chinamen who were endeavoring to prove that they were born in this country. For a consideration a witness, or any number of them could be obtained for either side from this school.

The difficulty of enforcing the exclusion act, Mr. Sargent said, lay in the dishonesty of American attorneys and the activity of the "Big Six" companies in San Francisco, as well as other interested parties.

The greatest cause of complaint arose, in his opinion, from the fact that what are known as "Section 6 certificates," which are in reality passports of Chinamen, privileged to land in this country, are made out in blank by United States consular officers in China, and sold for a consideration. This, Mr. Sargent said, appeared in the reecnt Peirce report on conditions of the consular service in the Orient, and his office was full of evidence to the same effect.

The remedy, he suggested, was to have officers in China subject to the discipline of the immigration service, whose duty should be to investigate the certificate issued to every Chinaman, and who should send with the steamer in which he sailed proper papers to the immigration authorities at the port of destination, giving means of readily identifying the Chinaman and the certificate.

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, argued for the extension of the exclusion features of the present law to cover Japanese. He remarked that there is a great awakening in China, and that a new spirit is developing, which is liable, at some time, possibly not far away, to make a very great change in that long unchanged empire.

"And if, in the course of this development," said Mr. Gompers, "there should come, as may happen, a sudden impulse to cut off queues, then in that moment when it was done there would be 400,000,000 more Japanese."

But the sub-committee did not seem to be much frightened by this possibility.

Mr. Gompers objected to the Foster bill, on which the hearing was held, because it "admits" all Chinese "except" certain classes, whereas the existing law "excludes" all Chinese "except" certain classes. The result of this, he said, puts the burden of proof, now on the Chinaman desiring to come in, but under the Foster bill it would be on the Government to show that undesirable persons should be excluded.

FRANCHISE TAX TEST.

U. S. Supreme Court Hears Argument on New York Central's Appeal.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The Supreme Court heard argument to-day in the cases involving the constitutionality of the New York State law taxing franchises of corporations in that State. There are five cases, and the New York Central Railroad Company is the mover in all of them.

The cases were decided by the State Supreme Court adversely to the corporations. Attorney General Mayer represented the State and Attorneys Thomas Emery and Ira A. Place the New York Central Road.

FOOD.

INSOMNIA
Leads to Madness, if Not Remedied in Time.

"Experiments satisfied me, some 5 years ago," writes a Topeka woman, "that coffee was the direct cause of the insomnia from which I suffered terribly, as well as the extreme nervousness and acute dyspepsia which made life a most painful thing for me.

"I had been a coffee drinker since childhood, and did not like to think that the beverage was doing me all this harm. But it was, and the time came when I had to face the fact, and protect myself. I therefore gave it up, abruptly and absolutely, and adopted Postum Food Coffee for my hot drink at meals.

"I began to note improvement in my condition very soon after I took on Postum. The change proceeded gradually, but surely, and it was a matter of only a few weeks before I found myself entirely relieved—the nervousness passed away, my digestive apparatus was restored to normal efficiency, and I began to sleep, restfully and peacefully.

"These happy conditions have continued during all of the 5 years, and I am safe in saying that I owe them entirely to Postum Food Coffee, for when I began to drink it I ceased to use medicines." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

COCKRAN'S BIT OF A YARN.

Spins It Before House Committee Till Fouled by Gompers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Alexander Cockran, shipwright, out of Cork by way of Baltimore to Bath, Me., hove over the horizon of the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries this afternoon, and came into violent collision with Samuel Gompers. The occasion was the hearing on the Ship Subsidy bill.

The good-natured Cockran came all the way from Bath just to tell the committee how very much indeed the Shipwrights' Union, which he represented, needed such legislation for the betterment of the conditions of its members, who, to the number of 400, as his credentials said, joined in sending him to Washington for that worthy purpose.

Unfortunately for Cockran, Mr. Gompers had heard of the Celtic shipwright and his union, 400 strong. Consequently Mr. Gompers attended the hearing, with a little documentary evidence in his pocket. Mr. Cockran was sailing comfortably along on his course when the rival craft crossed his bows and made signal, something after this fashion:

"You say you represent a union of 400 members. Isn't it a fact that your union was disbanded a year ago?"

"Thrue for ye, Mate," says Cockran, "thrue for ye. An' phwy not? Didn't the byes git the sack an' dhrift away, till there was only me an' Jim Donovan an' Larry Fullam an' Pat Gleason left o' the lot o' thim? But wuden't we kape th' union on her course, be the same token?"

"Then why did you say there were 400 of you?" demanded Gen. Grosvenor, Chairman of the committee.

"Shure, yer honor," said Cockran, "it's only a bit of exaggeration, an' ivery-body's bound to exaggerat a bit, now an' thin."

At the close of the hearing it was said by committee member that the Ship Subsidy bill was no nearer a favorable report than before.

JAPAN OPENS MANCHURIA.

Foreign Consuls, Citizens, and Ships Will Be Allowed to Enter.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The following statement was given out to-day at the Japanese Embassy:

"Owing to the fact that the withdrawal of the troops from Manchuria not having sufficiently progressed, the Japanese Government hitherto has neither permitted citizens and vessels of foreign countries to enter the ports and regions of Manchuria nor allowed foreign Consuls to proceed to their posts therein. Considerable progress, however, having now been made in this respect, the Japanese Government has decided, in accordance with the principles of open door and equal opportunity ever advocated by them, to permit citizens and vessels of foreign countries to enter from May 1, An-Tung-Hsien and Ta-Tung-Kao, and allow foreign Consuls to proceed to their posts at An-Tung-Hsien.

"From June 1 foreign Consuls shall be allowed to proceed to their posts at Mukden, and traveling of foreigners in the interior of Manchuria will be permitted in so far as military exigencies do not prevent it. It has further been decided that the Japanese Government will open Dairen (Dalny) to the commerce of the world in as near future as possible."

BARNES TO BE SUMMONED.

His Citizenship and the Morris Affair to be Investigated.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The sub-committee of the Senate Post-Office Committee, which will investigate the Barnes case, did not meet to-day, and will take no action until Senator Tillman returns from the South and files his charges.

It has been decided to summon Barnes himself before the committee and have him give his account of the way that Mrs. Minor Morris was hustled out of the Executive offices and past the White House. He will also have the opportunity of explaining his citizenship, which is in question, as well as his conduct in the Morris affair.

Senator Tillman has received a letter from a constituent in South Carolina giving a full account of the Barnes family, which was originally a South Carolina family. During the revolution the head of the family, being a Tory, took his family to Nova Scotia and made his home there, and there Barnes himself first saw the light. The citizens of Washington despair of being able to prevent Barnes's confirmation because of the Morris affair, no matter what facts may be proved before the committee. They have, however, some hope of defeating him on the ground that he is not an American citizen.

BRITISH EDUCATION BILL.

Main Measure of the Liberal Programme Laid Before the Commons.

LONDON, April 9.—The Education bill, the main measure on the Liberal programme for the present session, was introduced in the House of Commons this afternoon by Mr. Birrell, President of the Board of Education. The difficulty in completely satisfying any single religious group and the impossibility of framing a measure acceptable to all the political parties speedily became apparent as Mr. Birrell unfolded his effort to arrange a compromise.

The present voluntary schools conducted by different denominations if continued would receive Government grants and would become provided schools (or schools provided by the authorities) and have to be satisfied with the same undenominational religious teaching as now given in other provided schools. Power would be given to the local authorities to take over the existing voluntary school buildings by arrangement with the proprietors, and there would be no religious test for teachers, who would be appointed by the local authorities.

Under the proposed scheme religious education may be given in hitherto unprovided schools (if they are taken over by the educational authorities) two mornings weekly by consent of the local authorities, but not by the regular staff. Nor will the attendance of pupils be compulsory, and no part of the expense is to be borne by the rates.

The bill provides for a further annual grant of $5,000,000 from the Imperial Exchequer for educational purposes, and proposes the establishment of a National Educational Council for Wales.

HASTENS MUCK RAKE SPEECH.

President Decides to Deliver It in Washington on Saturday.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—President Roosevelt will attend the ceremonies incident to the laying of the cornerstone of the new office building of the House of Representatives next Saturday. On that occasion he will redeliver the speech entitled "The Man with the Muck Rake," which he made at the dinner recently given by Speaker Cannon in honor of the Gridiron Club, and which he had intended to repeat at Norfolk, Va., on Memorial Day.

He desired to get the speech before the public at as early a date as possible, and has determined to deliver it next Saturday.

FOR DIRECT NOMINATIONS.

Kings Republican Committee to Vote on the Plan To-day.

When the Kings County Republican General Committee meets to-night it will be asked to adopt a resolution urging the Legislature to pass a measure providing for the direct nomination of candidates for county offices.

A sub-committee of the General Committee, appointed to look into the merits of the plan, has reported in its favor, and the Executive Committee yesterday approved this report.

Test Us By These.

These Tuesday lists are bringing us the largest attendance that the store has ever held in other than Christmas buying seasons. If YOU, personally, have not been among those thousands there can be no other reason for it than that you considered the offers too good to be true. For it is impossible to believe that, in such a variety of seasonable and staple goods, there is not one item here that interests you.

That good word
has been so mercilessly mishandled in this city that we do not wonder if some persons look on ALL claims of the kind as probably alike in exaggeration.

OPERATORS TO OFFER AN ALTERNATIVE TO-DAY

Will Make Counter-Proposals to Mitchell Committee.

HOPE OF PEACE NOT GONE

A Longer-Term Agreement Will Be Insisted On to Remove Wage Questions from Politics.

The conference arranged for yesterday morning between operators and anthracite miners was postponed at the request of the former until 1:30 o'clock to-day. The reason assigned for the delay was the wish of the operators' committee to be sure that they had the support of all the independent coal owners in the proposals they intend to put forward to-day in answer to Mr. Mitchell's request for arbitration on all points involved in the dispute.

J. L. Cake, who represents the independent operators on the committee, was at Wilkesbarre yesterday. The other six members of the operators' committee met yesterday at the Jersey Central building and went over the general situation. They drafted the answer to be made to-day to the miners, but were not fully decided on all the details. They will meet again at 1 o'clock to-day and will receive a final report of the views of the independents from Mr. Cake.

At the conclusion of this meeting yesterday no official statement was given out as to the course the operators will take, but one of them said:

"If you guess that we have drawn up an alternative proposal to lay before Mr. Mitchell you will not guess wrong, and if you add that we are suggesting an agreement for a longer term than that which the miners asked for, you will be guessing right."

The longer term that the operators desire was a reference to the charge made last week by the mine owners that the miners are trying to 'make a football of politics' of the situation in the anthracite district. Mr. Mitchell proposed that the agreement to be made now should come to an end in two years. This would renew the whole dispute in the next Presidential year, and all sorts of political influences would be brought to bear to complicate the situation.

Whatever the outcome of the meeting to-morrow, it is not likely to end all hope of peace. The miners probably will ask for an adjournment of a few days to lay the operators' reply before the Scales Committee.

A good deal of comment was caused by the announcement that the operators were awaiting the decision of the independents before meeting the miners again. The coal-carrying and coal-owning railroads are so powerful that it is almost impossible for any independent to go against their wishes. It was held to be likely that the large operators themselves were not in complete accord as to the details of their proposal, and wished for more time to overcome these divergences of opinion.

All day yesterday members of the Scales Committee were returning from their districts. They reported that the miners were determined not to return to work until they had received satisfaction of their grievances.

A letter was sent yesterday by C. W. Post, President of the Citizens' Industrial Association of America, to Chairman Baer, as Chairman of the Anthracite Operators' Committee, urging that the operators resist the demands of the miners. It said in part:

> We deny the right to deprive the poor man or the rich of his supply of fuel, in an effort to force additional money from the pockets of the people to further enrich the members of the Labor Trust. There are 80,000,000 citizens in this country, who should not be forced to do without this necessity of life to further the interests of perhaps 150,000 miners, ruled by what has developed under leadership into a Labor Trust pure and simple. We must urge and insist upon the mines being opened and the supply of coal continued at once, under the rules laid down by the Coal Commission, and if the members of the mine workers' union or trust do not care to sell their labor under the rules, then let them stand aside and permit free workmen to mine coal and supply the citizens.

John Mitchell discussed the soft coal situation at the Ashland House yesterday and said:

"I have received word that the last Pittsburg mine operator signed the miners' agreement to-day. This means that in that district there will be at work shortly 40,000 men, with an annual output of from 35,000,000 to 40,000,000 tons. This cleans up the whole district."

HOPE STILL BUOYS MINERS.

Anthracite Workers Think Operators Will Make a Proposal.

PHILADELPHIA, April 9.—Mine workers throughout the anthracite region express the belief that the action of the operators requiring a postponement of the New York conference until to-morrow is an indication that, while President Mitchell's arbitration plan may not be accepted as presented, the operators themselves will have a proposition that will open the way for an amicable settlement of the existing differences.

The independent operators held a meeting to-day at Wilkesbarre for the purpose, it is said, of considering the proposition to be made to the miners' representatives to-morrow. The meeting was secret, and the proceedings were not disclosed.

In an effort to keep at work the men who have been operating the washeries of the Pennsylvania Coal Company at Wilkesbarre that company to-day made a voluntary increase of 10 per cent. in wages. The Delaware and Hudson, the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, the Erie, the West End, and other companies operating washeries report a substantial increase in the number of men at work.

PITTSBURG MINES RUNNING.

Rush of Old Hands to Forestall New-Comers at Irwin.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, April 9.—So far as the Pittsburg district is concerned the coal strike is a thing of the past. It was officially announced to-night from the headquarters of the United Mine Workers here that all mines save one in the Pittsburg district were running full at noon to-day and the only mine remaining out is expected to be in line early to-morrow.

Word from the Irwin field to-night shows that in practically all the mines work has been resumed. Trouble was expected at the Edna mines, near Irwin, this morning, but when the whistles blew for work the old hands rushed for the shafts ahead of the strange miners who had been brought in to help out in case of trouble, and the strike was declared at an end. The imported men also were put to work as the shafts will run on double time, because of the great demand for coal from the Pittsburg district.

ATHENS, Ohio, April 9.—A joint conference of coal miners and operators representing the Hocking Valley district today held a four-hour session and adjourned sine die without coming to any agreement.

J. H. Winder of the Sunday Creek Company voted against signing the scale of 1903. This company controls three-fourths of the output of the Hocking Valley district and to-day's action means a suspension of operations at its mines for an indefinite period.

The miners to-morrow will sign the 1903 scale with those operators who are willing to do so.

FREE COAL FOR A YEAR.

Massachusetts Legislature to Consider a Coal Strike Memorial.

BOSTON, April 9.—The legislative Committee on Rules to-day voted to admit for cosideration a resolution to petition Congress to abolish the duty on coal for one year.

The memorial was offered by Representative Burnett of Melrose, whose object is to provide against the "full seriousness of a prolonged coal strike."

McGILL GRADUATES DINE.

McCracken Tells Them "Carnegieization" Helps Professors.

The influence of universities in binding together men of different races and classes was discussed last night at the annual dinner at the Manhattan Hotel of the New York Graduates' Society of McGill University, Montreal. Regret was expressed that Lord Grey had been unable to accept the invitation of the society.

"McGill will play its part in the federation of the world," said President Peterson in his address. "It has already done much to bind together the French and the English of Canada, and it is strengthening the union of all parts of the Dominion by extending its work to British Columbia and overstepping the divisions between the provinces."

Chancellor MacCracken of New York University said in part:

"We are indebted to McGill for Dr. Osler, who introduced a new word into the English language. Now we have another new idea, the Carnegieization of college professors. I do not believe Mr. Carnegie could possibly have spent his $10,000,000 to better purpose for the improvement of education. To pension professors is of far more service than to give $100,000 to 100 universities for buildings."

TRIED FOR ELECTION FRAUD.

Tammany Saloon Keeper Charged with Perjury by Supt. Morgan.

James A. Mulligan, a saloon keeper at Avenue B and Fourteenth Street and a lieutenant of Tammany Leader John T. Oakley in the Fourteenth District, was on trial yesterday before Judge McMahon, in General Sessions, on the charge of making false statements under oath to Superintendent of Elections Morgan in the course of the investigation of an alleged case of false registration.

The Attorney General charges that Mulligan registered last Fall in the Twentieth Election District of the Fourteenth Assembly District as Arthur Smith of 187 Avenue B, and that when called to Morgan's office a few days later he identified a man named George Walsh of 428 East Sixteenth Street as "Arthur Smith." His statement to Mr. Morgan on this occasion was taken under oath, and is made the basis for the present proceedings against him.

Three members of the Inspection Board where "Arthur Smith" was registered testified yesterday that they had not seen Walsh in the registration place. The trial will continue to-day.

TRUSTEES FRAME RULES FOR CARNEGIE PENSIONS

Will Publish List of Eligible Colleges To-day.

TEACHERS TO BE 65 OR OVER

The Foundation's Incorporation Is Enlarged to Admit of Gifts from Other Sources.

The Board of Trustees of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, in whose keeping Mr. Carnegie recently placed a fund of $10,000,000 to afford retiring pensions for teachers in the higher institutions of learning, are trying to devise a system by which the money at their disposal may be put to use.

They met at 542 Fifth Avenue yesterday, but found the pension problem so involved that they were unable to reach a decision and will continue their work to-day.

The scope of the foundation was outlined in the act of incorporation which became a law on March 10, and the first business of the meeting yesterday was the formal change from the Carnegie Foundation under State laws to the Foundation under National laws. The following members of the board were present to participate in this action:

Henry S. Prichett of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, President Hill McClellan Bell of Drake University, Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia, Edwin B. Craighead of Tulane University, W. H. Crawford of Allegheny College, George H. Denny of Washington and Lee University, Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University, Robert A. Franks of Home Trust Company, Arthur T. Hadley of Yale University, Alexander C. Humphreys of Stevens Institute, Edwin H. Hughes of De Pauw College, David S. Jordan of Leland Stanford, Jr., University, Henry C. King of Oberlin, Thomas McClelland of Knox College, S. B. McCormick of Western University of Pennsylvania, William Peterson of McGill University, Samuel Plantz of Lawrence University, Jacob G. Schurman of Cornell University, L. Clarke Seelye of Smith College, Charles F. Thwing of Western Reserve University, Frank A. Vanderlip, Woodrow Wilson of Princeton University, and T. Morris Carnegie, Secretary.

The National incorporation was obtained in order to extend the capitalization, limited under State law to Mr. Carnegie's grant. Under the ne wincorporation donations may be received from other sources.

The meeting considered a definite rule under which the $10,000,000 gift may be administered. The pensions are to be only for teachers of the higher colleges, and none at institutions owned or controlled by religious organizations, or which may receive more than half of their income from a State will benefit. Some of the colleges presided over by Trustees of the fund are excluded from prospective benefit by this provision.

Mr. Vanderlip had collected data to be used as a basis for a pension system, and the Foundation had already received several applications for money from retiring professors, but the task was soon found to be a gigantic one. At 6 o'clock last evening President Pritchett announced that while a code of rules had been drawn they could not be made public, and that the list of institutions to be included within the beneficence would not be ready until to-day.

A list recently prepared embraces 627 colleges and universities which are to benefit by the fund, and from the head of each an opinion as to the best plan for pensions is to be considered. The Trustees are to determine among other things just what curriculum an institution should have to share under the fund, what the standard of its entrance examination shall be, what proportion the pension should bear to the salaries of teachers, the character and length of service required for a pension before a teacher may become eligible, and whether an institution otherwise entitled to share under the rules is sectarian.

It has been suggested that the following grades of pensions be adopted: For an active pay greater than $1,600 an allowance equal to $800, increased by $40 for each $100 of active pay above $1,600; for each additional year of service above twenty-five the retiring allowance shall be increased by 1 per cent. of the active pay. No retiring allowance shall exceed $3,000, and no person under the age of sixty-five, or who has served less than twenty-five years, shall be entitled to the retiring allowance. For active pay of $1,600 or less an allowance of $1,000 is suggested, provided no retiring allowance shall exceed 90 per cent. of the active pay.

President William F. Slocum of Colorado University was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of President Harper of the University of Chicago.

"JAPPY" HAS VANISHED.

And in His Sunday Suit, Too—Wanted to Chase an Auto and Did.

Mrs. A. M. Eisenberg, who lives at the Hotel Belleclaire, has lost "Jappy." He is a dog, breed undetermined, with yellow and white shaggy hair and a bare spot on one hind leg. In Mrs. Eisenberg's eyes, however, he was a dog of parts. He came in for courses of soup and meat at meal times. He also had a suit of clothes, an overcoat, and a beautiful collar of red silk ribbon, which came together in a bow.

Mrs. Eisenberg has no children, so frequently she took Jappy out herself. At other times she intrusted him to her companion, and on rare occasions to one of the colored bellboys. On Sunday morning the bellboy was thus honored.

Now Jappy, when in the street, was never off the leash. But when he saw an automobile and evinced a desire, like other dogs, to chase it, the heart of the colored boy was melted. He undid the leash. That was the last seen of Jappy. He had on his Sunday suit and the tight-fitting harness.

"Mrs. Eisenberg feels the loss very much," said her companion last night. "He was the dearest dog. He could walk all around the room on his hind legs and beg. That's his overcoat hanging on the hat-tree there." And the companion sighed.

"I have been consoling Mrs. Eisenberg as best I could. Jappy hates the weather, and to-day has been awful. I told her I was sure he had found shelter somewhere with kind people. I was sure they would give him something to eat, and I told her so. Even if he was wandering in the rain, he might find a garbage pan, I told her. But I'm afraid his bow will be ruined."

A reward is offered for Jappy. Complaint was made to the police last month that there was an organized gang of men who picked up dogs for ransom on the upper west side. Many dogs belonging to rich people have vanished recently.

NEW McCURDY COMPLAINT.

It Demands $1,000,000 Back—Peabody Replies to Untermyer.

President Charles A. Peabody of the Mutual Life had this to say yesterday referring to the letter given out the night before by Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the International Committee of Policy Holders, charging that Mr. Peabody represented in the Mutual the financial interests among which George F. Baker and H. H. Rogers are important factors:

"I have read the proclamation issued last night by the counsel for Messrs. Lawson and Fish.

"I do not think it needs any extended answer from me. Some of the statements contained in it are true, but the substance I have already contradicted."

When Mr. Untermyer had read Mr. Peabody's statement he said:

"The abortive attempts to connect the International Policy Holders' Committee with Mr. Lawson, notwithstanding the repeated denial of any such connection, seem to be the entire stock in trade of these gentlemen.

"The committee as thus far constituted includes the most illustrious men of the country who have embarked in the movement from the most disinterested motives of public service. It is rapidly being completed. The law postponing the elections in these companies is about ten days old. It takes time to communicate with the foreign representatives. When the full personnel of the committee is announced some gentlemen may regret that they did not wait before speaking."

A new complaint has been prepared by the law department of the Mutual Life relating to the appointment of Robert H. McCurdy as Superintendent of the foreign business of that company. It charges that in 1886, when the appointment was made, Richard A. and Robert H. McCurdy conspired unduly and unjustly to enrich the latter by maintaining his compensation at exorbitant and unconscionable rates.

The complaint alleges that young McCurdy got $530,000 from Charles H. Raymond & Co., the agency firm, from 1883 to 1893, and that when he was made foreign Superintendent he continued his connection with the firm. Then, it is alleged, President McCurdy put his son's compensation as Superintendent on a commission rather than salary basis, thus allowing him to get $1,282,841.66 in commissions. Judgment is demanded for $1,002,841.66, the difference between what young McCurdy actually got and what the Mutual management now considers a fair compensation.

Andrew Hamilton was in town again yesterday.

POISONED, POLICE SAY.

Woman's Death Followed by the Arrest of Two Men.

Laura Williams, a young married woman, was found dead at 110 Ninth Avenue at 7 o'clock last night. The police and Coroner Acretelli believe that she died of poison.

Coroner Acretelli had William H. Cox, who lived at the Ninth Avenue address, and her husband, William W. Williams, a salesman of 345 West Seventeenth Street, locked up in the West Twentieth Street Station to await the result of an autopsy this morning.

Two empty bottles and another bottle containing a small quantity of whisky were found. The contents of the last bottle will also be submitted to chemical analysis.

The woman's life was insured for $130.

HENRY H. HALL DEAD.

Prominent Fire Insurance Man Stricken in His East Orange Home.

Within a few hours of his retirement from the Presidency of the Citizens' Union of East Orange, which held its annual meeting last night, Henry H. Hall, one of the best-known fire insurance men in the country, died suddenly at his home in East Orange yesterday afternoon of heart disease. He was talking with his wife when he was stricken.

Mr. Hall was born in Boston sixty years ago. He engaged in the insurance business there until twenty-one years ago, when he came to New York to become the representative of the Northern Assurance Company of London. Afterward, with William H. Henshaw, he organized the insurance brokerage firm of Hall & Henshaw, and continued in active business until his health failed several months ago.

He had served as President and in other ways with the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and was an authority on fire insurance. He was a member of the Downtown Club of New York, a Director of the New England Society of New York, a Free Mason, and one of the founders of the Arlington Avenue Presbyterian Church of East Orange. He once ran for Mayor of East Orange on a reform ticket, but was defeated. He was a Republican. A widow and five children survive him.

The meeting of the Citizens' Union was adjourned for a week, out of respect to Mr. Hall.

HAGUE CONFERENCE MUDDLE.

Britain and Germany with America for Postponement.

LONDON, April 9.—The United States will have the support of Great Britain in the effort making through diplomatic sources to obtain a postponement of the second Peace Conference at The Hague to a later date than proposed by Russia.

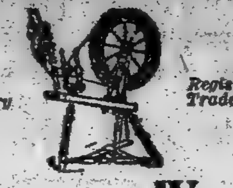
No date has been suggested, and the Foreign Office thinks that a date late in the Fall would be preferable, but it will be guided by what the United States believes necessary in view of the Pan-American Congress.

Great Britain has not appointed delegates to The Hague, and it is understood that she is desirous of having some understanding with the powers as to what questions shall be taken up.

BERLIN, April 9.—The German Government has suggested a postponement of the second Peace Conference at The Hague, in order not to interfere with the Berne (Red Cross) Conference, where the Geneva Convention will be revised.

Chester Academy Burned.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., April 9.—The Chester Academy, one of the oldest institutions of learning in this part of the State(was destroyed by fire at 1 o'clock this morning. The loss is $20,000. Many noted men received their education at the academy. Martin Stewart was injured by jumping from the second story, and Charles S. Murray and William Van Etten were burned about the face while saving books.



WE STORE FURS in what is undoubtedly the most absolutely fireproof building in Greater New York.

The storeroom is equipped with hangers of various shapes, each designed to keep in perfect form the garment to be stored.

A constant current of dustless and dry cold air keeps the temperature well below the freezing point, making impossible the growth of insect life and rendering the fur brilliant and fluffy. A fur expert inspects the furs daily.

The thorough cleansing given to each garment by the vacuum process before and after storing is alone worth the price we charge for storing, which also covers full insurance against moths, fire and burglary.

If you can't come to see the storeroom itself, send for our Free book on "The Proper Care of Furs."

NEW PHASE OPENED UP IN THE PATRICK CASE

LAWYERS GAVE HIM $600

Meanwhile He Was Writing Letters to Texas About the Spiritualism of Old Man Rice.

Corp. Alexander B. Stanberry of the Thirteenth United States Infantry, sent all the way from the Philippines by the Government just to testify for Albert T. Patrick in connection with the motion for a new trial now being heard by Recorder Goff in General Sessions, had no sooner appeared on the stand yesterday afternoon than he managed to furnish a foretaste of the sensation expected ever since a futile effort to withdraw his affidavit was made last Friday by ex-Judge Olcott. Mr. Olcott is counsel for Patrick, who has been convicted of the murder of William Marsh Rice.

Instead of placing his hand on the Bible held out to him by a court attendant as the oath was about to be administered, Stanberry, holding his six feet of muscular, khaki-uniformed body very straight, pushed the book aside and said loudly:

"If I take an oath it will be a false one. I don't believe in Christianity."

"Does the man try to get out of it?" said District Attorney Jerome, enigmatically. He was present with Assistant District Attorney Garvan to question the three new witnesses from Texas offered by Patrick's counsel.

Recorder Goff leaned his white head over toward the soldier and explained in kindly tone that a promise to tell the truth would be just as binding in the eyes of the law as any oath, and that, having gone so far, the witness could refuse to go further only on the ground that his testimony would be likely to incriminate and degrade him. Thereupon Corporal Stanberry uttered a sullen "yes" in response to the simple affirmation read to him by the Court Clerk.

He Worked for Rice.

Without any preliminaries at all beyond a quick ascertainment that the witness had been employed by the late Mr. Rice as "laborer, clerk, and secretary," Mr. Jerome placed before him in rapid succession a series of letters, demanding to know if they had been written by him to one Peter or Philip Weasch of Houston, Texas. Stanberry squirmed, but was gradually forced to admit his authorship of one letter after another. Two or three times he declared that "he must insist on having certain parts of the letters excepted," and once he rose to his feet and appealed to the court "not to have outside persons dragged in," but his attempts did not accomplish anything.

The letters threw light on a little-known phase of the litigation, criminal and civil, which followed the death of Rice, who left an estate of about $3,000,000 covered by two wills. According to the letters and testimony drawn from Stanberry while on the stand, he spent many weeks in this city in the Spring and Summer of 1901 at the expense of some of the Eastern heirs to the estate who had received much in what is known as "the Baker will of '96." This will, later declared valid by the courts to the exclusion of the forged "Patrick will," gave the bulk of the property to a fund for the establishment of a spiritualist institute in Texas and made a man named Baker executor. As far as Stanberry could be made to recollect on the stand yesterday, he was paid $600 for "expenses," the payment coming from De Lancey Nicoll and William P. Dewey, and he went every day while in New York to the office of Davies, Stone & Auerbach. Mr. Nicoll, Mr. Dewey, and Mr. Auerbach were all connected with the contest of the '96 will.

Said He Knew About the Will.

It was made evident from the replies drawn by Mr. Jerome from the witness yesterday that the former private secretary of Rice had been trying to make the attorneys for the contesting heirs believe that he had information showing how the will of '96 came to be made. Most of the light on Stanberry's operations was shed by a letter which he admitted having written in February, 1901, to the man Weasch, his companion at Houston. In substance this letter read:

> Things are progressing fine up here. I dont intend to "cough up" until others do so first. Pete, try to remember the circumstances regarding Mr. Rice at time of our acquaintance in the Houston
> You know you was a spiritualist and I know you are one, I will probably be down in Texas soon, and will see you then.
> To-morrow I get another $125 cheque to cover all expences and transactions to date. As yet they have not rec'd my diary, nor have I told them everything I know—in fact nothing to amount to anything has transpired. Now, the 125 will be practically clear, as I have paid everything up here and owe no one. Holt will pay the 17 rent and 8. payment on furniture, leaves me fairly clear with the 1 & ½. Now I want to soak all I can the next few months. Will probably make a deal with them about the 10th of March. Now be careful of this letter—burn it is best I guess. The fight here is on the '96 Baker will giving most of money to Institute.
>
> "Line of Battle:"
>
> First: Legal points and etc.—that relatives are entitled to money instead of institute where they are not concerned.
>
> Second: That the old man was a spiritualist, and thought he could control the institute after death as well as alive.
>
> Third: That Baker influenced Mr. Rice to leave money to institute and could communicate to him, and tell how to manage it.
>
> Fourth: That Baker is not a spiritualist and never was therefore gained exectuiveship through fraud.
>
> Now Pete you will come in on this thing, for we will want to corroborate some of my testimony and also probably some of Charles Jones regarding the old man being a spiritualist and Baker not being one.
>
> These people have a strong case if you and I stand pat, which we will, but then—well—

"Were You Ever Convicted?"

Having a minute earlier remarked that he wanted "to be frank all the way true" as he pointed out that an "about" relating to some fixing of time had been dropped from one of his sworn affidavits, Stanberry suddenly balked completely when Mr. Jerome endeavored to make him tell what the four points of the "line of battle" signified. This drew from Mr. Jerome the sudden inquiry:

"Were you ever convicted?"

The bronzed face of the man on the stand grew pale and his big hands twisted nervously.

"If you are not frank," Mr. Jerome resumed, "I shall put that question straight to you—and you know what will happen to you if I do."

"I'll be frank," said the witness, quickly. But in another moment he was on his feet once more, crying to the court:

"Can all kinds of things be dragged in against a fellow? I don't think I should be browbeaten."

Then followed the exhibition and identification of the other letters. Stanberry acknowledged in some cases a part of a page, while persisting in doubting his authorship of the rest of that same page. But all the letters were admitted in their entirety. One of them was a mere six-line note, headed "Burn this letter" and ending with the postscript:

Remember, You're a Spiritualist.

"Please remember that you are a Spiritualist and you have often conversed with Mr. Rice on the subject."

The most important passages in two other letters are:

> Now, I will explain how I am situated—have been dickering with those "Yankees" for the whole amt. due me. They offered me 250. but I refused, and let them understand I was organizing a company to go to Veneuzuela and aid in the discovery of gold and copper in the La Parime mountains at the source of the Orinoko River. Of course, it is a bluff, but it worked, as enclosed telegram signifies. [Dated Aug. 8, 1901.]
> Mr. Ganot was here yesterday morning, & said he had seen you at M. K. & G. Depot as you were going—He has given me a statement, which he wants you to send to him signed—Now before you do this let me know just what passed between you two at the depot—as near word for word as you can remember. Then I can judge more ably how matters stand. We don't want to give up our trumps & not get anything—One of the trumps is your signed deposition—another is Bowley's, & another is mine. Let me know if he wanted you to sign paper at train etc. & what answer you gave. * * * You must not communicate with Ganot yet, as it may complicate matters—best not to give him any of your handwriting yet at all. * * * Guess you had better destroy this letter, Pete as it alludes to things not to be read of by others. [Dated Aug. 20, 1901.]

Stanberry said that the Holt mentioned in the letters was one of the contesting heirs who had arranged for his going to New York, and that Ganot was a lawyer connected with one of the firms representing the Eastern heirs to the estate. He explained that the talk about Mr. Rice's spiritualism had originated in some question put to him either by Mr. Nicoll or Mr. Auerbach. As to other details his memory was very vague. The examination of Stanberry will be resumed this afternoon.

FOOD.

DECAYED STARCH

A Food Problem.

An Asheville man tells how right food did that which medicines had failed to accomplish:

"For more than 15 years," he says, "I was afflicted with stomach trouble and intestinal indigestion, gas forming in stomach and bowels and giving me great distress. These conditions were undoubtedly due to the starchy food I ate, white bread, potatoes, etc., and didn't digest. I grew worse with time, till, 2 years ago, I had an attack which the doctor diagnosed as appendicitis. When the surgeon operated on me, however, it was found that my trouble was an ulcer of the pancreas instead of appendicitis.

"Since that time I have had several such attacks, suffering death, almost. The last attack was about 3 months ago, and I endured untold agonies.

"The doctor then said that I would have to eat less starchy stuff, so I began the use of Grape-Nuts food, for I knew it to be pre-digested, and have continued same with most gratifying results. It has built me up wonderfully. I gained 10 pounds in the first 8 weeks that I used Grape-Nuts, my general health is better than ever before, my brain is clearer, and my nerves stronger.

"For breakfast and dinner, each, I take 4 teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with cream, a small slice of dry toast, an egg soft boiled, and a cup of Postum; and I make the evening meal on Grape-Nuts and cream alone—this gives me a good night's rest and I am well again." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

WHAT BROOKLYN NEEDS.

Some High-Toned Funerals, Says Metz, After Hearing Sewer Fraud Case.

Controller Metz was in ruminant mood yesterday after spending an hour in court in Brooklyn listening to the evidence in the sewer fraud cases.

"What Brooklyn needs," he said, "is a few high-toned funerals. When they've happened Brooklyn will become a part of New York. Brooklyn seems to have been entirely built up by private interests with public pulls. Every time you uncover anything that ought to be reformed you strike a wire leading into some newspaper office."

The trial of Lawyer William O. Miles and five other men, charged with conspiracy to defraud the city by fraudulent sewer damage claims, was continued in the County Court, Brooklyn, yesterday. Evidence was given that Miles was treated very easily by Martin J. McMahon, chief examiner of sewer claims in the office of the Controller.

McMahon, who is indicted with Miles, took care, it is asserted, to mark all of the claims emanating from Miles's office in the most favorable manner.

The trial was adjourned early in the afternoon that District Attorney Clarke might take the deposition of a witness who is ill. He is Patrick O'Toole of 96 Fourth Avenue, whom Mr. Clarke characterized as an unwilling witness. O'Toole is said to have met McMahon in Miles's office to be examined in regard to a claim for damages amounting to $7,500. Previous to the meeting McMahon, it is said, recommended an allowance of $670 in the O'Toole case, but afterward made another report allowing $3,100. The claim was settled for $2,000.

BUBONIC IN PHILADELPHIA.

Four of Crew of Bombay Steamer Have the True Plague.

PHILADELPHIA, April 9.—Bubonic plague is the disease from which four members of the crew of the British steamship Burrsfield, lying off Reedy Island Quarantine Station, are suffering. This has been determined by Major John F. Anderson, Surgeon, of the Marine Hospital Service.

Dr. Anderson came here on Friday and obtained cultures. These, he says, prove the true nature of the disease. The victims are in an isolation ward and the steamship on which the remainder of the crew are held is anchored in midstream. She will stay there fifteen days until the time for the disease to show itself has expired.

Dr. Fairfax Irwin, surgeon in the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service at Reedy Island, said that there was absolutely no danger of the plague spreading to this city or any part of the country. The Burrsfield left Bombay fifty-three days ago. Two of the crew died on the voyage.

Six Months for Breaking a Switch.

Magistrate Wahle in the Westchester Court said yesterday he regretted that he could not impose a heavier penalty than imprisonment for six months in jail upon Arino Marlino, Aquitine Calorqui, Carmel Lotator, and Gilio Marnzoro, charged with having broken a switch on the Harlem Division of the New York Central last night. The break was discovered in time to avert an accident.

Tug Sinks and Drowns Fireman.

The tug Robert A. Scott, owned by the Cornell Steamboat Company, with offices at the foot of West Fifty-first Street, turned turtle and sank at the foot of Fulton Street and the East River Sunday night. Capt. Michael Klein and Fireman Thomas Fallon were carried down with her. Fallon was drowned.

TRIED TO EXTORT $500 AS PRICE OF SILENCE

MET ON RAILWAY TRACKS

"You've Got What I Ought to Have Had," Hawkins Told Fuller at Headquarters.

Homer Hawkins, a young train clerk in the Mott Haven yard of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, was arrested under dramatic circumstances yesterday afternoon at the Melrose Station, 161st Street, and locked up in Police Headquarters on the charge of attempted blackmail. The complainant is Louis R. Fuller, a Harvard graduate, who is in business with his father in a health food concern at 61 Fifth Avenue. The men are related. The police say that Hawkins is a nephew of the elder Fuller.

According to Inspector McLaughlin's men the blackmail was based upon the threat of disclosures by Hawkins that would jeopardise Fuller's engagement to marry. The threat was contained in letters sent to Fuller, and a "personal" in a newspaper last Sunday morning paved the way for the payment of $500 as the price of silence.

When Hawkins was arraigned at Police Headquarters Fuller asked him, "What have I done that you should have acted this way?"

"Well," replied Hawkins, "you've got what I ought to have had, including your education."

Hawkins said he lived at 352 Mott Avenue, and that he had done what he had because he needed money for his mother, who lived at the northwest corner of Columbus Avenue and Eighty-eighth Street.

No Such Person Lives There.

Fuller went to Inspector McLaughlin last Friday, saying that he had received an anonymous letter, and that he wanted the writer apprehended. He showed the following letter that he had received:

> Dear Sir: I desire to borrow from you the sum of $500, (five hundred dollars.) I will expect to see in next Sunday's Herald a personal from you saying that you will let me have this sum, and I will later send you word where to send it. * * * Expecting I will hear from you, I remain, Yours respectfully, A. B. C.

Inspector McLaughlin had a personal inserted reading as follows:

> A. B. C.: Letter received O. K. Send directions. L. R. F.

Yesterday morning Fuller received the following:

> Dear Sir: Take the 3:34 P. M. train out of the Grand Central Station, (New York Central.) Get off at Melrose Station and walk up the track alone. You will note, ask no questions, simply place in messenger's hand the money in gold coin and these letters you have received. If anyone is with you or these instructions are not carried out to the letter, it will be a signal for a letter to be sent to the address mentioned. But, on the other hand, you do as you are told, you will not be bothered now or in the future. Remember, 3:34 P. M. Monday out of Grand Central Station. A. B. C.
> P. S.—Walk up track until you are stopped. Lest you misunderstand, I will add, walk up track in direction train goes, and a man will come up and say to you, "Mr. Fuller." You will answer and hand over the money, walk on to the next station and wait for the next train going down. A. B. C.

This letter took Fuller to Headquarters. Detective Sergts. Cary, Rheaume, and McCafferty of the Central Office were detailed on the case. Cary and Rheaume went up to Melrose and waited a short distance away from the station about an hour before Fuller, with McCafferty, boarded the train as the letter directed.

The Melrose station is below the street, and a bridge crosses the tracks at this point. On the bridge McCafferty stationed himself, leaving Fuller to walk up the track, as directed. McCafferty saw a man pass Fuller, then wheel and approach him. The detective ran up just in time to hear Hawkins say, angrily: "Why, there's only $30. I won't take it."

"You're my prisoner," said McCafferty.

"Here's something you may as well take, too," said Hawkins, indicating a revolver.

Fuller is a son of Dr. Fuller, who was Territorial Governor of Utah in Lincoln's Administration. He married a sister of Jacob H. Thompson, who was murdered on the night of Sept. 1 last at his rooms in the St. James Hotel. The family is well known in Madison, N. J., where it has lived for several years.

The admiration of the detectives was aroused by the place chosen for the meeting: There are a number of "getaway" openings there.

MacDOWELL CLUB MEETS.

Will Honor the Composer's Name Suitably—Mr. Gilder Reads a New Poem.

One hundred members of The MacDowell Club, composed of men and women who are active in the drama, literature, music, architecture, painting, and sculpture, attended the fourth meeting of the organization at Carnegie Hall last evening. It was intended that plans for some suitable memorial in honor of Edward MacDowell, the composer, in whose honor the society was named, should be discussed, but owing to the rather sparse attendance most of the business part of the programme was dispensed with.

Henry Rutgers Marshall, the Treasurer, said that it was proposed to do something worthy of the organization in the way of honoring Mr. MacDowell.

Herbert Adams, the sculptor, in a five-minute address on the "Aspects of Sculpture," spoke of the work done to make the exhibition of sculpture to be held here in about a year the finest seen in this country. E. H. Blashfield spoke of fraternalism among painters, and Richard Watson Gilder read a new poem, "The Voice."

The musical part of the programme was furnished by Sigismund Stojowski, the pianist, who gave three of his own compositions, and Miss Maud Powell and Howard Brockway, who played several of Mr. Brockway's own compositions with Miss Powell as violinist and Mr. Brockway as pianist.

WILL AID DESTITUTE BABIES.

Mothers' Club to Supply Layettes for the Needy Poor.

The New York City Mothers' Club is instituting a reform. It does not convey it in so many words, but promises the members an era of practical work. The club inaugurates the movement with an old-fashioned sewing class. The first step has been taken by organizing what is called a Layette Committee. This action was announced at the club's regular meeting yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria. The committee will find the needy mothers of the city and provide clothing for their babies.

There are many babies in this city who lack even a blanket to be wrapped in when they are born. These babies, the Mothers' Club decided, needed their help more than any one else in the city. To provide the garments there will be a sewing day in addition to the regular days when the club meets, and the members will bring to these meetings materials and cut and make everything that a baby needs for its first wardrobe. Every city visitor knows of destitute babies in the city, and through the charity organizations the club will find its charges. All the members will be expected to sewing class and either work themselves or contribute from the out-grown wardrobes of their own babies.

Dr. William H. MacEastline was the speaker at yesterday's meeting, and told the mothers of the need of physical education for the children in the schools.

ONE-MAN, ONE-MA'AM SHOWS.

DRAWINGS BY A. B. FROST.

The pen-and-ink illustrations by A. B. Frost at the Keppel Galleries, 4 East Thirty-ninth Street, are more than a hundred in number and are all in the comic vein, since they are meant as pictorial by-play for "Rudder Grange," the most popular book by the late Frank Stockton; also for the Bre'r Rabbit stories by Joel Chandler Harris and for "Red Saunders's Pets and Other Critters," by Henry Wallace Phillips. Mr. Frost is perhaps known to a wider circle through his humorous illustrations than through his large water colors and paintings of sportsmen, gunners, and fishermen with rod and line. He has a pleasant vein of humor, and when he exaggerates for comic effect he does not distort his figures in the way of some caricaturists, who pursue the easy but very coarse and cheap method of making bulging heads, eyes that protrude, enormous hands and feet, &c., thus outclowning the circus clown.

He dresses up his beasts and puts them on their hind legs and gives them human expressions. Thus, No. 132, "The Pig Looked Up and Smiled," is a pig of correct physical parts, but a pig with a waggish expression as he foresees the end of the conceited ram. Thus, Br'er Rabbit wears jacket and trousers, but he is a rabbit, although both face and figure express excruciating joy and malice; see No. 9, "An Laughin' Fit ter Kill."

Comic is the disconsolate lion, standing on his hind legs, wrapped in a blanket, moaning, "Dey Ain't No Fun Bein' a King." Misery in a furry creature is well given in Br'er Rabbit's appearance after his involuntary ducking, (24)—"He Wonder How in de Worl' Dat Plain Water Kin Be So Watery!"—and few artists can boast of a better beast-goblin than the animated skin in the veracious story of "Taily-Po." "I'm a-Comin' fer ter Git My Taily-Po!" and "Off Dey Went a-Flyin'" are scenes of darkness in which the cat spooks all but emit blood-curdling screams. They are not good for small persons to ponder just before going to bed.

Mule jokes exactly like those liberally provided in the colored supplements of Sunday papers appear to have been among the early comedy stuff supplied by Mr. Frost. For instance, the mule is cured of kicking by his negro master in one fytte. He finds an old iron figure of a man, hangs it with clothes, and leaves the mule where he can reach it with his heels. Imitation is the sincerest flattery. More restrained, as befits the book, are the "Rudder Grange" illustrations. One can easily see how these designs have lost by reduction so as to be small enough to suit the little volume.

At the same galleries, Mrs. Kate Rogers Nowell is exhibiting eighteen portraits in charcoal and red chalk and combinations. The best is a bust likeness of the Rev. Dr. Rainsford, unless the head of Mark Twain should dispute first place. Mrs. Nowell is by no means always able to seize the personality of her sitters and express it easily and clearly. Her portraits of women are apt to be too formal and pretty-pretty. Franz Arens has a certain strength and burly verisimilitude, but in her likeness of Miss Edith Thomas she misses the ascetic look and the vigorous personal modeling of the face. In a preface to the little catalogue Mr. William Walton says: "It is the art of portraiture reduced to its very simplest expression, without any of the furnishings of the painter in oil—his color scheme, his decorative arrangement, his effect of light, his obtrusion of his own personality in all the refinements and exploitations of his most complex and difficult technical expression. In drawings like these, all these advantages are renounced. The artist undertakes to present the individuality of the sitter sympathetically only, not extraneously—almost, as it were, by telepathy."

DEMING'S INDIANS.

Mr. Edwin Willard Deming holds the small new hall at 11 East Thirty-third Street, called the Modern Gallery, with a score of oil paintings of the American Indian and half a dozen little bronzes of wild beasts. The Indian belongs to North America, and the landscapes are those in the West, such as "The Blackfoot Promised Land," through which a band of Indians plods, forever looking for, and never finding, rest.

Chinook fishermen speed through the moonlight in a high-prowed canoe, ready to seize the salmon. "Prayer to the Manes of the Dead" shows the curious custom of Finns, Lapps, Samoyeds, Ainus, and some Indian tribes of deprecating the anger of the soul of a bear after the beast is killed. Songs are sung and ceremonies performed to counteract the violation of that tabu, laid on persons of these tribes, which makes the killing of a bear a religious crime. Similarly the old Britons sacrificed when they killed a hare or a duck, and the Gauls, when, for religious purposes only, they slew and ate the horse.

Mr. Deming has a taste for the study of antique man; he's a bit of an anthropologist. Here is "The Man of the Stone Age," several of him, and here "The Vision" and "The Omen," representing the spiritual side of the Indian. "Hunter's Offering to the New Moon" and "The Home of the Grand Mystery" are in somewhat the same realm. Notable sketches are "Dawn in God's Country," "Phantom of the Pines," "Water in the Desert," and "Moonlight in the Foothills."

BONDS FOR SCHOOL REPAIRS.

Bill Provides for $1,000,000 Issue to Remedy an Error in the Budget.

To rectify an error in cutting the Board of Education's budgets for 1905 and 1906, the Board of Estimate has had a bill introduced in the Legislature which authorizes the issuance of $1,000,000 city revenue bonds. These bonds are to be turned over to the Board of Education for general repairs, principally in school buildings.

Auditor Henry M. Cook of the Board of Education went to Albany yesterday to urge the measure.

Richard Adams, Chairman of the Committee on Buildings of the Board of Education, is mainly responsible for having the Board of Estimate take the step it has. He convinced the Controller that the error had been made and that it could only be rectified by the issuance of city revenue bonds.

The bill is necessary because under the charter the Board of Estimate can issue only $2,000,000 of city revenue bonds per year. Several contractors who did work for the city are waiting for their money.

Water Supply Board Spent $33,500.

According to The City Record, the new Board of Water Supply spent $33,525 in March and incurred other liabilities amounting to $12,898. Of the amount spent, more than $25,000 went for the salaries of the Commissioners, secretaries, and engineers.

Shoshone Opening Postponed.

The passenger department of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway announces that the opening of the Wind River, or Shoshone, Reservation public lands in Wyoming has been postponed to Aug. 15 by joint resolution of Congress. The new railroad to the reservation will be completed in a few weeks.

C. O. D. TO WASHINGTON, N. J.

Lots of Goods Sent There Recently on False Orders.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, N. J., April 9.—When Richard B. Ellis left Washington two months ago he vowed that he would get even with this town. He came here from Mexico and worked for several months as a tailor for Samuel W. Cyphers. He held the place until he was arrested on several charges, including disorderly conduct, assault and battery, and getting money under false pretenses. The December Grand Jury indicted him on the last charge, but he got clear when his counsel proved that the prosecution had failed to show that Ellis did not have $600 in a New York bank, as he had said he had when he had got some goods. Ellis had been held in jail several months, and when he was discharged he was very bitter against the town and those who had complained against him.

About a month after Ellis left town Mr. Cyphers, the tailor, received a consignment of goods from a New York department store, along with a bill for $112. The next day came a consignment of clothing from another store, with a bill for $149.50. Before shipping the goods these firms had telephoned the First National Bank here and learned that Mr. Cyphers was all right.

An investigation made by Mr. Cyphers and the police in New York showed that the only way in which the man who ordered the goods had profited was in getting a small consignment of goods and taking them with him.

MISHAPS OF THE PASSOVER.

Haste to Prepare for the Holiday Leads Many Jews Into Trouble.

The feast of Passover was observed in every orthodox Jewish household in the city last night, and several people about town in their efforts to prepare for the festival got into trouble. Mrs. Sarah Orenstein, while endeavoring to make her home look as spick and span as a man-o'-war's messroom, forgot to replace a piece of tubing which she had taken from a gas stove to clean. She and her two children were almost asphyxiated before the head of the family discovered the escaping gas. An ambulance surgeon revived the woman and her children.

In the Harlem Police Court Magistrate Cornell imposed fines on eight orthodox Jews who worked on the Christian Sabbath on a new building at 139th Street and Hamilton Place. The men explained that they wanted to hurry along the work, as their Passover holidays were at hand. Magistrate Cornell fined them.

He also fined Michael Garlick, who killed chickens on Sunday. Garlick said that on Saturday night his boss telephoned to Deputy Police Commissioner Waldo asking if it would be safe to kill chickens on Sunday in view of the approach of the Passover. Mr. Waldo, according to the defendant, said it would be all right. Magistrate Cornell told Garlick that Waldo had no right to interpret the law.

TELLS OF KIDNAPPERS.

Nosser Says Two Men Tried to Steal His Children.

Charles Nosser of 174 East Seventy-sixth Street reported to the police of the East Sixty-seventh Street last night that he believed an attempt had been made to kidnap his son Henry, aged 10, and his daughter Gertrude, 5 years old, yesterday afternoon, while the children were on their way home from school. Both children attend the Normal School in Park Avenue between Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth Streets.

The children say they had reached the corner of Seventy-second Street and Lexington Avenue, when two men approached them. One was a negro who wore a slouch hat, and the other looked like an Italian. The negro grabbed the little girl and the Italian the little boy. The children screamed and the conductor of a passing Lexington Avenue car stopped his car and ran to help them.

The men dropped the children and took to their heels up Lexington Avenue. No policeman was in sight.

FUNERAL SERVICE INSTEAD.

Sunday Evening Programme of a Brooklyn Church Changed by Death.

The usual service in the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, on Sunday evening, was turned into a funeral service for Hugh E. Williams, bass soloist of the choir of the church, who died on Sunday morning. Mr. Williams died in the Hahnemann Hospital, Manhattan, of appendicitis.

As the body was to be shipped Sunday night to Waukesha, Wis., where Mr. Williams's parents live, arrangements for funeral services at the church were hurriedly made.

Mr. Williams was born at Genesee, Wis., thirty-four years ago. He had been the bass soloist in the choir of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church for eight years and was also a leading member of the Apollo Club.

Burglars Missed $2,500.

It was discovered yesterday morning that the clothing store of Browning, King & Co., at Fulton Street and De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn, had been entered on Sunday by burglars, who had failed to break open a safe containing $2,500. The cracksmen had knocked off the combination plate and knob, and also the door knob of the safe, but had, apparently, been frightened away before they could proceed further.

Temporary P. O. in Wanamaker's.

A new temporary Post Office station, to take the place of Station D, at Third Avenue, between Eighth and Ninth Streets, which was burned out Saturday, will be opened immediately in Wanamaker's store, on the Astor Place side. The temporary station will be maintained until the old station can be refitted.

Police Ask to Have Moffat Held for Further Investigation.

Frank Moffatt of 18 West Forty-eighth Street, who was arrested on Sunday night on suspicion of his having been implicated in the burglary of Dr. Abraham Jacobi's house, at 19 East Forty-seventh Street, was arraigned in Yorkville Court yesterday. Magistrate Mayo remanded him in $2,000 bail at the request of Detectives Summers and Conroy of the East Fifty-first Street Police Station, who said they needed forty-eight hours more in which to investigate the case.

After the burglary at Dr. Jacobi's house it was found that footprints in the back yard led to the boarding house at 18 East Forty-eighth Street, kept by a Mrs. Mary Devereaux. Moffatt's shoes fitted the marks. He was arrested, and in his pockets pawn tickets and a small amount of money were found. No trace of the silverware stolen from Dr. Jacobi was found either in his room or on his person.

HELD UP IN NOON-DAY CROWD.

Stranger Hit Glatz with a Lead Pipe When He Wouldn't Drink.

Adolph Glatz, a New Rochelle upholsterer, came to town yesterday to purchase goods. About noon he was walking along West Broadway, near Canal Street, which was crowded with men and women walking in the rain. A man who was walking beside Glatz started a conversation:

"Bad weather, eh?" he said.

"Certainly is," responded Glatz, "worst I ever say for April."

"S'pose we stop and have a drink; it'll kill a cold," suggested the stranger.

"Nothing doing," answered Glatz, becoming suspicious. "When I want drinks I buy them, and I don't drink with strangers, either."

He hurried on, and half a block further down the street the man struck him on the back of the head with a piece of gas pipe. William Helfrich of 51 Third Street, Brooklyn, saw the assult and yelled for the police. Patrolman McGuire of the Leonard Street Station saw two men running away. He caught one of them at Church and Walker Streets, and in the Tombs Court he told Magistrate Whitman he was Luigi Delawisa, a driver, of 39 Bowery. Glatz identified Delawisa, and the Magistrate held him for the Grand Jury. McGuire said it was the second daylight holdup in the neighborhood within a week.

WOULD LIKE CARNEGIE COOKS.

Minerva Club Thinks Culinary Endowment as Good as Libraries.

Good cooks are the great need of to-day, and if Andrew Carnegie will provide the means for making them he will do as much good as in giving the people books to read.

That is what the Minerva Club decided at its semi-monthly meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday afternoon. It was Miss Mary Hamill who made the suggestion. Miss Hamill talked upon "Current Events" and the wave of crime which she said is just now sweeping over the city and country.

"One of the chief causes of crime," said Miss Hamill, "is the lack of proper nourishment among the poorer classes of society. People who are not sufficiently nourished are not in a normal condition of body or mind. They yield to temptations which do not come to the well fed, and a practical knowledge of cooking would do more than anything else to decrease the ratio of crime."

"If Mr. Carnegie would endow $5,000 chairs of cooking that the poorer people might be taught through the schools and outside them how to make the best selections in food materials and how to cook them properly they would be better physically, morally and financially."

"Self-government is more needed than city, State, or country government," Howard McNutt told the Minervas, "for a people who understand how to govern themselves will govern their country well."

"They talk of the rich man's trusts," said Mme. Marie Cross Newhaus, "the coal, the mining, and the insurance troubles, but the poor man has the most objectionable trust of all—the labor union—which keeps many men out of honest work. It is only when we have gone to too great extremes that the Government will interfere, take over many things now in the hands of corporations, and conditions will be bettered."

TO TRACE BY FINGER PRINT.

Police Send Johnson's to London as a Means of Identifying Him.

Henry Johnson, describing himself as an engineer, who was arrested last Thursday evening charged with unlawfully entering the Waldorf-Astoria, will be arraigned before Magistrate Steinert in Jefferson Market Court this morning.

Inspector McLaughlin says that on the prisoner was found a clipping from a New York newspaper which read: "London. The thief who robbed Lady Gilbert Parker, formerly Miss Anna Valentine of New York, of £800 has probably sailed for New York."

It is thought by the police that Johnson is the man referred to in the clipping, and, for the first time in the history of the New York Police Department, imprints of fingers have been sent to the London police to see if by this means Johnson can be identified. The finger-print department has just been organized at headquarters.

The police say that pawn tickets found in Johnson's room in Hudson Street are for jewelry stolen from the Waldorf.

George Gould Called to Testify.

George J. Gould is scheduled to appear before Justice Sutherland in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn to-day as a witness for the defendant in the action brought by Morris C. Menges against Gen. Louis Fitzgerald for $1,000,000. Menges alleges that this sum is due him, under an agreement with Gen. Fitzgerald, for information which enabled the defendant to obtain a controlling interest in the Western Maryland Railroad.

SILAS STRONG

The man who always hoped for "better times" and who used to say often "Strong's ahed," by which he meant to indicate that in his fight with Satan he had at least temporary advantage. Go with him on the trail to happiness and hear his quaint old songs and listen to the tale of The Mellered Bear and The Peppered Raccoon. You will laugh with him and now and then feel a touch of deep pathos. And you will see the beauty of God's land and feel its restfulness and smell its perfumes.

A distinguished college president says of this story: "It is a clean, sweet human book—a dear story and a decent protest. The shadows of the great woods are in it and the smell of the balsams and the clean lily pads."

CHILDREN FILLED IN NAMES.

Assemblyman Eckmann Explains How His Petition Was Prepared.

Assistant District Attorney Kresel, who is investigating the alleged fraud connected with the making out of the petition by which William R. Hearst was nominated for Mayor last Fall, learned yesterday that the petition nominating Assemblyman Max Eckmann on the Municipal Ownership ticket was copied out at Eckmann's home, 431½ Grand Street, by his son and his three daughters, the youngest of whom is 11 years old.

Eckmann and his four children had a long talk with Mr. Kresel yesterday afternoon. They made no attempt to deny the manner in which the petition had been prepared. There was some delay, it seems, in getting the proper petition blanks printed. While waiting for these Eckmann had names collected on ordinary sheets of paper. When, at the eleventh hour, the blanks arrived he set his children at filling them out from the sheets he had.

As there was not a sufficient number of signatures more were copied from the petition filed for the nomination of James J. Smith for Alderman. This petition was prepared by Benjamin M. Goldberger, the clerk now under arrest charged with filing a forged petition on behalf of Hearst.

Alderman Smith went around to see Mr. Kresel yesterday, too, and so did Jacob Newstead, Republican leader in the Twelfth District.

THE SURPRISE IN RUSSIA.

Though the eyes of the press in all parts of the world have been riveted upon Russia for more than a year, and the Governments of Europe have had their expert observers diligently at work to find out such currents as could be traced in the whirling movements of the popular mind, the results of Sunday's elections have come to us all as a startling surprise. For almost anything in the way of violent action or reaction we were prepared, but the shrewdest among us had not expected that over the immense and varied area of the empire one-half of the Russian people could work political machinery absolutely novel to them to produce a manifestation of fairly definite opinion and sentiment in the direction of orderly reform with a sobriety and a degree of unity and co-operation that would do credit to a nation experienced in representative institutions.

The amazing thing in the situation is the plain proof given of the capacity of the widely differing classes of the Russian people for effective organization and of the actual extent to which organization has been carried. We called attention to indications in this direction at the time of the extraordinary strikes on the railways and in the chief industries of Northwestern Russia some months ago. It was then extremely puzzling to reconcile the reports the world had had as to the character and ignorance of the Russian workmen with the efficiency they showed in conducting a movement, futile it is true, but maintained over a vast territory for a long time by means of united action and sacrifice on the part of hundreds of thousands of men theretofore unused to the difficult requirements of such common effort.

But that was a phenomenon far less wonderful and less significant than the one now presented to our study. The political machinery created by the Russian Government for the selection of a Parliament was intricate, intentionally clumsy, not easily understood, and meant to confuse rather than to guide what desires the people might really have. It has never been fully described, but it was plainly devised, through its successive processes of sifting, to afford to the bureaucracy ample opportunity to exert pressure, and, that failing, to pervert the choice of the people. The members of the National Parliament elected on Sunday were chosen by electoral colleges the members of which were themselves chosen by numerous assemblies, local, provincial, professional, and class. The members of Parliament are, therefore, the product of at least three siftings, and the vote of the people, so far as it was permitted at all, was narrowly limited. Yet out of this complex and tangled process there issues a body of representatives for the National Parliament, from nearly one-half of the provinces, absolutely opposed to reactionary government and determined on substantial change. It is the most remarkable event in the political history of modern times.

No one can say precisely what immediately will come of it. The new representatives chosen are National Democrats and Progressives. How they differ among themselves is not yet known. When they take their places in the Douma their powers will still be very limited. Above them will be the Council of the Empire, practically selected by the Czar and his chosen advisers, and still higher will be the autocratic power of the Czar himself. But the one solid, indisputable fact will remain that the Czar appealed to his people to tell him, under great restrictions, what they wished, and despite these restrictions they answer as with one voice that they desire in effect the transfer of autocratic power to their representatives. Will he surrender to that demand, or will he dissolve the Douma and in face of this tremendous demonstration resort to the hopeless processes of repression? Will he choose peace or war?

THE BURDEN OF RICHES.

Curiously enough, we had on the same day, to wit, last Sunday, some philosophical remarks and some expert testimony on the drawbacks of great riches. The philosophy was delivered by Mr. HUGHES in the course of his address before the Ethical Culture Society:

> A great deal has been worthily said on the comparatively few advantages of great wealth, but the truth is that few, except the very rich, appreciate the justice of the argument.

The expert testimony was given by Mr. JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, Jr., to his Bible class, as follows:

> Don't make the mistake of believing that in the possession of things there is happiness. There is no real, permanent happiness in mere possession. Take my word for it, having wealth does not mean having happiness.

This testimony should be consolatory to many persons. The comparative disadvantages of having no appetite for your breakfast and of having no breakfast for your appetite have often been mooted. But that is only the simplest phase of the matter. Young Mr. ROCKEFELLER is in a position to speak very feelingly. His father's present or at least recent state is not calculated to excite the envy of anybody. No man can enjoy evading legal process. To many men, of whom Mr. ROCKEFELLER is apparently one, the mere notoriety of exorbitant wealth is very distasteful, and the prospect of facing a battery of kodaks whenever one appears in public is a really dreadful ordeal. It is probable, however, that many of young Mr. ROCKEFELLER's hearers, and more of his readers, would prefer to experience the disadvantages of great possessions than to "take his word" for them. But even such skeptics should be assured when they consider that the only conspicuously rich American who also makes the impression of being a very happy man is Mr. ANDREW CARNEGIE, and that he is engaged in disburdening himself of his superfluous riches "with all convenient speed."

VESUVIUS.

It is 1,827 years since the activity of Mount Vesuvius has been so pernicious as it has become within the last few days. Of the former and far more dreadful eruption we print to-day the classical account from the pen of the younger PLINY, a piece of "special correspondence" which the present disaster is not likely to elicit anything to equal in literary value and lasting interest.

Of course in horror this present eruption is not for a moment to be compared with that of A. D. 79, which submerged cities before their inhabitants could escape. Nay, in recent times the disasters of Ischia and of Mont Pelée were far more destructive convulsions of nature. The sudden belchings of the fires of the under world which destroyed Pompeii and Herculaneum and laid waste Martinique had little indeed in common with the languid discharge of the most famous crater in the world, exuding its flood of lazy lava in a progress almost more glacial than volcanic. So gradual is its march, so timely its warning, that the loss of human life seems to be trifling in comparison with the magnitude of the convulsion. Even with the rude means of transport at their command the peasants whose cabins and plantations a week ago made spots of color on the slopes of the great mountain had ample time to flee before the flood. The flood simply rolled over their abandoned farmsteads, and made a "clean slate" of what had been their abodes.

There is little loss, it seems, that money cannot repair. As yet there is no appeal for succor beyond the borders of Italy. The King and Queen could be of no actual physical use in the emergency. And yet there is a fine sense of royal duty shown in their hastening to the scene. Without question it seems, too, that their presence has had a really tranquilizing effect upon the peasantry evicted by the forces of nature. Certainly they will find their reward in a quickened sense of loyalty on the part of the Neapolitans, although there is no reason for imputing to them any expectation of that or any other reward. It appears, now, that the flood is stayed, that the peril is averted, and that all that is left is to take care of the thousands made homeless. Then, as the mountain cools and arable soil appears again upon its sides, they may be expected to creep back and renew their husbandry under the frown of the crater, as they have been doing for fifty generations.

LABOR IN POLITICS.

Only 14 per cent. of British workmen are trades unionists, yet their party was able the other day to compel the Government with the largest majority in a generation to reconsider its position upon a labor bill. With such a demonstration that politically the power of organized labor exceeds its numerical strength it is worth while to know what are the prospects in this country. Our Industrial Commission fixed the total number of organized labor at 1,400,000 in 1901. Unions have thriven since, and it is not far out of the way probably to reckon their present strength at about one-third of the seven millions of workers in manufacturing and industrial pursuits. Even in them there are two workers outside the unions for each one within them, and there are fifteen millions of workers in occupations not admitting of organization at all. Yet the British precedent emphasizes that in politics the tail can wag the dog, and there are indications that the same may come true here.

This is the more important because our trades unionists are far from confining their activities to labor topics. The Sunday debates ran through a wide gamut of proposals, some academic and distant, and others well within the sphere of immediate and practical politics. Possibly the most pretentious of these proposals is that formulated by representatives of sixty-three labor and reform organizations which met in Chicago. A long paragraph would be necessary even to catalogue the ideas of this "nucleus of a new National party." The impulse to minimize the adoption of such theoretical reforms as the initiative and referendum in legislation should be checked, for unionists work these schemes in their organizations, and have learned how to avoid the expense of conventions, and the even more important fault of legislating merely because lawmakers have assembled. There are objections to the idea, and yet they might be overlooked if they would spare us, say, half our useless statutes, or worse. Government ownership of railways and telegraphs and municipal ownership of public utilities of course are included in this Chicago programme. Well down on the list is the proposal to check the subserviency of the Federal judiciary to the money power in the use of injunctions against labor. Here the proportion of labor topics seems to be disproportionate to the strictly political, but there is nothing amateurish in the manner in which the extensive programme is to be promoted. The primaries are to be captured preliminary to their reform, and every candidate is to hand in before election his resignation, subject to the use at the party's will. This is confirmatory of the inference that labor in politics will have more importance than so many votes. If the candidates of the regular parties were to be disciplined similarly we should have more performance or less promise.

Our local laborites, as reported yesterday, devoted their attention to coal and iron, apparently because strikes are pending. Delegate FITZGERALD asked the Central Federated Union to propose that the Government should take over the coal mines, and the Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union proposed the repeal of the iron and steel schedule of the tariff. The motive was the ill-success of the union in its strike, but the argument was that the Steel Trust, being able to export its products, is in no need of protection. Here there is a distinct clash between the motives and interests of the unionists on strike and the unionists at work. Hitherto unionists have deemed the tariff in their interest, and it may probably be assumed that labor is not as a whole yet free of the delusion that the tariff has something to do with raising wages. Nevertheless the Central Federated Union adopted the bridgemen's proposal. The coal strikers' proposal to make a settlement which would provide for another readjustment in the Presidential campaign year is another example that American labor is distinctly awake to the possibilities of working for itself in politics. Unless signs fail a new light will be thrown upon old issues in the United States as well as in England.

THE NEW TRANSFER SYSTEM.

By the Interborough Company's announcement yesterday of a new transfer system for Manhattan and the Bronx on the Subway, elevated, and surface lines the public will derive some advantages. Three-cent transfers may be purchased between Bronx surface lines and eight Subway stations on the Broadway and Lenox Avenue branches above 145th Street and West Farms. One of these lines, to which a franchise must be granted, will after May 1 connect the Subway station at 181st Street with the Bronx Zoological Garden, the Southern Boulevard, and Third Avenue. It is announced that other lines of trolley cars will be opened "nominally if not actually" on the same date.

Free transfers to and from the Subway and Manhattan elevated roads will be given at seven points on the Aqueduct Avenue, Fordham Road, and Third Avenue lines of the Union Railway. That the company can well afford to make this concession appears from the fact that, although transfer points in Manhattan were increased from 503 in 1904 to 530 in 1905, the actual number of transfers issued in Manhattan last year fell off 7,225,987, probably as a result of the introduction of the Subway and of the Interborough merger. At the same time transfers within the Bronx decreased 901,485, while the Bronx car mileage was curtailed 1,088,791 miles, or 15 per cent. It would appear, therefore, that the saving in issuance of transfers due to consolidation has had an important influence in determining the company's present attitude. It is perhaps needless to add that the new connections will serve as feeders to the Interborough's traffic and thus greatly enhance its profits. The corporation would have acted more wisely and far-sightedly, we think, had it made the real concession of a universal system of free transfers—not part free and part paid—on its Subway, elevated, and surface lines.

"AMERICANIZING CUBA."

According to the latest statistics of the Cuban Treasury Department, the process of "Americanizing" the island does not seem to be a rapid one, and is neither encouraging to those who favor the process nor alarming to those who disapprove or dislike it. The actual immigration from all sources into Cuba is not great, 28,467 for 1904 and 54,219 for the last year, less than 3 per cent. of the population of the island at the highest estimate. The Americans numbered 1,861 last year and 1,549 the year before, while the Spaniards were 47,902 last year against 23,467 the previous year. It will be seen that the movement of Spanish into the island, though still modest, is advancing with relative rapidity. The immigration from other countries is scattered and of little account.

It is to be remarked, however, that a certain number of Americans go to Cuba who do not get included in the immigration reports, persons of some means coming to purchase land and settle or to invest capital. It is these Americans who exert most influence on the island, but it has nothing especially or distinctively American about it, and is not likely to affect the future of the island in its relations with the United States. In other words, the Cuban people are working out their own life under the guidance of their own ideas through the agency of their own leaders, and are doing it extremely well.

IS IT PICTORIAL PLAGIARISM?

Our readers, we are sure, must have been much interested in the reproduction on Sunday of "The Death of Mozart" as imagined and painted by MUNKACSY, and by SHIELDS. In view of the recent accusation virtually of plagiarism from the pupil by the master, the course decided upon of hanging the two pictures where they can be seen together is the only satisfactory one. The possessors of THE SUNDAY TIMES have every facility for comparison, so far as the question of plagiarism is concerned, which they could enjoy from seeing the actual canvases in juxtaposition.

We judge that the general decision will be favorable to the claim of Mr. SHIELDS. The mere mention of the death of MOZART as a good pictorial subject might have inspired the Hungarian painter to do something with it. It is related of BEETHOVEN that being taken by a fellow-composer to hear a rehearsal of his new opera, he was fascinated by the possibilities of the "book," and exclaimed: "Fine! Beautiful! I must set that to music." The ejaculation was highly impolite, but not, perhaps, otherwise objectionable. BEETHOVEN's music would not probably have recalled that of the forgotten other man. The correspondence in the present case, however, is evidently very much too close to admit the originality of the painter of the more recent picture. It seems that he undoubtedly "conveyed" from the painter of the earlier very much more than the mere subject.

The junior Roosevelt organ is informed from Washington that Mr. ROOSEVELT's colleague, Mr. TILLMAN, (Dem., S. C.,) can contribute twenty-eight Democratic votes to railway rate regulation, and thinks that Mr. ROOSEVELT ought to be able to contribute twenty Republicans. This expectation of a minority contribution to the partnership from the majority party is moderation itself. If the Republicans are unable to contribute a majority of the votes, it is fair that they should surrender control of the bill and admit that it is a Democratic plank, which the Republicans always disapproved, and which is as difficult to steal, or do anything felonious with, as a red-hot stove. It would be both easier and more prudent to do this than to show that there is anything Republican about the proposal to oust the courts from control of any topic which belongs to the courts. The idea that Mr. TILLMAN and Mr. ROOSEVELT are wiser and more Republican than the majority of the Republicans following KNOX, FORAKER, SPOONER, ELKINS, and CRANE is a non sequitur which is the only logical result of the Presidential railway campaign.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Parlors in Churches.

It's queer how different people will see different sides of the same thing. The other day we printed a dispatch from Cleveland, telling that the Rev. Dr. EATON, better—or, at least, more widely—known as "Mr. ROCKEFELLER's pastor," had advocated the establishment of a "community parlor" in every church as a place where those, especially women, who have no place of their own in which to receive the visits of their friends, can enjoy social pleasures in surroundings more safe than are supplied by the ever-hospitable saloon. What struck us in this dispatch, alas, was the good doctor's statement that "it is natural for women to want to meet and gossip about clothes, children, and other interests which make up their lives," and we had expected to get at least a dozen letters, scornfully lecturing about an implied "such" between the words "other" and "interests." Instead we got only one, not scornful at all, but highly commending the idea of "community parlors" in churches and declaring that there is a great and almost desperate need of just such institutions. Says this correspondent: "Few, if any, boarding houses of moderate prices and none of the cheap ones have rooms where the boarders can entertain guests, therefore men and women have to seek other places to meet, and very often the other places are saloons. The Christian Association is doing something toward this end, but that means only one, or at most two, places in a large city. Churches are so numerous that if every church had a room for this purpose—a sort of church clubroom where men and women could meet in the evening after their day's work is over—that would be a grand philanthropy and the good effects would be far reaching. The churches, too, would be benefited. If such parlors were started a large number of women would refrain from going to saloons, as they now do. Many of them go there not intending to do wrong, but forced by unfortunate circumstances to take refuge there whenever they wish to have a little talk with a friend. This, I think, would be one solution of the 'drink problem.'" Perhaps "do something toward solving" the problem in question would be a sufficiently hopeful statement of the "community-parlor" case, for it would remain to be proved whether the people who now go to the saloons would be content with the gentler joys of a carefully supervised sociability. However, this matter is one entirely serious and—well, we are glad, after all, that we didn't get the scornful letters. And yet Dr. EATON's words must have irritated at least a few of the more advanced sisters.

Waiting for the Prophet.

Though they keep up a loud and cheerful whistling in Zion City, there is obvious in it an undertone of anxiety as the angry prophet comes nearer and nearer, and the rebels very evidently are not at all easy in their minds as to what is going to happen, especially to themselves, when he arrives on the scene of his many triumphs. The rebels may or may not have a good case, as cases go in the world of reason and business which they long ago voluntarily abandoned, but, as Dowieites, it is not easy to see how they are going to convict the old man of exceeding the practically limitless discretion with which they intrusted him, and the fact that, despite all the very serious charges brought against him, he is hurrying north as fast as the railways and his strength will permit seems well calculated to cause outsiders to suspend judgment as to the merits of the present controversy. And if the new leader does manage to banish the old one from the sacred city, what will be left? VOLIVA, so far as we have heard, makes no claim to supernatural powers or authority. He is simply a man with some knowledge of bookkeeping, who is discontent with a pseudo-theocratic rule, but how he is going to manage the curious aggregation that gathered about "Elijah III." is a mystery. DOWIE knew how to do it in other days. He could say nothing too absurd for them to believe, and, though he took their money, he seems to have been able to give them in return something that they valued more—a sense of superiority to an unappreciative world and a welcome freedom from many of the ordinary responsibilities of life. Charlatans of the Dowie stamp need not be looked at with an eye too hostile, for it is only by meeting a fierce want in minds of a certain sort that they attain their astonishing successes, and that, in its way, is a form of honesty. It is almost certain that the attempt to perpetuate Dowieism with no DOWIE in it will be a dismal failure. There will be no motive power behind the thing, and VOLIVA, confronted with the task of demonstrating the practicability of uninspired communism, must not read history if he would sleep o' nights. Judging from appearances the experiment at Zion City has now degenerated into a fight for the assets, and the amount of them not only explains the bitterness of the contest, but goes some distance toward proving that JOHN ALEXANDER was something more than a common victim of religious mania.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—At the close of a long day spent on District of Columbia matters the House took up a bill to which there were many amendments. Some of them aroused opposition, and at last Mr. Fitzgerald raised the point of no quorum just as the Speaker was about to call for a vote. Several appeals were made to him to withhold his point until certain particular things could be done, and finally he withdrew it altogether. Then Uncle Joe put the question on the pending amendment. There was a chorus of ayes and one or two noes.

"The ayes seem to have it," said Uncle Joe, "the ayes have it and the amendment is not agreed to."

A ripple of laughter ran around the House, and the desk clerk told the Speaker what he had said. Bang went the gavel, and Uncle Joe made this explanation: "The Chair, as is usual when he don't guard his tongue, has got the wrong horse before the cart."

District Day is always a fine opportunity for John Wesley Gaines. He flourished like a green bay tree to-day, and butted in every other two minutes for three or four hours on end. At last he enunciated a proposition worthy of the esteemed Mr. Euclid himself. He was objecting to the proposal to permit juries for the condemnation of property for public uses to consist of less than twelve men.

"I say in all candor and with as much seriousness as I can command," he shouted, shaking his clenched fists at the lofty ceiling, "that if there is any virtue in twelve it is twelve times more than one."

The bill was up extending to the Capitol the provisions of the law prohibiting child labor in the District, and Mr. Madden of Chicago was advocating it. His colleague, Mr. Wharton, also of Chicago, the youthful member to whom John Sharp Williams explained on the first day of the session what he meant by the "kids" of the House, was much interested, and kept moving gradually closer to the centre of action. At last he got fairly in front of his white-haired friend who was speaking. Just then Mr. Madden said:

"I believe that many of the children on the floor of this House ought to be under the guardianship of their parents."

Thereupon Wharton lost interest and departed to the cloakroom.

The Superior English Girl.

Dr. Winnington-Ingram, in addressing the Girls' Diocesan Association in London the other day, said that there were three reasons why the English girl was superior to her foreign sisters, which, according to the report of the address in The London Express, were as follows:

"It is to the sister that a boy turns in trouble, and the whole world would be disappointed if it went to girls and found them without faith.

"Secondly, the world looks to my hearers to find hope in them. Hope is one of the strongest influences in the world, and hopeful people can change life for many men and women. Closely connected with hope is purity of character. If a girl fails that boy at home to whom she is impeccable, or that man to whom she is the ideal of what a woman should be, then crash go all their hope and strength and inspiration."

Thirdly, girls, concluded the Bishop, were looked to to produce the fruits of love—the love which would take in the unattractive and the ugly, and which would brave sordid surroundings.

Domestic Imperialism.

From London Truth.

The woman of the day has become reckless; the lever has been moved to "full speed, forward," regardless of consequences. It is millions she requires; it is a quick journey from the suburbs to St. James's, with few stops on the way, and the ordinary man is not in a position to travel the distance and at the speed. He speculates, peculates, abandons principle after principle, becomes entangled in difficulties, and detached from his habits and consequently from his home. A few succeed, but they are not happy; many fail, and they are wretched! It is "imperialism" in private life, and the collapse caused by the one form of this must occur from the other.

Mother to the Woman.

From The Chicago Tribune.

"I'd like to get a postage stamp," said the little girl.

"Here it is," said the druggist, handing it out.

"Yes."

"Hain't you got any 1-cent stamps?"

"No, we don't keep them."

"Well, I guess I'll have to take it, but it isn't what I want, at all."

Flashing a resentful look at the druggist she picked up the stamp, threw a cent on the showcase, and walked out with the air of a tragedy queen.

TROWMART INN.

Will It Meet the Needs of the Majority of Working Girls?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having just finished reading that revelation of labor conditions for working girls as depicted in "The Long Day," it was with keen interest that I read in the magazine section of this Sunday's TIMES the details of the new hotel for working girls which is to be opened in Abingdon Square April 15. In a way the building of this hotel seems like a response to an appeal with which the author of "The Long Day" concludes her exposure of the terrible conditions under which so many of the women workers are forced to exist.

As this recital is so manifestly true to life, it is to be regretted all the more strongly that, while this new hotel may be a success as a means of encouraging matrimony, many of the girls and young women who come to New York from small towns or the country will be financially unable to enjoy the advantages of Trowmart Inn. Unfortunately, most of the rooms are single rooms, and the charge for a single room, with breakfast and dinner, will be $4 a week, and luncheon outside will cost in the neighborhood of $1 a week more, making $5 a week for board and room and laundry privileges.

Doubtless the author of "The Long Day" is such a young woman as Mr. Martin had in mind in erecting the Trowmart, and her industrial experience as a country girl in the city, possessing a common school education, may be taken as typical. She worked, when the masters of the bread were willing, at the following varied employments, in order and for the accompanying wages per week: Boxmaking, $3; flowermaking, $3.50 to $4; sweat-shop underwear, didn't earn her salt; jewel cases, $3; laundry work, $3.50 to $4; department store, $4; demonstrator, $8, and stenographer, $8, then $15, later $20.

These figures seem almost incredible, as showing how working girls are exploited and ground down under the iron heel of competition, but a glance through the female help wanted advertisements to-day shows wages offered run from $3 to $6 a week, $4 predominating. If this is the class of working women for which the Trowmart Inn has been established, let some economist reckon up how much money there will be left for clothing, carfare, medicine, books and magazines, recreation, and incidentals after the board bill is paid.

The necessity for such an institution as the Trowmart Inn exists, and there is no doubt that it will be well patronized, but by a higher-paid class of workers than those previously mentioned, who, notwithstanding, compose the great majority of working girls and whose more urgent needs are left unsupplied by the Trowmart Inn.

MANNERS OF PUBLIC SERVANTS.

Oftentimes the Public Itself Exhibits the Bad Breeding.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A good many people are writing to the papers on the objectionable manners of public servants, and probably often with reason, but an incident I observed when coming up town to-night on the elevated impressed me with the notion that something might be said for the other side. About Franklin Street my attention was attracted—or, rather, distracted—from my paper by a noisy protest from a man who had just entered the car and seated himself beside me. The guard against whom the tirade was seemingly directed appeared unconscious of the cause of offense, and stated reasonably that if he was guilty he asked pardon. It was evidently a case of door entanglement, in which the passenger's intention as to entry had been mistaken. However, the wounded soul was not appeased, and the mutterings continued, apparently as a matter of principal, for the benefit of the traveling public.

All this time the gentleman who thus resented encroachment upon his rights and privileges held in his hand a lighted cigar, the fumes from which betrayed a doubtful origin.

I was somehow struck with a peculiar sense of the shiftiness of the argument, and of what might have happened had the guard "seen his duty and done it."

They Have Augean Stables, Too.

From The London Saturday Review.

Success to Prof. Churton Collins, who writes to The Times deploring the use in England of a recent American press barbarism, the word "electrocute" instead of "electrocide"; of the two, "electrocute" is a shade uglier. But what is the good of keeping out undesirable aliens if we are busy all the time breeding specimens at home not a whit lovelier? Take "bike" and "bus"; what Americanism can surpass either in loathliness? Then in England to-day we revel in such horrors as "shortage"—which Coleridge in his mildest mood would have gnashed his teeth at—and "up to date." But there is one word used among writers the mention of which makes one blush all over; yes, it is a fact that in certain branches of the writing trade inverted commas are known as "quotes." Let us clean out our Augean stables in England before we criticise those of other countries.

Hatching Eggs in the Mouth.

From The London Globe.

Some curious examples of the egg-laying habits of certain frogs are here given. The female of one species—a species of which was recently exhibited at a meeting of the Zoological Society—carries the eggs about in her mouth until they are hatched. When the young emerge they are not tadpoles, but fully formed, though of course diminutive, frogs.

An American tree-frog, again, has a pouch along the whole extent of its back in which the eggs are carried until hatched. It is the Nototrema marsupiatum of zoologists, the name referring to this curious habit. The case of the Surinam toad is equally curious. In this species the male places the eggs, one by one, in hollows in the loose skin on the back of the female, where they are developed.

At a Church "Social."

From The Chicago Evening Post.

At a Methodist Church "social" in West Virginia the other evening a dispute arose, and when the smoke cleared away one man had been killed, his wife was mortally wounded, and several other members of the congregation had received serious injuries.

The minister probably had the emotions of the Georgia country bride who crawled from under a pew at her wedding, and, seeing her husband, father, and other friends and relations lying more or less crippled on the floor, remarked mournfully: "Them self-cockin' revolvers are playin' thunder with my prospects."

An American Language.

From The London Bystander.

Without going so far as to say that "England and America have everything in common—save language," the fact remains that so vast is the number of Americanisms that to all literary intents and purposes theirs is a language distinct from ours, and their writers and poets, therefore, no more British than they are French or German.

Decadence of the Milkmaid.

From The Creamery Journal, England.

From many parts of the country it is reported that there is great and increasing difficulty in getting farmhands who can or will milk the cows, and the problem of mechanical milking will have to be faced as a much more serious affair in the future than it has been in the past.

ABRAHAM BARKER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With its customary excellent judgment and admirable appreciation of news, THE TIMES of to-day has given the best report of the death of Abraham Barker, and at a late hour printed a most intelligent obituary notice of the son of that good old Friend Jacob Barker, a patriot of 1812.

Abraham Barker inherited the sterling qualities he possessed. During the second war with England, in 1812, all of Jacob Barker's ships were captured by the British, resulting in his sustaining enormous losses. Notwithstanding this disaster, he raised nearly $8,000,000 for the Government at a time when its own loans had failed, contributing largely himself.

The writer was shown a book written by Jacob Barker, and dedicated to his son Abraham, in which are recited in full the claim and the proceedings to recover something like $5,000,000. One paragraph reflected the noble qualities of the man's character. He said: "Although the courts have not awarded my money, the Congressional and judicial investigations have established the importance of the aid rendered by your father to our country in the second war for its independence, which he considers a better legacy to leave to posterity than all the money in the Treasury."

Abraham Barker began his business career in New Orleans. Just before the house was established, Mr. Barker, Sr., asked of Abraham what business pursuit he intended adopting.

"If you will emancipate me," replied the lad, "according to the old Spanish law in Louisiana—emancipating minors—I will never ask you for a cent of money."

The law to which he referred accorded to a minor all the privileges of an adult excepting the right to vote at National elections. It was then in force in Louisiana, but has long since ceased to exist. The father finally determined to grant the request, and the necessary legal proceedings were taken, the son in due time being emancipated from the father.

At 16 the boy was a broker, and Abraham Barker, destined to become the head of one of the greatest banking houses in America, was started on his career—a career which ended in May, 1899, with his retirement from the Philadelphia Stock Exchange. W. B. C.

The Fine Art of Reporting.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am glad to see one of your "interested readers" gracefully acknowledge the wonderfully weird story of the finding of poor Nocquet's body as reported in your paper. It is indeed a very thrilling story, and deserves to rank among the classics as a high type of descriptive story in real life.

INTERESTED READER NO. 2.
Brooklyn, N. Y., April 9, 1906.

Socialism in Milwaukee.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to your editorial in to-day's TIMES in the matter of the Socialist vote at the recent election in Milwaukee, Wis., permit me to state that the vote of the Socialist candidate for Mayor in 1904 was 15,000. This year our candidate received 17,000 votes, an increase of 2,000. In addition to the above, we elected twelve Aldermen, as against nine in 1904, and six Supervisors, as against four in 1904. No so bad! Eh? F. F.

"All Tramps Wear Whiskers."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The best thing for Hosea Bulger to do with his beard is to cut it off, and then keep it cut off. The wearing of whiskers is generally regarded by others as a mark of untidiness, neglect, and of a lazy streak in the make-up of the whiskerino. All tramps wear whiskers.

New York, April 8, 1906. OLD SHAVER.

The Homecomer.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

A cab with lights turned low and wheels muffled stood in the shadows.

Presently a man appeared, walking with stealthy tread. His hat was over his eyes, his collar turned up. He wore gumshoes. Whispering to the driver, he entered the cab, closed the door softly, and they went into the silence of the night.

"Why did you not investigate?" demanded an observer of a policeman.

Faint Praise!

From The Louisville Courier-Journal.

Chancellor von Buelow says that America was helpful at the Algeciras conference. With due respect to the Chancellor, we submit that this is damning us with faint praise. When the Government of the United States intervenes in matters that do not concern it, it aspires to be the Whole Thing. Aut Caesar, aut nullus.

After Henry James.

From The Washington Post.

"Chicago bristles," says The Tribune of that city, which never fails to call attention to the city's principal industry whenever occasion offers.

How Not To.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"Please read our paper," annotated the editor in returning the manuscript.

"I do," wrote back the contributor, "and my stuff is designed to show that I know what is the matter with your old paper."

A Fearful Aspect.

From The Houston Post.

A doctor has invented eye glasses which will cure the drink habit. Perhaps they make whisky look like water.

THE IRON BRIGADE.

In Oklahoma lives a man,
  A quite engaging sort of chap,
Who for his office never ran,
  And yet fell right in Fortune's lap.
The winning cards all seemed to fall
  His way when Mistress Fortune dealt,
He did not have to work at all—
  He used to hunt with Roosevelt.

In Arizona there is one
  Quite worthy man, a Marshal now,
I think, who never had to run
  To get the garland for his brow.
For when the tree of plums was stirred
  And Marshalships and things were dealt,
He did not have to say a word—
  He used to ride with Roosevelt.

And in Montana's mountains far
  There is another appointee
Whose planet was a lucky star,
  At least as far as stars can be;
For all unknown to him it came,
  Commission, garter, star, or belt,
And his good fortune was the same—
  He used to scout with Roosevelt.

And up in Maine's deep woods there lives
  Another man, as I have heard,
To whom the juicy plum tree gives
  Its luscious fruit when it is stirred.
Not ever at the party shrine
  In supplication once he knelt,
He drank a deeper, better wine—
  He used to trap with Roosevelt.

Ah, me, the much as I might like
  To be a knight, esquire, or page,
I fear the lightning will not strike
  In my secluded hermitage.
What wonder that my grief is keen
  And all my woes in tears do melt?
The talisman was unforeseen—
  I never rode with Roosevelt.

GONE TO STAY IN THE NEVER-NEVER LAND

Morris Gottlieb Crazy for Peter Pan, and He Can't Come Back.

TENDED THE THEATRE LIGHTS

He Says He's Got Over It Now, but They're Doubtful at Bellevue and Will Keep Him.

Morris Gottlieb has gone away to the Never-Never-Never-Land, and it is probable that he won't come back. Wendy and her brothers and the lost little boys come back every night over at the Empire Theatre, but Dr. Gregory, who is in charge of the psychopathic ward at Bellevue Hospital, thinks it probable that Morris Gottlieb, the little man who has gone away to the fairyland where impossible things are possible, will stay there.

He wants to come back, and for that reason he was in Yorkville Court yesterday. Detective Hart of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station brought him from Bellevue, arraigning him before Magistrate Mayo, charged, on suspicion, with being insane. Dr. Gregory sent a letter to the Magistrate which said:

"Gottlieb walked into the hospital several days ago and asked to be examined, stating that he was in love with Maude Adams, the actress, and that he feared himself in consequence. I have examined him and find that his mind is unbalanced. We think he is unsafe to be at large, but he refuses to be committed for insanity."

"Dr. Gregory says you are crazy," explained the Magistrate to Gottlieb.

"I was crazy when I went there, Judge," answered the little man, "but I am back to my senses now."

But the letter of Dr. Gregory was against Morris Gottlieb, and so Magistrate Mayo had Detective Hart make out an affidavit against the prisoner charging him with insanity, and he was formally committed to Bellevue for further examination.

While they were making out the papers necessary to hold him with all due legality Morris Gottlieb played with his little sandy moustache, and turning his blue eyes to the reporters, appealed to them thus:

"Say, tell Peter Pan, won't you, that the little man with the crooked nose isn't crazy any longer now, and tell her that he begs her to help him get free again."

Then, in the hope of such intercession, he told his hopeless love story. Here it is:

"Yes, I was, and still am, in love with Miss Adams, but I know it's no use, and I'm all right now. I went to the Empire Theatre to help the electrician with the lights. That was seventeen weeks ago, I believe. I loved Peter Pan—that is, Miss Adams—right then. I was an honest man, so I didn't think it was wrong for me to love her. But I see now that she couldn't love me. I won't bother her ever again.

"I wrote her letters, but she never answered them. Yet she would sometimes smile at me kindly, and I thought she wasn't angry with me for writing. So I kept on. But now and then I'd know it wasn't any use. So about two weeks ago I went to Chicago. I hoped to forget it all, but it wasn't any use. I was worse. So I came back.

"Last Friday I went to the Manhattan Hotel to see her. Miss Louise Boynton, her secretary, came downstairs to see me. She said that Peter Pan—that is, Miss Adams—wanted me examined, and that she would be pleased if I would go to Bellevue in her carriage. I went with the secretary. I thought I was crazy—I was crazy—but I am not any more. Now I want to get out; I want to come back."

Miss Boynton said she had found Gottlieb acting hysterically. He was walking through the hotel corridors, muttering Miss Adams's name and crying.

"I had intercepted some of his letters," said Miss Boynton; "so I knew him. I telephoned to Miss Adams's physician, who advised that he be got to Bellevue in some way. He agreed to go. I suppose Miss Adams saw some of the letters; she didn't see them all. She doesn't remember him in particular. She may have smiled at him, as she smiled at many another of those who help along with the play."

Morris Gottlieb told them at Bellevue that he lived at 44 East Fourteenth Street. That is an office building, several floors of which are occupied by the Spang-Gottlieb Clothing Company, of which Charles G. Gottlieb is President. The clerks in the office said that Morris was the brother of President Gottlieb, who is in the West in the interests of the company, and has been for some time.

"Morris Gottlieb?" asked a stenographer in the office. "Yes, I know him. A little, dark man, kinder fat—that's him. He used to be around here some. In love with Maude Adams? Gee whiz! that's funny. No, I don't think Mr. Gottlieb knows about it yet."

No relative has been to the hospital to look after Morris Gottlieb. He says he is 39 years old and unmarried. Dr. Gregory has little hope for his recovery. He is suffering from paranoia, a form of insanity which though productive of all kinds of delusions rarely causes the patient to become violent. Dr. Gregory thinks Gottlieb must have been a paranoiac for some time.

From reports at the hospital it appears that he has several delusions. He is a Jew, and he thinks he is being persecuted on that account. It is also his firm conviction at times that the "Advice to the Lovelorn" column in one of the afternoon papers is conducted by Miss Adams, who seeks in that way to express her love for him, she being unable for some reason he can't exactly explain to tell him about it in any other way.

Whenever the sage running the column wrote to one of the lovelorn to keep on trying, because "faint heart n'er won fair lady," or words to that effect, Morris Gottlieb thought it was Peter Pan talking to him, the little man who helped manage the lights.

"If your love is true and honest," he often read, "and you mean well, there is no reason why you shouldn't love and pursue the object of your affection. Maybe she is shy, and maybe it's just her coquettish way." He thought Miss Adams was talking directly to him in that paragraph and others like it.

Last night at the Empire Theatre, when Tinker Bell was about to die and Peter Pan raced up stage to plead with the audience to say that they believed in fairies, so that Tinker Bell might be saved, Miss Adams seemed to hesitate just a little in the appeal. Morris Gottlieb, the little man behind the wings, had gone too far into fairy land. When all the others, who were captured and put aboard the pirate ship, were released through the valor of Peter Pan, maybe Morris Gottlieb got locked down under the pirate hatch.

Anyway, according to Dr. Gregory, Morris Gottlieb, the little man with the crooked nose, is not only likely to stay all his life in the Never-Never-Never Land, but he is also going to be separated from Peter Pan. He won't turn the spot light on Peter when Peter is fighting the pirates any more. He won't hear Peter Pan calling out the swashbuckling commands again. Wendy and the boys come back, but Morris won't.

Thanks for the Late Georgia Welles.

Mrs. Harriet Welles Bain writes to THE TIMES to thank the many friends whose kindness to her sister, Miss Georgia Welles, the actress, was, she says, "the one bright ray shining through the utter gloom of her sickness and death." She thanks particularly Manager George Brennan, Thomas Dixon, Jr., author of "The Clansman;" the members of "The Clansman" company, and of the theatrical profession, the press, and the many friends in Miss Welles's birthplace, Great Bend, Kan., whose messages brought assurances of love and prayer for her recovery.

HENRI MARTEAU'S RECITAL.

A New Violin Sonata by Max Reger Heard in Mendelssohn Hall.

Henri Marteau gave a violin recital yesterday afternoon in Mendelssohn Hall that had some interesting and important features, chief of which was a sonata for piano and violin by Max Reger, Op. 34. Mr. Marteau, as he has explained, is an admirer of young Mr. Reger, who is making a great deal of talk in the musical world at the present time, and has carried on propaganda for his music. This sonata was composed for Mr. Marteau, is dedicated to him, and was played by him with the composer for the first time last year. Like everything else of Reger's that has yet been heard here, it is a deeply interesting work, very far from the commonplace, written with great skill and command of technical resource. The composer has little thought of lascivious pleasings in the first movement, long, complex, and sombre as it is, and full of drastic dissonances. The second is charming, of a truly poetic spirit and an original expression. The last is a theme with variations, some of which are of striking effectiveness. It is altogether a work that is worthy of much more than a passing notice, for while it does not show a heaven-sent inspiration, it is clearly produced by a man who has something to say, and an extraordinary command of the means of saying it.

Mr. Marteau also played Bach's D minor solo partita, the one which has the famous chaconne as its last movement and of which the rest is not often heard. In this, as in Reger's sonata, he played better than he has before in New York; in the first place generally in time, and in the second with a splendid spirit of enthusiasm for both works. His Bach playing is broad and big. In the chaconne he obtained some magnificently full sonorities, and made clear the various kinds of contrapuntal treatment it contains. Unfortunately his tone, never nowadays sensuously pleasing, was especially rough at times in this.

Mr. Marteau contributed some smaller pieces afterward. August Goellner played the difficult piano part of Reger's sonata well. Miss Irene Reynolds sang an air from "Der Freischütz."

PLAYS SIX PARTS.

Margaret Wycherly in Protean Sketch Pleases Proctor Audience.

Helen Hastings Nellie, her daughter Amie, a servant Mazie Mazette, from the Casino Gran'ma Hastings A Chauffeur	Margaret Wycherly
Henry Hastings	Arthur Jeffords
Detective Sergeant	Ralph Lewis
Policeman Cary	John Harvey

"In Self-Defense" is the title of a playlet by Bayard Veiller, produced at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre yesterday by Margaret Wycherly, hitherto more or less identified in the public mind with the works of W. B. Yeats.

Miss Wycherly is the first woman to follow the lead of Henri De Vries, the remarkable Dutch artist, whose production of Heyerman's "Case of Arson" appears to have set the fashion in the direction of protean sketches. Mr. De Vries's performance, in addition to being original, is a masterpiece, or, rather, a series of masterpieces in miniature. His imitators do not succeed in effacing the memory of that fact.

Miss Wycherly and her author may be said to have succeeded, however, to the extent of providing a half hour or more of generally tense interest. Several of the actress's sketch impersonations are very cleverly done.

She appears, to begin with, as Helen Hastings, a wife who overhears her husband's plan to entertain a chorus girl in their household. She insists that the woman must not come. Then Hastings attacks her, and she seizes a paper knife to defend herself and uses it with fatal effect. Leaving the man lying dead, she hurries off to a dance at the home of some friends.

The subsequent development—a police investigation—permits of a half dozen changes in character, make-up, and dress. As soon as the wife has left the house an old woman servant totters in, discovers the body, and gives the alarm. The old woman, of course, is again Miss Wycherly. In the suggestive externals of age and decrepitude the actress was quite successful, her masque and voice revealing most no hint of the previous rôle, although occasional personal vocal inflections she does carry through all of the parts.

The police summon various members of the household, first the crippled daughter, whose story reveals the father's worthlessness. Her invalid state is due to abuse received from him when a child. The child's story is corroborated by her grandmother, the next witness, these two characters presenting, as may be imagined, an interesting exhibit in range of expression.

Next a show girl, with a palpably false nose and a voice and actions that have little suggestion of verisimilitude, serves to point a clue to the murderer. This was one of the least satisfying of Miss Wycherly's characterizations, that of a French chauffeur being the worst. Here the artificiality was most apparent.

The sketch served its purpose, was vigorously applauded, and was apparently a great hit with the Proctor audience.

WON'T ENJOIN SHUBERTS.

Court Denies Murray Carson's Application in "The Bishop's Move."

Justice Fitzgerald of the Supreme Court denied yesterday the application of Murray Carson for an injunction restraining the Shubert Theatrical Company from producing "The Bishop's Move," unless his name figures in the advertising matter with that of John Oliver Hobbes, (Mrs. Pearl Craigie,) who collaborated with him in writing the play.

James K. Hackett acquired the rights of the play, and entered into a contract with the Shuberts by which they are to produce it.

Justice Fitzgerald denied the application on the ground that the subject of advertising formed no part of the contract.

Do not Assume that because you have never used Colortype illustrations in YOUR advertising literature that the process is still an experiment.

A BLUE RIBBON PLAY AT THE AMERICAN

THE AVENGING NEMESIS

She's a Wife-in-the-Sight-of-Heaven and She Foils the Plotters Every Time.

If there was a man, woman, or child in the American Theatre last night who was not a teetotaler no one would have guessed it. And if there were any such the strong chances are that they will be in the department stores long before this appears to-day on the hunt for a nice, fresh piece of blue ribbon. Pink monkeys and green elephants floating in midair are nothing compared to the experiences of Bill Sandford, engineer of Train 57, N. Y. S. & W. R. R., who had the tremens steadily for three acts, and then sobered up just in time to keep from running over his own daughter, who had been placed on the track by the villain after she had refused to lend a willing ear to his "repeated insults."

Previous to that thrilling moment much had happened. The lovely, golden-haired heroine—her name was Nellie, though that might have been understood, for it always is Nellie—had been kidnapped by the villain and his friends and dragged to a "lonely spot" near the railroad crossing.

The villain's Nemesis, who didn't call herself that, but said she was his "wife in the sight of Heaven," and that, degraded, debased as she was, she was once young and beautiful, this wife had overheard the plot, and, with a loyal Irish helper at the roundhouse, had gone to the aforesaid lonely spot to effect the girl's rescue. She and the loyal Irish friend had been overpowered by the first, second, and third villains, then bound and gagged.

After placing Nellie on the track the villains departed. The loyal Irish friend succeeded in removing the gag from the mouth of the wife-in-the-sight-of-Heaven, and with her sharp, white teeth she gnawed the rope that bound his hands, so that he was free to go to the rescue of the blonde beauty in distress. But the hero, in the form of the railroad President's son, who for the occasion was acting as fireman on the locomotive, was ahead of him in the rescue act. He saw the prostrate form on the track and from a position on the cowcatcher caught the girl up in his arms just as she was about to be ground under the cruel wheels. Then the beautiful heroine fainted, with her blonde tresses becomingly spread out over the manly lover's chest, while the engineer of 57, with his arms raised to heaven, swore that as long as he lived he would never touch another drop.

If he keeps that pledge he is a strong man, for the villains of "The Curse of Drink," in addition to being kidnappers and robbers, confess to the name the Electric Comedy Four, and sing songs that convince one of their aptitude for villainy long before their real plotting begins. Before they have finished the first number one can understand what it was that drove Bill Sandford to the bottle.

But he has plenty of other troubles. To begin with, there is a golden-haired child, who tells him that she has made up her mind to go to heaven and be his guardian angel, and he has to listen to the loyal friend who, after knocking down every man on the stage, strikes a heroic pose and shouts: "There are only three great fighting nations in the world—America is one and Ireland is the other two."

In the last act the curse of drink has been so far forgotten that all Bill Sandford's family prepare to partake of a bowl of punch to celebrate the coming nuptials of the engineer's daughter and the railroad President's son. It is Christmas Eve and a strange man has appeared in the guise of Santa Claus. The trusting family all leave the room, and Santa Claus takes a small package from his pocket.

"Strychnine," he mutters; "now die like dogs!"

He pours it in the punch.

"No, you don't." The wife-in-the-sight-of-Heaven again to the rescue.

Then the villain goes out and shoots himself.

P. Aug Anderson, an actor who for many years played Quilp and was known from one end of the country to the other for that performance and for his playing in "Pawn Ticket 210," is the star of "The Curse of Drink," and his tremens scenes are warranted to cure the worst possible case of thirst. He is an actor of exceptional ability in a narrow line of characterization. With the exception of the villains who sing, the others are mainly conspicuous for their inconspicuousness.

LILLIAN RUSSELL IN COMEDY.

She Signs a Contract to Appear for Thirty-five Weeks.

A contract was signed yesterday afternoon between Joseph Brooks and Lillian Russell by which Miss Russell will star under the direction of this manager for a season of thirty-five weeks in a series of comedies similar to those in which Marie Tempest won success in London.

Miss Russell will open at the Savoy Theatre about Oct. 1 for an extended run in New York. Her first vehicle will be a comedy called "The Happiness of Women," an English adaptation of "Les Bonheur des Dames," in which Jeanne Granier, the famous French actress, has played for over a year in Paris.

Miss Russell's success in "Lady Teazle," the last production in which she was seen, led Mr. Brooks to make the proposal which she accepted. Her comedy work led him to believe that she would make a success in comedies without music. Miss Russell will be supported by a company of eleven players.

BUY D'ANNUNZIO'S PLAY.

Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe Will Give "Francesca da Rimini."

Julia Marlowe and E. H. Sothern have bought from Miss Dirce St. Cyr the English rights of Gabrielle d'Annunzio's "Francesca da Rimini." They are now planning to make an elaborate production of the Italian piece at the Lyric Theatre next Fall, using the English version of Arthur Symons.

With the proposed revival of Hauptmann's "Die Versunkene Glocke" and the possible production of a Joan of Arc play this gives the Sothern-Marlowe répertoire, as announced for the coming season, a still deeper cosmopolitan color.

It is said that arrangements have been made to produce this same version of "Francesca da Rimini" in London after it has been given in this country.

The d'Annunzio play was given here in the original by Eleanora Duse. But the play of "Francesca da Rimini" is best known in an English version by George H. Boker, played by Lawrence Barrett and Otis Skinner.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Fritzi Scheff will not appear in the cast of "Mlle. Modiste" at the performances of the comic opera on Good Friday and Saturday. Her rôle will be sung by Edna Fassett. Miss Scheff will make her reappearance at the following Monday evening performance. The Madison Square Theatre, where "The Greater Love" is playing, will be dark on Friday and Saturday.

"The Optimist," Sidney Rosenfeld's comedy, will open an engagement at Daly's on April 23. The company includes J. H. Gilmour, Lizzie Hudson Collier, Wallace Eddinger, Charlotte Walker, Thomas A. Wise, Anna Stannard, and Martin L. Alsop.

Hope Booth began her engagement on the Proctor circuit in her new one-act comedy, "The Little Blonde Lady," at the Proctor Theatre in Troy yesterday. The piece was well received.

Samuel Arthur King gave the first of a series of free Shakespearean recitals at Cooper Union last night. The reading was from "The Merchant of Venice." On April 16 Mr. King will give a programme of miscellaneous selections from Shakespeare's plays, and April 17 "Hamlet." The reader is a member of the faculties of Bryn Mawr and Wellesley.

THE PROCTOR JUBILEE.

Two Large Audiences Help Start the Manager's Celebration.

In spite of the bad weather large audiences filled Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening. It was the first day of the jubilee week celebrating F. F. Proctor's twenty-fifth anniversary as a New York theatrical manager. In the lobby were many flowers, among them a large wheel of carnations with the manager's portrait in the centre.

The special programme for the afternoon included a performance of "If I Were King" by the regular Fifth Avenue company, and Henri de Vries in his protean play, "A Case of Arson." Audiences that seemed to feel much at home in the Proctor playhouse greeted their favorite players in the stock company and warmly applauded Mr. de Vries.

Between the acts Gertrude Finsten played the violin and Sue Smith sang. There will be a different programme every afternoon this week.

ANNIE RUSSELL'S NEW PLAY.

She Appears as the Friend of George III. in Boston.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 9.—"Friend Hannah," by Paul Kester, was produced at the Park Theatre to-night, with Miss Annie Russell in the rôle of Hannah Lightfoot, around whose romance with George III. the play is built. Miss Russell was warmly applauded by a large audience.

Miss Russell's new managers, Wagenhals and Kemper, have put on the four acts lavishly, as it is to open the new Astor Theatre in New York next Autumn.

THE CHATEAU OF MONTPLAISIR

By MOLLY ELLIOT SEAWELL

Louis Victor de Latour is a young Frenchman of distinguished family but no income. Victor Louis de Latour is an old soap boiler with tons of money but no family. Victor Louis approaches Louis Victor and for 300,000 francs buys a limb on Louis Victor's family tree. The result is one of the most charmingly humorous stories of the season—a sprightly, frolicsome romance of gay French life of the present day, in which the only serious character is the funny old soap boiler himself.

HARPERS BOOKS

THE SPOILERS

By Rex E. Beach

This is a story written by a strong man, of a strong man, for strong and grown up men to read. It is a tale such as is told by a man perhaps once in a lifetime—a tale of impetuous emotion, of brute strength and courage, of swift and passionate love and hate—a tale which tells itself without fine words—vigorous, forceful, mighty. There is no room for the violet conventions of society in that robust land where

"Never a law of God or Man runs north of Fifty-three."

The only law is the law of possession, of individual conscience, and of hunger—the hunger for gold digged out of the hills, and the blinding hunger of man for woman and for woman's love. It is a story of to-day, but it goes back to the root of things, and is true of all men and all real women since time began.

MORNINGSTAR WINNER IN BILLIARD OPENING

SCORE 500 TO 463 POINTS

Big Tournament in Madison Square Garden Concert Hall Starts—Mark Twain Cheered.

In a nervy finish Ora Morningstar, the American, last night defeated Louis Cure, the French billiardist, by the score of 500 points to 463. The contest was the opening of the international championship tournament in the concert hall of Madison Square Garden. The ending was sensational. When Cure had turned into his final hundred his score showed 410, while Morningstar's string was 287, a total of 123 behind the Frenchman. The latter appeared to have the game well in hand, and even a few innings later Cure's score was 455 to Morningstar's 366.

It was at this period that Morningstar began to demonstrate his skill and deftness at the rail nurse combined with position play. A run of 27 indicated this, and two innings later a cluster of 55 placed him only seven behind Cure. Then the latter missed because of nervousness, while Morningstar, playing in phenomenal stroke, easily finished the winner with an average of 9 14-54.

Mark Twain, accompanied by Henry H. Rogers of the Standard Oil Company, was an interested spectator of the match. The American humorist busily explained the shots to his friend, accompanying his remarks with gestures and diagrams marked in the air with his fingers. He was alive with keen appreciation of the good shots, and soon attracted the attention of the crowd. He left a few innings before the close of the match. Cure was at the table shooting when he went out, and the spontaneous outburst of cheering on the part of the crowd puzzled the Frenchman. Mark Twain saluted the spectators by throwing kisses to them, and when Cure saw this he waved his hand to the retiring humorist and resumed his play.

The nearest approach to brilliancy was during a run of 100 points made by Cure. Otherwise his manipulation of the ivory globes was most uncertain. Again and again he shook his head and shrugged his shoulders in a characteristic French manner and waved his hand to the spectators in an eloquent gesture of impotent regret.

The match was the first of the tournament in which the other competitors are William F. Hoppe, Jacob Schaefer, George F. Slosson, George Sutton, and Albert G. Cutler. It is the first appearance of Hoppe, the young world's champion at the 18.1 game, and Cutler in a big meeting in fast company.

It was a remarkable bank for lead that the billiardists made, the white and spot balls both apparently freezing to the cushion. Referee McLaughlin scrutinized the balls and allowed Morningstar to lead, he choosing the white sphere. Morningstar negotiated the regulation opening carrom perfectly, and then missed on an easy single cushion draw shot. The Frenchman, Cure, began promisingly, and brought the balls together near one of the corners. He missed his sixth shot, a two-cushion draw, through overconfidence and an attempt to play too finely for the edge of the second object ball. Then for ten innings a sorry exhibition followed, Cure's total advancing to 39 and Morningstar's to 24.

Cure failed repeatedly on the easiest sort of shots, while Morningstar, although falling behind, executed a number of nervy bits of cue work only to make the wildest of misses. One of his best during the early turns at the table was a shot in which the cue ball traversed the width of the table under a forced drive, actually forming a "W" before completing the carrom. Cure's best run during the first hundred points was that of 51 on his fifteenth turn at the table. He was partially stimulated to this by Morningstar's run of 49 in the first half of the same inning, in which the American displayed skill in open-table play. Morningstar missed a massé which he was timid about playing, and Cure ran his 51 from the balls in excellent position.

With this run Cure's stroke began to show improvement. He got the balls to rolling nicely, and on his twenty-second turn he rapidly counted 100, which was terminated by his miscalculation of a straight carrom shot. During this run the French player exhibited a delicacy of touch and rare judgment as to position. Several times he used the massé to hold the balls in juxtaposition, each time showing a steady bridge and clever playing of the difficult shot. Once during the run Cure lost the tally and appealed to Referee McLaughlin for the count.

Cure did not hold up to his flash of superior form. He fell off badly in the succeeding innings, both he and Morningstar plodding along for small totals in each inning. In his thirtieth turn Cure began from a spread leave and his third shot presented a problem which he solved by a masterful shot. With his cue ball and the red at one end of the table and the second object ball at the other end, Cure drove the red twice the length of the table, allowing his cue ball under a deadened follow to roll gently down on the second object ball and the red to finally nestle against the other two in the corner. This was the most brilliant single shot of the match.

The first restriction of the balk line occurred on Morningstar's thirty-fourth turn, in which he brought the balls close together, but, playing too delicately, failed to get them out on his seventh shot, Cure jumping to his feet at once and claiming no count. It was during the following inning with Cure at the table that Mark Twain and Henry H. Rogers took their leave. There was a rousing outburst of applause. Cure was about to shoot, and he stood up puzzled until he saw the white-haired humorist throwing kisses to the spectators. Then he waved his hand, went to the balls again, and missed an easy follow shot by such a flagrantly flustered bit of cue work that it was funny, and the crowd joined in a hearty laugh at the Frenchman's expense.

This lapse of Cure was shown by his finding all the holes around the balls and by being kissed off in his carroms. After several narrow escapes, Cure displayed a bit of French temper, which by a jabbing massé brought his run of 23 in his thirty-ninth inning to an end. Two innings later a run of 44 placed him within his last hundred points, his total being 410, which indicated an even average of 10.

With a lead of 123 points over Morningstar in his forty-first inning, Cure became carelessly overconfident. But the American pluckily worked away with his cue for position and to obtain that conjunction of the ivory globes which would allow of a nurse. He partially obtained it in the forty-sixth inning, in which he counted 38, and then followed with 10, 27, 2, and 55, while Cure was fiddling away with cushion shots. This last run brought Morningstar within seven points of the French expert, the score being 450 to 457. Then Cure endeavored to improve his play, but it was too late. Morningstar's ability to hold and control the ivories wavered under the strain. Several times the balls lined, but he overcame these difficulties, and finished with runs of 18 and 32, in the last of which he made two brilliant massés.

Cure has the best tournament record of any of the players, having tied for first money with Vignaux, Fournil, and Gibelin in 1902, and Vignaux, Sutton, and Slosson in 1903. He also won in a play-off the 18.2 championship of France. Morningstar has played in only one previous first-class tournament, in which he defeated Sutton.

Among the devotees of the game gathered about the table were J. Ferdinand Poggenburg, Wilson P. Foss, Dr. L. L. Mial, Dr. A. B. Miller, William Gershel, J. Byron Stark, Albert Coleman, Dr. H. D. Jennings, Mark Muldaur, Charles Foster, Rudolph Schaefer, Robert T. Kammerer, Calvin Demarest, Charles S. Norris, Maurice Daly, and all of the competitors in the tournament.

This afternoon Sutton will meet Cutler in the first of the matinée games at 2:30, and this evening Slosson will engage Cure. The score follows:

AMERICANS LEAVE ATLANTA.

Part of the Team Will Stop at Lynchburg and Play To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 9.—What was to have been the final game between the Greater New Yorks and the Atlantas was prevented to-day by wet grounds. While the men were out for the morning practice there came a terrific downpour which soaked the field and turned its low places into small seas. Manager Griffith and some of his men left at midnight for New York, while a previous party will stop off at Lynchburg to play a game to-morrow. All the men are in excellent condition, when the time they have had to work is considered. There is not a man who has not done all in his power to get in shape for the big league opening.

For the game at Lynchburg to-morrow Orth will captain the team and pitch. With him will be Delehanty, third base; Clarkson, short stop; Thomas, first base; Whalen, centre field; McGuire, catcher; "Noodles" Hahn, second base; Hughes, left field; Keefe, right field, and Leroy, utility man. The New Yorkers have made an excellent impression in Atlanta, and there will be many "fans" watching them and wishing for their success through the season.

More Clubs in Baseball Association.

The Intercity Baseball Association enlisted more clubs on its roll at its meeting at Lyric Hall last evening. Nine more joined the fold, and the promise of the association projectors that all the amateur and professional organizations in the neighborhood of New York City would co-operate with the body before it had been in existence two months bids fair to be realized. The clubs admitted last evening were the St. Louis College, Patchogue Baseball Club, Flatbush Baseball Club, Dover Athletic Association, Central Valley Baseball Club, All Collegiate Baseball Club, George Barnard & Co., College Point Baseball Club, and the All Professionals of Paterson.

The association officers are still on the lookout to secure more grounds in the city limits, and an appointment will be made with President Ahearn, of Manhattan Borough, during the coming week to see if fields which might be available on Manhattan Island can be secured. The association will also secure permanent quarters this week in the neighborhood of Forty-second Street and Broadway.

The scheduling of games was begun last evening. A committee headed by J. L. Gordon will list all games arranged by clubs enrolled in the association, prevent conflicting schedules, see that agreements are carried out by the contracting teams, and secure grounds for such teams as desire them.

Fined for "Covering Up" a Player.

CINCINNATI, April 9.—The Philadelphia American League Club and the St. Paul American Association Club were fined $250 each by the National Baseball Commission to-day for "covering up" Outfielder Phil Geier contrary to the rules of the National agreement. It appears that both clubs notified the commission last Fall that Geier had been transferred from St. Paul to Philadelphia for "cash in hand paid." Recent developments indicated that no cash was exchanged, and that the player was returned to St. Paul. Both clubs acknowledged this.

In its finding the commission asserts that as the "covering up" took place before the new rules regarding this practice were enacted, only a nominal penalty was inflicted on each club. Had it occurred under the new rules, the Philadelphia Club would have been fined $1,000 and the St. Paul club $750. This is the first "covering-up" case furnished by the commission.

Brooklyns to Play Sundays at Home.

Treasurer Medicus of the Brooklyn Club, who has been with the team on its Southern training tour, is responsible for the statement that the Brooklyn team will resume playing championship games on Sunday at Washington Park this year. The first game, it is said, has been arranged for next Sunday, when the Brooklyns will meet the Bostons.

Baseball Association for England.

LONDON, April 9.—At a meeting in London to-night it was decided to form a British baseball association. Although the initiative was taken by professional football clubs, stress was laid on the desirability of fostering the amateur side of the game. It was suggested that the protection of the American National League be sought to prevent the importation of American professionals.

Pick-Ups on the Diamond.

A game with the Providence team to-day and one with Manhattan College to-morrow will wind up the champion New Yorks' exhibition series at home. On Thursday morning they will go to Philadelphia to open the championship season.

Christopher Mathewson's alleged remarks on the Giants' training trip at Columbus, Ohio, that he would beat the Cincinnatis in ever game that he pitched, the same as last year, has aroused the ire of Manager Hanlon. "If 'Matty' did say such a thing," said Hanlon, "he will be badly fooled. I do not believe the Cincinnatis will lose fourteen straight games to the Giants, as they did last year. With all due respect to Mathewson's ability as a pitcher, he cannot always be invincible."

Deshon of the Cornell University team showed pitching ability of a high order in the game with Niagara University. He struck out thirteen batsmen, shut out his opponents without a hit, had five assists, and made one hit.

President Ebbets of the Brooklyn Club has received word from Pitcher Scanlon, who declared that he would not sign another contract until his salary was increased, that he will play with Brooklyn again.

F. M. Somers of Newark, N. J., has acquired a minority interest in the Eastern League Baseball Club of that city. He has purchased the shares owned by M. Puder, Thomas Curran, Emmett Quinn, "Jack" McLaren, and Edward Stern. Manager Walter Burnham, it is said, now owns a majority of the stock in the club.

The members of the Greater New York team who will play at Lynchburg, Va., to-day left Atlanta early yesterday, and they were followed at midnight by the balance of the team under the leadership of Manager Griffith. The two sections will meet at Lynchburg and all will return to New York together.

The Brooklyn Baseball Club will start off with the new ticket system which it put into effect late last year. Every purchaser of a ticket will receive a postponed game check. Tickets to the 25-cent stand will be sold at Fourth Avenue and Third Street, and the entrance to the "bleachers" will be on Fourth Avenue, opposite Second Street.

George La Chance, the old first baseman of the Boston American League team, would rather play in Waterbury, his old home, than to go back to Montreal. Last year he is said to have received $500 a month for playing with Montreal, but the Canadians this year want to clip his salary in half.

Catcher Connor, whom the New York Americans secured from Newark to help them out last year, will don a Montreal uniform the coming season.

During practice Pitcher Reab of the Vicksburg, Miss., team was accidentally hit in the face by a bat which slipped from the hands of Pitcher Chevalier, breaking his nose and knocking out several teeth.

"From an artistic standpoint our Southern trip was a success," said Manager Armour of the Detroit team. "Financially, however, it was a frost. The trip cost about $2,000, and we received in return from exhibition games $700."

According to Manager Hanlon, Pitcher Willis has no equal in watching the bases when occupied.

ROSEBEN'S FAST TRIAL AT GRAVESEND TRACK

Carter Handicap Favorite Covers Six Furlongs in 1:14¼.

HORSE FACES STRONG WIND

Bad Weather Stops Gallops of the Keene and Other Strings at Sheepshead Bay.

Against all things conducive to fast and satisfactory work, training gallops on the Long Island tracks made amazing progress yesterday, hastened by the fact that racing in the metropolitan district is less than one week distant. The date set for the opening of the New York turf season, next Monday, will not hurry the horses, however, if the training work in the face of difficulties at the big Long Island tracks has any meaning, for in spite of the gloom and the sleet that fell for a part of the morning yesterday, the preparation of the horses that have been out for early racing went on steadily and with fair average work, to the credit of the training in general, at both Gravesend and Sheepshead Bay.

Something of a sensation was sprung at Gravesend when the present favorite for the Carter Handicap, Roseben, eclipsed all Spring training records by finishing a trial of six furlongs for the Carter in 1:14¼. The work was by far the fastest that any horse in the chief event of the season's opening has put forward, and though there were well-defined tips on Belmere, Whimsical, and Hermis, in addition to the widely circulated reports concerning the chances of other horses, before Roseben worked, the excellence of the record-holding sprinter's trial was sufficient to stay even the progress of tips for the time being.

Roseben, trained for D. C. Johnson by Frank Weir, was one of the late horses on the track and, freshly clipped, went out to gallop in company with Jacquin after a short warming-up jog. Roseben, carrying about 115 pounds, broke at the turn into the back stretch, with Jacquin in front and going on swiftly, while Roseben in the first three furlongs was busy trying to make up the ground lost to his companion. The work was at about the worst part of the day, with a strong wind blowing up and across the back stretch, but Roseben faced it with the utmost indifference, and steadily gained ground on Jacquin, which covered the first furlong in 0:12¼, the quarter in 0:24¼, and the three-furlongs in 0:36¼.

To that point Roseben had been catching his rival, but on the turn to the head of the stretch the record-holding sprinter swept past Jacquin, and with a run that simply smothered his opponent, took the lead, and from that point on to the end drew steadily away in front, Roseben winning the trial well in hand, after an easy final quarter, covering the half mile in 0:48¼, the five furlongs in 1:02¼, and the six furlongs in 1:14¼, according to dozens of watches.

Jacquin seemed to quit when Roseben went past him, and while the winner of the trial appeared to make no effort, Jacquin was hustled out, several lengths behind Roseben, in 1:16.

No other Carter Handicap horse of note was tried for the race, though Belmere, an entry, had a fair cantering move, and several other horses which figure among the entries for the race were out jogging.

At Sheepshead Bay the stars of the Keene, Belmont, and Paget stables went through routine work only, the bad weather putting a stop to speed trials and gallops.

BAD GOING AT BENNING.

Small Fields Race on Track Deep in Mud—Virginians Big Winners.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—In a driving rain and on a track that was nearly fetlock deep in soft mud, to-day's races at Benning were started. The rain, which began last night, ceased after a while, but the conditions were about as unfavorable for good sport as they well could be. The result was not only a greatly reduced attendance, but also reduced fields. Four favorites and two strong second choices won the six races.

The sixth event was the best of the day. The Virginia contingent, which had won heavily on T. S. Martin's victory in the fifth race, went to Peter Paul to a man. He was made a two-to-one favorite, while the other five starters ranged in price from 4 to 1 to 8 to 1. A heavy play was made on Bill Curtis. Peter Paul went out in front at the start and made all the running, winning, eased up, by four lengths.

Echodale, a second choice, took the first in a hard race, Flat getting the place in the last furlong from the favorite, Delphie. The second event was a romp for Al Powell, and the third was quite as easy for Lord of the Vale. Brush Up, another odds-on favorite, ran away with the fourth race. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Selling, for three-year-olds and upward; seven furlongs, Columbia course. Echodale, 100 pounds, (C. Morris,) 3½ to 1 and 8 to 5, won; Flat, 105, (Freishon,) 12 to 1 and 5 to 1, second; Delphie, 108, (Powers,) 16 to 5, third. Time—1:31 4-5. Piratecr, Tom Cod, Kuro, Australina, Optical, Judge White, Sir Brinkley, Qui Vive, Parkville, John F. Ahearn, and Dixie Andrews also ran.

SECOND RACE.—For two-year-olds; four furlongs, old course. Al Powell, 117 pounds, (Shaw,) 4 to 5 and out, won; Nancy, 114, (J. Jones,) 8 to 5 and out, second; Mary Custis, 107, (Knapp,) 13 to 1, third. Time—0:50 3-5. Pantaloon also ran.

THIRD RACE.—For three-year-olds and upward; six furlongs, Columbia course. Lord of the Vale, 120 pounds, (J. Jones,) 7 to 20 and 1 to 8, won; Tickle, 101, (McDaniel,) 6 to 1 and 9 to 10, second; Sterling, 106, (Knapp,) 4½ to 1, third. Time—1:16 1-5.

FOURTH RACE.—Selling, for fillies and mares three years old and upward; five furlongs, Columbia course. Brush Up, 106 pounds, (C. Morris,) 2 to 5 and out, won; Baby Willie, 94, (Schaller,) 6 to 1 and 8 to 5, second; Society Bud, 99, (McDaniel,) 7 to 1, third. Time—1:04. Blue Sky, Gertrude F., Andronike, and Indra also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—Selling, for three-year-olds and upward; one mile, Columbia course. T. S. Martin, 90 pounds, (Miller,) 13 to 5 and out, won; Winchester, 105, (Diggins,) 4 to 5 and out, second; Jane Holly, 105, (Bell,) 4 to 1, third. Time—1:45 1-5.

SIXTH RACE.—Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward; seven and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Peter Paul, 92 pounds, (McDaniel,) 2 to 1 and even, won; Sailor Boy, 103, (Burns,) 4 to 1 and 6 to 5, second; Old Guard, 88, (Miller,) 5 to 1, third. Time—1:38 1-5. Bill Curtis, Royal Window, and Saladin also ran.

First Brush of Cornell Crews.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 9.—Coach Courtney took the crews on the lake to-night for their first "scrap" of the season. In the face of a blinding rainstorm, with the waves rolling up all round them, the men found it impossible to row very far, and had to be content with a mile brush. The first 'Varsity rowed in fine form, and easily defeated the second eight by a boat's length. Coach Courtney smiled pleasantly after the race was over, but expressed dissatisfaction at the work of the freshmen and four-oared crews, which seemed to be considerably below the Cornell standard. A big shake-up is in order in a few days.

WON'T SUMMON STEEL MEN.

Gen. Grosvenor Hastens to Deny a Rumor About an Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—A report was published in the afternoon papers that prominent Steel Trust officials were to be summoned before the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries to tell why American steel is sold abroad cheaper than at home. Gen. Grosvenor, the Chairman of the committee, was given as authority for the announcement. Gen. Grosvenor said:

"It's a total misrepresentation. I never said anything of the sort. All I did say was that a general invitation had been extended to everybody to come forward and testify, and that at the hearings now being given the committee would go into this question, whenever anybody having any knowledge on it appeared. We haven't summoned anybody, and we don't intend to."

Mr. Grosvenor seemed much annoyed over the report. The fact is that the Republican leaders in the House are sensitive on the subject of goods sold abroad cheaper than at home. Mr. Rainey's exposition of the subject as related to watches had a paralyzing effect, but when it was followed by Mr. Perkins, a Republican, and applied to the subject of lead, the matter became worse.

The hearings referred to by Mr. Grosvenor are on the subject of the Ship Subsidy bill passed by the Senate, and now awaiting action before the House. The charges to which he refers relate to steel for ship building. Mr. Grosvenor is strongly in favor of the bill, and it undoubtedly will be reported next week. In view of this it is considered probable that the General does not expect to get any evidence at his hearings which will prove the charges.

ZULU ORATOR TO TALK.

Winner of Curtis Medal Will Lecture for Board of Education.

Pha Isaka Seme, the Zulu, who last Thursday won the George William Curtis gold medal, the highest oratorical honor conferred by Columbia University, has been engaged by the Board of Education Public Lecture Bureau to deliver a series of free public lectures on "Life in Zululand."

Next Thursday evening Mr. Seme will speak at Public School 135, First Avenue and Fifty-first Street, and on Wednesday evening, April 18, he will repeat his talk at St. Bartholomew's Lyceum Hall, 205 East Forty-second Street. Both of the talks will be illustrated with stereopticon views of actual scenes from life among the Zulus.

Pha Isaka Seme is the son of Isaka Ka Knawana of royal Zulu blood, and comes from Natal, South Africa. Eight years ago he could not speak a word of English. He was born and raised as a Zulu in the Town of Iuada, and attended the mission school, where he learned to read and write English well, but until he came to America eight years ago he did not speak it. From the Dwight L. Moody School at Northfield he entered Columbia, where he expects this year to finish his course.

JERSEY SERVICE DIVIDEND.

Directors of the Corporation Expected to Declare It To-day.

The annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey will be held in Newark to-day, when it is expected that a dividend on the $12,500,000 outstanding stocks will be declared. This would be the first dividend paid on the stock of the holding corporation since it came into existence three years ago.

In all probability the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. will not take over one-third of the total authorized capital stock of the company, but the firm of Robert Winthrop & Co. is mentioned in the deal.

It is said that the plan did not appeal to George W. Perkins, who was conducting the Morgan & Co. end of the negotiations, and while they were not broken off entirely, the new proposition was submitted to Winthrop & Co. with more satisfactory results. The latter firm is satisfied with the condition of the Public Service concern and has agreed to underwrite a new issue of $6,250,000 stock at par with an understanding that the underwriter may take the entire issue, or so much thereof as the present holders will surrender.

FRIEND OF THE FAMILY STOLE.

Frith Tried to Pawn a Ring Belonging to Arnold Francis.

Detective Levins of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station was in a pawnshop at 171 Amsterdam Avenue last night when a young man came in and offered to pawn a ring for $200. Not getting a satisfactory offer from the pawnbroker the young man went out.

Levins followed, and asked the young man where he got the ring. He said that his mother had sent it by mail from Philadelphia. Levins arrested him on suspicion. The young man immediately confessed.

He said his name is William Frith, that he lives at 59 West Ninety-third Street, and had stolen the ring from the house of Arnold Francis, at 93 Walnut Street, East Orange. The police, on communicating with East Orange, found that the Francis family had missed the ring for several days, and that it was an heirloom intrinsically worth $300. Frith said he was a friend of the family.

He was locked up at Police Headquarters.

Sale of Park & Tilford Bonds.

Bonds amounting to $2,000,000 of the corporation of Park & Tilford have been purchased by Mackay & Co. The bonds are 6 per cent. thirty-year gold sinking fund debentures of an authorized issue of $3,000,000. The remaining $1,000,000 bonds have been purchased by interests connected with the business for permanent investment.

Harvard Athlete Breaks a Leg.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 9.—J. E. Stone, a Harvard junior and one of the most promising candidates for the Harvard track team, broke his leg in practicing, taking the hurdles on Soldier Field this afternoon.

Stone was doing a time trial, and as he landed after the last hurdle he fell in a heap. He tried to rise but could not do so. An examination showed he had sustained a double fracture of the thigh bone between the knee and the hip.

Quail Liberated on Long Island.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTPORT, L. I., April 9.—The game supply on Long Island has been materially augmented the past week through the liberation of many bevies of quail, and the prospects for next season's shooting are said to be particularly promising. Among those who replenished their preserves with quail were the members of the Eastport Rod and Gun Club, who were fortunate in securing a large consignment from the West.

VANDERBILT CUP RACE WILL BE RUN OCT. 6

First Five Cars in Elimination Will Be American Team.

ENTRY FEE RAISED TO $1,000

Samuel W. Taylor's Place on the Racing Board Declared Vacant—Differential Rule is Amended.

William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., met with the members of the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association yesterday afternoon at its first meeting since the appointment of the new Chairman, Jefferson De Mont Thompson. The meeting was held in the rooms of the Automobile Club of America, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street, and several changes were made in connection with the Vanderbilt Cup race. One of the most important was the increase of the entry fee for all cars from $300 to $1,000. This will undoubtedly come as a big surprise to a number of automobile manufacturers, and it may have the effect of reducing the entries to one car from each instead of three, as rumored.

It was also stipulated that a maximum limit of twenty-five would be placed upon American entries for the elimination race. More manufacturers having given notice of entering cars this season than was the case last year, the committee felt that in restricting American cars to twenty-five it would offer a chance to all that seriously wished to make a good showing in the race, while it would also prevent an unwieldy number of prospective competitors. Last year thirteen cars were entered for the elimination contest, and even with the increased interest in the event this year, the fee of $1,000 will act as a reasonable deterrent. The entries will close July 1.

The elimination race will be run on Saturday, Sept. 22, and the Vanderbilt race itself on Saturday, Oct. 6, being in each case one week earlier than last year. The same Long Island course will undoubtedly be used, but no official action has yet been taken. Before this is done the committee will visit the course and endeavor to make some changes so as to eliminate the dangerous turns on the northern stretches. A letter was received from the Clerk of the Board of Supervisors of Nassau County stating that over 1,500 names had been signed to the petition asking that the race be held over the Long Island roads. A reply will be sent saying that the matter is under consideration.

To the American contestants in the race, perhaps the most important action of the board was the positive declaration that the first five cars finishing the elimination race will be picked as the American team. This is a common-sense action and will relieve all doubt as to the qualifying cars, preventing at one stroke any repetition of the unfortunate method of selection adopted by last year's committee when only two of the first five cars were placed on the team.

At the request of Mr. Vanderbilt the cup conditions will be changed so as to admit on the Cup Commission representatives from the automobile clubs of Great Britain, Italy, and Germany, as well as France, the latter having hitherto been the only foreign representative.

The racing rules are going to be subjected to a rigid revision, and S. M. Butler, A. G. Batchelder, and Frank G. Webb were appointed as a sub-committee to revise them and report at an early meeting to the entire board. One rule was amended yesterday, which is destined to relieve the situation concerning the troublesome differential question. In the rule defining an automobile, the differential requirement was omitted and the clause substituted:

"The car must hereafter be provided with two sets of brakes, each operated independently of the other, and a motor-driven reverse gear." The weight limit will remain the same, 2,204 pounds being the maximum.

The protest that has been filed by the Automobile Club of Great Britain against the Darracq racer in the Ormond races was discussed and referred to the Automobile Club of America for further consideration.

For the first time in the history of the Racing Board the members declared by unanimous vote the place of one of its members vacant. The member thus summarily dropped was Samuel W. Taylor. This unusual and drastic action was taken in view of certain comments that Mr. Taylor has been charged with making regarding the methods adopted by Robert Lee Morrell as Chairman of the board last year. Mr. Taylor attended the meeting, but at the request of Chairman Thompson, the subject of Mr. Taylor's further connection with the board was the first thing discussed. After the vote was taken Mr. Taylor left the meeting. Mr. Thompson said the action had been necessary in the interests of harmony and for the good of the committee.

Besides Mr. Thompson and Mr. Vanderbilt, those present were E. Russell Thomas, S. S. Gorham, A. L. Riker, A. G. Batchelder, Frank G. Webb, and S. M. Butler.

New Rose Steam Yacht Launched.

The new 163-foot steel steam yacht building from designs by William Gardner for Andrew W. Rose of the New York Yacht Club was launched at Wilmington, Del., yesterday. Work will be pushed on the craft to prepare her for delivery by May 15, when she will be commissioned for an extended cruise to Newfoundland and Nova Scotian ports.

The boat is to be as able and complete a craft of her size as is enrolled in the New York Yacht Club fleet. Her accommodations are of generous proportions, with six large staterooms and two baths, the owner's room extending across the entire breadth of the yacht. They will be fitted in mahogany and white, while every modern convenience that naval architecture can provide will be installed.

The hull is steel, with water-tight bulkheads, liberal freeboard, and two deckhouses. The water-line length is 131 feet, the beam 21 feet, and the draught 9 feet. She will be schooner rigged, with two pole masts, and equipped with a four-cylinder, triple expansion engine and water tube boilers of a capacity sufficient to develop power to drive her at a sustained speed of twelve knots.

West's Best Bowlers Coming Here.

Two of the best bowlers in the West, Frank Brill, ex-National champion, and Gus Steele, Olympian champion, both hailing from Chicago, have planned an Eastern tour during which they will meet all comers. Their first appearance will be in Newark, where individual and team matches will be played. They will then come to New York for games on John Watts's alleys, after which they will go to "Billy" Linden's, winding up at the White Elephant alleys of "Uncle Joe" Thum. In Brooklyn they will roll at the Grand Central Place alleys of William Cordes.

Brill went to Chicago from the East, while New Yorkers have reason to remember Steele, who, in the so-called "international" tournament here in 1900, participated in twenty-three individual matches against picked bowlers, and won every one of them. At that time "Johnny" Voorhees had not come into fame, while James Smith was not heard of. Among the men whom Steele beat were Heller, Meyer, and Elwert.

Oldsmobile Challenges Pope-Hartford on Hill Climbing Test

April 6th, 1906.

Pope Manufacturing Co.,
1733 Broadway, New York:

Gentlemen:—Noting your advertisement in the "Globe" on Thursday, April 5th, in which you state that your Pope-Hartford Model F car is the only car selling as low as $2,500 that can climb Abbey Hill, Viaduct Hill, Duffy's Hill and Amsterdam Hill with five people, on the high gear, we beg to say we hereby offer a challenge and stand prepared to prove that the Oldsmobile Palace Touring Car, selling for $2,250, can perform these feats, and others more difficult.

The only condition of our challenge is that the Pope-Hartford and the Oldsmobile Palace Touring Car shall be inspected by the Technical Committee of The American Automobile Association, to see that both cars are equipped with stock gears as regularly sold to the public.

The contest to take place any time you may select.

Furthermore, we will start from our office, 1653 Broadway, with the high gear thrown in and make all the hills you mention and return to our office without changing gears.

In case your car fails to make any of the above hills from any cause on the high gear we will give you a second trial.

METROPOLITAN TENNIS GAMES

Championship Schedule of Association for the Coming Season.

The schedule of championship matches of the Metropolitan Lawn Tennis Association was arranged yesterday at a meeting of the Executive Committee, held at Delmonico's, Beaver Street. The competitions will be in two sections, and the winning club in each will then meet in a series of home and home matches, two singles and one double, for the association title. In both sections the contests will begin June 2. The schedule follows:

JAY GOULD SAILS TO-DAY.

American Court Tennis Champion Enters English Tournament.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., April 9.—Jay Gould, son of George J. Gould, who won the National championship at court tennis on Saturday by defeating Charles E. Sands, will try for the English championship.

With Frank Forrester, the Georgian Court marker, young Gould will sail on the Kronprinz Wilhelm to-morrow afternoon, and will go to London to prepare for the championship court tennis tournament which is to be held at the Queen's Club in West Kensington on April 30. His entry was filed a fortnight ago, and a cable message of acceptance was received to-night.

Jay Gould left Lakewood this afternoon, accompanied by Forrester. He is not over confident as to his chances abroad, even though he won the National honors so handily on Saturday. Forrester is very conservative. He said this afternoon that Jay would have many things to contend against on the other side.

Young Gould will find a formidable opponent in E. H. Miles, the British title holder.

Lawn Tennis for Princeton.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 9.—Princeton's tennis team is preparing for an active season and has arranged four of its dates in addition to the intercollegiate matches. Penn is to be played twice, once in Philadelphia and once at Princeton, while a match will likely be arranged with Harvard. The dates are: May 12, Penn at Philadelphia; 26, Columbia at Princeton; June 2, Yale at Princeton; 9, Penn at Princeton.

Bergen Point Tennis Club Officers.

Officers of the Bergen Point Lawn Tennis Club were elected yesterday, the result being as follows: Miss Eliza Humphreys, President; Emil Frank, Vice President; Percival Brough, Secretary, and Miss Grace Lemon, Treasurer. The club is a member of the East Jersey League and will be represented in the championships of that organization. The courts of the club will be opened on May 1.

Athletics a Feature of Military Show.

Athletes, as usual, will be a conspicuous feature of the tenth tournament of the Military Athletic League, which begins at the Madison Square Garden two weeks from to-night and closes on the Saturday following. The programme of track and field events has been arranged with care, and, judging by the quantity and quality of the entries already received, the very best athletes now in the metropolitan district will contest. Athletics will open the show each night with the full and attractive military pageant following. This will include parades and competitive drills by lads of the military schools.

Mayor McClellan, Admiral Coughlan, Secretary of War Taft, Gen. Grant, Commander of the Department of the East; Gov. Higgins, and Gen. Mills, Superintendent of the West Point Military Academy, will be the reviewing officers. Probably no exhibition by the United States Cavalry will equal that promised by the famous Troop C from Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont. The competitions for selections for the show never has been keener, and the rough riding, drills, and dangerous performances will show the perfection not only of the men, but of the drill.

Physical Culture Basket Ball.

The semi-final games for the Manhattan Borough basket ball championship of the physical culture department of the Board of Education was played yesterday morning on the court of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, Ninety-second Street and Lexington Avenue. The scores follow:

Annual Show of Trotting Stallions.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 9.—The annual trotting stallion show took place here to-day at the grounds of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association. Many sires now doing stud service in Central Kentucky were on exhibition, among the most pleasing being the four stallions from the Patchen-Wilkes Farm of W. E. D. Stokes of New York and the exhibit of the Walnut Hall Farm of L. V. Harkness of New York. The former were: Peter the Great, 2:07¼; Horace W. Wilson, 2:19½; John Wentz, Jr., 2:29¾, and Onward George, 2:22¼.

DELAWARE INCORPORATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

BANKRUPTCY SALES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—In the matter of WILLIAM H. LAZARUS, Bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that the tangible personal property belonging to the estate of the above-named bankrupt, consisting of chiffons, straw braids, shoe-lace braids, feathers, flowers, trimmed and untrimmed hats, and other millinery supplies, and office furniture, will be sold, by order of the Court, on April 14th, 1906. The property is hereby offered for sale at private sale, and sealed bids for all or any part thereof may be submitted to the Receiver at the office of his attorney, such bids to be submitted not later than April 14th, at 10 A. M., cash or certified checks for ten per cent. of the amount of the bid to accompany the same. If the total of the private bids received for the property falls below seventy-five per cent. of the appraised value thereof, then and in that case the said property will be sold at public auction by Charles W. Shongood, United States Official Auctioneer, on Monday, April 16th, 1906, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon, at Nos. 113-115 Leonard Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, where the property to be submitted for sale may be inspected on any day between the hours of 10 A. THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Foreign Exchange Weakens Again and $1,000,000 Gold is Taken.

After four hours of intense dullness, this contraction in business being the one result of Saturday's very unfavorable bank statement, although it was aggravated by an early rate of 25 per cent. for money, yesterday's stock market gave way abruptly in the closing hour to the declines accompanying an outburst of activity. Issues conspicuous for their firmness in the early trading suffered most, Amalgamated Copper, New York Central, and Union Pacific falling 2 points, Reading 1½ points, Delaware & Hudson and Great Northern 4 points each, and Anaconda Copper 3⅝ points, while declines of a point or more were numerous. The selling movement seemed due more to professional disappointment over the fact that money failed to work materially lower, after the morning quotation of 25 per cent., than to any real news developments of the day, for such news as came to hand was not, in itself, unfavorable. There was, for instance, no cause for anxiety in the fact that the anthracite coal operators had asked the miners' representatives for a postponement until to-day of the conference set down for yesterday, since this request at least indicated a disposition to take no hasty action one way or the other upon the arbitration proposition offered by the miners. In the same way the continued decline in sterling exchange was a matter of cheer, since it fostered hopes of a substantial gold import movement in the event of any protraction of the present period of active money. The engagement of $1,250,000 gold was announced before the end of the day and it was generally understood that arrangements were under way for very much larger takings. There was natural disappointment that the engagements of the day failed to bear out the expectations on Saturday that unusually large purchases of gold would be made abroad yesterday, but these expectations were ill-founded, since the floating supply of gold in Europe is so small that our bankers must depend upon the arrivals of new gold from day to day at English ports from South Africa, although of these we should secure the greater part, granting a continuance of present money market conditions here.

Bar gold in London rose rather sharply following the inquiries of our bankers in that market, coupled with a renewal of the demand for Paris account, but present exchange rates would permit a further substantial advance in the price of bar gold before engagements became unprofitable. The weakness in sterling exchange was greater yesterday than upon any previous day of the declining movement, the rate falling almost 40 points. An encouraging feature of the import position is found in the fact that money is easier in London than it has been upon the occasion of any fortnightly settlement in months. The banks continue to lose heavily to the Sub-Treasury, the drain since Friday having amounted to $1,220,000, compared with $966,000 in the more period of the previous week. The heavy pension payments looked for during the present week should serve to reduce the loss to the Government. Relief is also expected from th fact that, the Controller's call having been issued, "window dressing" preparatory to this is, of course, at an end, and high rates for money here should therefore attract funds from many quarters.

VIRGINIA TRACTION MERGER.

To Issue $14,000,000 Securities and Build to Jamestown Exposition.

NORFOLK, Va., April 9.—It became known to-day that behind the merger of all the electrical traction and lighting properties in this section of Virginia, exclusive of those controlled by W. J. Payne of Richmond, and Alexander Brown & Sons of Baltimore, are moneyed interests in the United Gas and Improvement Company of Philadelphia. The merger is to be under the name of the Norfolk & Portsmouth Traction Company and the capitalization is to include $6,000,000 in stock and $8,000,000 in bonds.

There will be an immediate issue of $3,500,000 of bonds and $5,000,000 of stock. R. Lancaster Williams, now President of the Norfolk Railway & Lighting Company, which owns the largest properties absorbed, is to be President, and E. C. Hathaway, now General Manager of the Norfolk Railway & Lighting Company, General Manager. The merger line will build a new interurban line from Portsmouth to Suffolk and Smithfield, Va., and control new lines to be extended to the Jamestown Exposition grounds on Hampton Roads.

TOLEDO TERMINAL BONDS.

Negotiations Under Way for Settlement of Bondholders' Claims.

The announcement of the formal organization of the Protective Committee, representing the holders of Toledo Railway & Terminal bonds, interest on which was defaulted in January, has been postponed until the end of the week. The fact that the organization of the committee was not announced yesterday, as had been planned, was said to be due to negotiations which are under way looking to a settlement of the claims of the Toledo bondholders without their resorting to foreclosure proceedings.

It was not made known on what basis the holders of the bonds expect to come to an agreement with the Morgan interests. It has been reported several times that the Morgan syndicate, which holds practically all the common stock of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company, was disposed to come to an agreement with the Toledo Terminal bondholders, providing the Morgan interests were able to bring about a satisfactory adjustment of the Père Marquette lease and of the Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville purchase, which the Morgan syndicate is endeavoring to undo.

The three months required by the terms of the mortgage to make the non-payment of interest on the Toledo Railway & Terminal bonds a formal default have already expired. The Protective Committee has been in process of organization for the past two weeks.

TRYING TO SELL WALSH ROADS

Chicago Lines Apparently Not Anxious to Acquire Them.

The Chicago Clearing House bankers who took over the Walsh properties on the failure of the Chicago National and the other Walsh banking institutions have resumed their efforts to dispose of the Walsh railroads to one of the lines entering Chicago. These efforts, it was said yesterday, have met with little success. Among the roads which were recently approached after the New York Central and the Rock Island systems had refused to purchase on the terms fixed by the banks is the Wabash Railroad. F. A. Delano, President of that road, said yesterday that the Chicago bankers had offered the Walsh properties to the Wabash, but that his road had no intention whatever of purchasing the Chicago Southern, the Southern Indiana, and the other Walsh properties. The Chicago bankers are trying to dispose of all the properties together, which makes their sale even more difficult than it would be under other conditions.

It has been said on behalf of the Chicago Clearing House banks that they regard the Walsh properties as very valuable, and that they would prefer to develop the roads rather than sell them at too great a sacrifice. After the failure a few weeks ago of the negotiations which were then under way with the New York Central and Rock Island systems, representatives of the bankers said that they would formulate new plans, and that it might be determined to develop the properties and put off indefinitely their sale. The fact that the roads within the last few days have been offered anew to the Wabash, and possibly to other roads as well, was taken as an indication that the bankers had decided that it would be better, if possible, to dispose of the properties as they now stand.

BOSTON'S BIG CLEARINGS.

All Records for Year and Month Broken by Association.

BOSTON, April 9.—All records of the Boston Clearing House Association for volume of business done were broken last year, according to reports made at the annual meeting of the organization. The total exchanges for the year, $7,969,401,440, were larger by $600,000,000 than in any year of the half century of the association's history. This aggregate exceeded that of last year by $1,000,000,000.

The record for volume of weekly clearings was broken the week of Jan. 26, the figures being $207,461,000. The month of January showed an aggregate of $843,353,000 in clearings, which also was greater than any previous record. The foreign department business shows a gain of $42,740,000, the total for the year being $618,335,000.

According to the report of C. A. Ruggles, manager, the membership is now twenty-two banks, with a capital of $26,630,000, a surplus of $23,572,000, and deposits of $215,161,000.

Franklin Haven, President of the Merchants' National Bank, was re-elected President, and A. W. Newell, President of the Fourth National Bank, Secretary.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Consumers Said to be Holding Orders, Hoping for Lower Prices.

Consumers of iron and steel, it is reported, have recently been making efforts to induce some of the steel companies to make concessions from present prices on contracts placed for future delivery. The producers, however, who have their hands full at present, are said to be holding firmly to schedule prices. The desire on the part of consumers to obtain lower prices is said to be resulting in the withholding of orders for the second half of the year. That the steel companies, however, are not likely to yield readily is indicated by the fact that many of the mills of the country are sold ahead for many months to come. In some lines the output of the United States Steel Corporation has been sold up to the end of this year.

The Westinghouse Manufacturing Company, it was reported yesterday, had purchased 5,000 tons of pig iron, which is said to have been bought at a favorable price. It is considered likely that the Steel Corporation will have to go into the open market again to get the amount of iron required by its finishing mills, which are said to be using iron at a greater rate than the Steel Corporation is able to supply from its own furnaces.

MAY OPEN ON GOOD FRIDAY.

Stock Exchange Committee Opposes All But Legal Holidays.

A petition signed by a number of the members of the Stock Exchange has been sent to the Governing Committee of the Exchange requesting the committee to close the Exchange as usual on Good Friday. Some opposition exists among the members of the committee, it was said yesterday, to closing the Exchange on that day owing to the fact that it is not a legal holiday.

The committee will act on the petition at its regular meeting to-morrow.

For a great many years the closing of the Exchange on Good Friday has been taken as a matter of course. For more than a generation there has been but one exception and that was in 1898, when the Exchange kept open because of the Spanish war.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call on Stock Exchange collateral loaned at 6@25 per cent., with the last loans at 6 per cent. Most of the day's business was done at 22 per cent.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, April 9.—Supplies of money were fairly plentiful in the market to-day. Discounts were firm.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was extremely quiet owing to the settlement and the approaching holidays. Consols opened steady, but closed slightly easier. Home rails were cheerful, helped by the Board of Trade returns.

Americans opened dull, improved slightly to above parity, were fairly steady, became inactive, eased during the last hour, and closed steady at above the lowest prices of the day.

Foreigners were quietly firm.

Japanese Imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101¼.

Money, 2@2½ per cent.

Discount rates: Short bills, 3 per cent.; three months' bills, 3 1-16@3⅛ per cent.

Bullion amounting to £275,000 was taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day.

The United States has secured all the available supplies of gold in the London market this week, aggregating $1,250,000, after keen competition with France. The price was 77s 11¼d to 77s 11½d, which is a fraction above the fixed market rate, 77s 11½d.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, April 9.—Trading on the Bourse to-day was inactive.

Russian Imperial 4s were quoted at 83.35 and Russian bonds of 1904 at 520.

Three per cent. rentes, 99f 15c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 11c for checks.

BERLIN, April 9.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were quiet. Domestic shares were subject to realizations.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 47½ pfennigs for checks.

Discount rates: Short bills, 3½ per cent.; three months' bills, 3⅝ per cent.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 9.—The trading was light to-day, and while the tendency at first was toward slight recoveries in some of the active issues, as the session progressed, declines set in, carrying the general list down. Maryland Casualty suffered the largest loss—1⅜ points. Atlantic Coast Line of Connecticut opened 1 point lower. Atlantic Coast Line rights advanced ¼, to 5½.

After the noon recess trading was dull. No effort was put forth to check the downward movement. Cotton Duck 5s ran off 1½ per cent., to 85½. Western Maryland second 4s broke 2⅜ points. Seaboard new common sagged off ⅜ and Baltimore Brick preferred 2 points.

The close was dull. Sales: Bonds, $30,000; stock, 97 shares.

GOLD IMPORTS FROM LONDON.

The National City Bank engaged $1,250,000 gold in London yesterday for import to New York. It was said that this amount would be increased to $1,500,000 before the actual shipment of the gold from the other side. The exchange market was very weak yesterday, demand sterling declining to 4.8405, and closing only 5 points above that price. The money market was still strained, call loans being made as high as 25 per cent. Some surprise was felt that under this condition the gold engagements were not larger. This was said to be due to the fact that there was a scarcity of gold bars in the open market in London, and thus far efforts to get gold from the European banks have not been successful.

A large amount of gold was reported to have been received in Berlin from Russia, but bankers here who would be likely to be informed of any such arrivals were unaware of any fresh supplies of gold having been received there. Paris is said to be a keen competitor for gold with the New York market. This is taken as an indication that Paris is strengthening itself in preparation for the coming Russian loan. It is thought that Paris is likely to bid against New York for the gold which is to arrive in the London market in the near future, but the opinion is held by bankers here that should interest rates at this centre be maintained New York will in all probability secure the gold. This seeming contest for gold between New York and Paris is held responsible for the advance of three-fourths of a penny yesterday in the price of bar gold in London.

Before the close of the market yesterday call money dropped back to 6 per cent. At the end of the day some of the large banking houses expressed the opinion that the worst of the stringency in money was over. The fact that the Controller of the Currency announced yesterday the call for the condition of the banks was regarded as likely to influence the situation favorably inasmuch as the banks are likely, now that the call has been issued, to lend out their funds somewhat more freely.

Reports were current again yesterday that Secretary Shaw had in contemplation special deposits of Government funds with the National banks for the purpose of easing the money market. The suggestion was made in this connection that such action in addition to supplying the immediate needs of the money market would be regarded by the Treasury Department as helping the sale, later on, of Panama Canal bonds.

A consignment of French gold coin amounting to $500,000, which arrived on Saturday, was intended for transshipment to Cuba, and therefore has no bearing upon the local situation.

Call for Condition of National Banks.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The Controller of the Currency to-day issued a call for the condition of the National banks at the close of business on Friday, April 6.

An Enterprise With an Interesting History

Investors who bought the stock of the Copete Mining Company three months ago have made already five hundred per cent. on their investment. The advance of the stock has been entirely on its merits.

The fluctuations of the stock in the market have been somewhat phenomenal. It has sold all the way from $15 to 15c. a share, and is now apparently on its way back to the highest mark, and it is by no means certain that it will stop there. The causes of these fluctuations are well understood and do not need to be here repeated. It sold at its highest on its merits, and the explanation of its low-water mark is found in causes which had nothing to do with values. Suffice it to say that these causes have been happily removed. That is the reason the stock is going up again.

The COPETE CONSOLIDATED COPPER COMPANY is organized to carry to its completion the work begun by the Copete Mining Company.

It starts with all its stock Treasury stock, and no stock will be issued except for cash.

All the profits will be divided among the stockholders, who all pay cash for their stock.

The COPETE property, in the profits of which the stockholders of the COPETE CONSOLIDATED COPPER COMPANY will have a liberal interest, is one of the most famous and best indorsed of all the copper properties of North America.

The COPETE CONSOLIDATED COPPER COMPANY has a very low capitalization and is carefully and conservatively managed. Its stock is believed to be an investment at the same time most conservative and most promising.

Full particulars will be given and prices quoted on application.

APRIL 1906

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

In an exclusive Wall Street circle it was stated in the most positive manner late yesterday afternoon that the anthracite strike situation had been practically settled.

* * *

However bullish a broker may be, he feels that he cannot afford to let his clients load up with stocks when there is not money enough to go around.

* * *

The larger commission houses are, as a rule, well provided with time money, and a few of them have a surplus of time money which they lend on call at the high rates, but where a house has 75 per cent. of its money (a large proportion) borrowed on time at 5 or 5½ per cent., the cost of the other 25 per cent., borrowed on call at 20 to 30 per cent. for eight or ten days consecutively, rapidly raises the average of the whole. Another week or ten days of tight money would probably bring the average cost of many a broker's money up to 8 or 10 per cent. for the month of April, and interest charges at that rate wear heavily upon profits. Brokers are already calling the attention of their clients to this fact, hoping to anticipate the complaints which may be expected if it becomes necessary to charge them interest for this month at 8 or 10 per cent. The head of a large wire house issued a warning yesterday to the firm's clients, saying that it was impossible for an active house to carry more than 60 or 70 per cent. of its stocks with time money, and as the difference had to be made up with call money, holders of margined stocks could figure roughly for themselves what they might expect to pay as interest charges at the end of the month. None of this matters much, so long as the market is advancing. The margin trader does not begrudge paying his broker ⅛ per cent. a week to carry a stock that goes up 3 or 4 per cent., but when the market ceases to advance, or begins to decline, that is, when profits cease to run ahead of interest charges, people begin to count the cost.

* * *

The obstinacy with which call money ruled above 20 per cent. yesterday seemed at last to get upon the bull crowd's nerves. The strain began to tell. Until yesterday the quoted rates for call money were subject to wide and abrupt fluctuations, and that kept up the delusion among bullish traders that the money market was being manipulated. This idea of manipulation was much in vogue last week. On Saturday there were those who undertook to prove by the bank statement that the banks had simply been locking money up. Yesterday forenoon it was persistently rumored that a very large bank had contrived to conceal, or was in some manner withholding from the stock market, the enormous sum of $8,000,000. But a bank that could resist the temptation of lending $8,000,000 of free money at 20 per cent. or higher is not believed to exist in Wall Street, and in the light of the day's money market, therefore, the rumor seemed ridiculous. The initial loans were made above 20 per cent. Renewals were made at that rate. Once during the day the rate got below 20 per cent., but went back immediately, and it was not until shortly before the close, when the demand was entirely satisfied, that the rate broke. The last quotations were merely nominal.

* * *

The trading talent approached the market with a strong bearish bias. It had been contemplating the bank statement over Sunday and the probability of continued tight money, and was for helping to relieve the situation by inducing other people to liquidate stocks. Up to 1 o'clock, however, the absence of genuine selling pressure was a check upon bearish operations. There seemed to be very few stocks in the market, and no sign anywhere of a loosening up. The market had been very dull up to this time, especially between noon and 1 o'clock, in which hour the ticker was silent for long intervals. The selling movement which came later had no definite origin. First one stock and then another turned weak, apparently because speculative holders were making up their minds one by one to let go and wait further developments in the money market. Wherever bearish traders discovered such selling they attacked the market, and in the last hour the volume of transactions increased heavily at the expense of prices.

* * *

The selling pressure which developed in the afternoon was most pronounced in Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific. Their maximum declines somewhat exceeded 2 per cent. each. Both closed at almost the lowest. They were the leaders of the market in point of activity. Reading, Pennsylvania, Steel common, St. Paul, and the Hill stocks also were features of weakness, although in none of these last-named issues was there anything like the pressure under which Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific declined. In Amalgamated Copper there was evidently the same kind of support which was forthcoming last week on the level of 110, but the stock nevertheless went below the point at which its reaction was arrested last week.

* * *

It is reported on trustworthy authority that since last November $5,000,000 has been withdrawn from a large New York savings bank to be invested in real estate. This statement conveys some idea of the extent to which real estate speculation has been carried in this neighborhood, but in its bearing upon the money market situation the matter is not all one sided. Money which is invested in real estate does not soak into the ground and disappear. It serves its purpose in that transaction and then returns either to the channels from which it was diverted or to others. Money withdrawn from savings banks and invested in speculative New York real estate is likely to find a much more active employment than it had when it represented savings. It amounts to a diversion of money from savings banks to channels where it becomes a basis of active credit.

* * *

It is argued that the absence of selling pressure in the stock market denotes great confidence on the part of those in whose hands the floating supply of stocks has become concentrated. There may be another reason why these interests show no disposition to sell. There is not a market at present on which large amounts of stocks can be liquidated to advantage. It is too narrow, too much made up of professional trading, and almost wholly devoid of public interest. It is only on a broad, active market, in which commission houses are induced to take part, that stocks can be distributed successfully. So long, therefore, as there is nothing in the general situation that would cause the large holders of speculative stocks to sacrifice their lines it seems natural that they should sit still and await conditions more favorable to a broad, active speculation. It is surprising to think how many stocks are concentrated in few hands, some of them at very high prices. The most notable example, perhaps, is Tennessee Coal and Iron, which is so concentrated that trading in it has practically ceased. Four or five other industrials, in which there is still a pretence of free trading, are similarly situated. This is one thing that helps to tighten up the money market. It is not a bull argument on Tennessee Coal and Iron, so that there is no selling of the stock. A few men have nearly all of it, and whether they wish to or not, it is not feasible for them to sell.

* * *

There was a reasonably good market for all the active stocks yesterday on price recessions. The selling was variously characterized. Some brokers said that about four-fifths of it was of professional origin, and others believed it emanated from pool sources. Several houses which have recently been prominently associated with pool operations in various stocks sold heavily all around the room in the afternoon—not the stocks in which the pools exist, but others which were easier to sell. Brokers supposed to be acting for an uptown bear clique, especially the Weil group, were reported to be selling freely on the decline.

* * *

For the first time in many days the maximum of activity yesterday was on declining prices. A feeble recovery after a weak opening resulted in utter stagnation, and the market remained dull and lifeless until the selling movement started in the afternoon.

* * *

The buying of stocks in a tight money market is likely to be better than the selling. Weak speculators cannot afford to buy.

*Decrease.

The local opening showed but slight price changes from Saturday's closing figures. There was some demand for Daly-West, the stock gaining half a point and holding strong at the advance. Amalgamated was active and showed over a point loss at the close. There was considerable realizing in the afternoon by disappointed holders of copper shares who bought on the recent advance, and who have now become somewhat discouraged on account of the inactivity of some of these issues and the weakness displayed by the New York market. The closing was weak and at around the lowest point of the day.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 9.—Of to-day's total sales, two-thirds were Reading and United States Steel common, the latter being the active leader. There was no disposition to trade. Even the floor traders found it almost impossible to scalp a fractional profit in the general list. A weak spot in the market was Philadelphia Rapid Transit, which was forced off ¾. It was not active, but it lacked effective support. While the call loan rate was officially raised to 6 per cent. to-day, it was artificial.

Loans were made as low as 5 per cent., and there was little difficulty in obtaining accommodation where the collateral was satisfactory. The weekly showing of the banks was good, indicating something more than 10 per cent. above the legal requirement. Total sales, 21,683 shares.

THE COTTON MARKET.

South Sold on Better Weather—Traders Switched from May to July.

WEATHER FORECAST FOR COTTON STATES.

For North Carolina, fair Tuesday and Wednesday; fresh to brisk southwest to northwest winds.

For Georgia, Eastern Florida, Western Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Eastern Texas, fair Tuesday and Wednesday; variable winds.

For Western Texas, Kansas, Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Arkansas, Tennessee, and Kentucky, fair Tuesday and Wednesday.

It was a typical holiday week market yesterday on the Cotton Exchange. Switching from May to July was the feature of trading. The only outside interest came from the South, where the weather was generally clear. This induced considerable selling of October. The volume of business was small. Liverpool was about as expected.

The New York market opened one point lower to one higher on the Fall options, and unchanged to 4 points up on the near months, May being 11.23, July, 11.16, and October, 10.56. The bull leaders were said to have given some support in May and July at first, but later sold these months and bought October. Near months yielded 7 points on liquidation and October later lost 5 points. May sold down from 11.24 to 11.17, July from 11.18 to 11.11, and October from 10.60 to 10.55. Some recovery was made in the late trading, and the market closed one to four points lower for the day—May at 11.18, July at 11.11, and October at 10.53.

The local spot market remained unchanged at 11.70 for middling against 8.05 last year. Sales were 100 bales. Liverpool sold 12,000 bales of spot cotton at 6.14d., 10,000 bales being American. The price on the same day last year was 4.29d. The Southern spot markets were reported firm.

The impression is becoming general that the bull leader is going to push his campaign, and this makes operators cautious about selling on improved weather.

Liverpool futures closed quiet at one to two points decline—May-June, 5.96; July-August, 5.97; September-October, 5.78; October-November, 5.71 and December-January, 5.71. There was a fair business doing in Manchester yarns, and cloths were reported firm.

The estimated receipts for to-day are: Houston, 5,500 to 6,000 bales, against 4,350 last week and 8,450 last year. Galveston, 7,500 to 8,500 bales against 7,985 last week and 12,769 last year. New Orleans, 7,000 to 8,500 bales, against 6,984 last week and 11,861 last year. Interior receipts at the thirteen principal towns were 7,540 bales against 7,785 last week, and 18,334 last year. Shipments, 11,133 bales, against 13,448 last week and 16,609 last year. Port receipts for Sunday and Monday were 17,064 bales, against 12,153 last week and 31,114 last year. Since Sept. 1, 6,834,166 bales, against 8,073,935 last year. Exports, 9,919 bales. Since Sept. 1, 5,225,021 bales, against 6,523,299 last year. Port stocks, 711,167.

Cotton Opinions.

DICK BROTHERS & CO.—The technical position of the market favors a further advance.

A. O. BROWN & CO.—Our advices from the South and also in regard to the American cotton goods trade are bullish, and after the holidays we are inclined to the opinion that there will be a gradual advance.

J. S. BACHE & CO.—The spot situation continues to gain in strength.

T. A. McINTYRE & CO.—There is little or no short interest in the market at present that can be worried into covering.

Following are the opening, highest, lowest, and closing prices:

	Opening.	Highest and Lowest.	Closing.	Prev. Close.
January	10.60	10.61-10.60	10.58	10.61

November	......		10.53	10.57
December	10.58	10.62-10.55	10.55	10.59

Market closed quiet and steady. Estimated sales, 200,000 bales. The New Orleans market closed quiet at 1 to 2 points decline on the near months and unchanged on the far—May at 11.25, July 11.35, October 10.48, and December 10.49.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Pressure developed on Illinois Brick stock on the local Exchange to-day as the logical result of the talk of a local brick war exploited as a bear argument on the shares a fortnight ago. There seems to be no doubt now that contracts for brick are being made at less than $6 a thousand. The selling of the stock to-day was limited, but so was the demand, even from shorts. As a result the price was lowered from 60 to 55½ and back to 57. Directors have said that competition now in sight cannot work against dividend payments this year. The active management of the company is non-committal.

Accompanying the gossip that Union Traction interests are now working on a reorganization plan for the traction stocks, with a probable assessment of $10 a share on Union Traction common, there was a sale of West Chicago consolidated 5 per cent. bonds at 55. This compares with a sale at 80 on Feb. 20 and is a low record price for the bonds.

Subway shares were under kindly influences, selling between 52¾ and 54¾ and back to 53¾. The Gates pool is at work. Incidentally the Illinois Tunnel bonds, which must sell somewhat higher before a good advance can be manipulated in Subway, improved to 94, the best figure in some time. Other local issues were quiet, with Chicago Telephone going at 115@116.

New York exchange, par to 10 cents premium.

CITY MAY NOW INCREASE CONNECTING R. R. TERMS

Mayor's Committee Thinks the Franchise Undervalued.

UPHOLDS THE NICHOLS RATE

Board of Estimate Committee Displeased by the Road's Attitude Toward the City Regulations.

Terms for the New York Connecting Railroad franchise may be increased by the city as a result of the stand which Mayor McClellan has taken. It became known yesterday that the conference committee appointed by the Mayor to represent the Board of Estimate in its conference with the Rapid Transit Commission would demand that the original price suggested by Harry P. Nichols, Chief of the Bureau of Franchises, be increased rather than diminished at the demand of the railroad interests.

At first the franchise called for the payment of sums aggregating $2,250,000 for the twenty-five years. It also provided for the insertion of a clause prohibiting the company from indulging in any freight-rate discrimination against the city. Demand was made by the company that this clause be eliminated and the rates of charges be materially reduced. If this was not done, the officials of the Pennsylvania and New Haven Roads, which own the Connecting Road, declared they would not construct the line.

After Mayor McClellan demanded of the Rapid Transit Commission that the original Nichols terms be adhered to, when the Commissioners had agreed to reduce the figure to $1,100,000, he named President McGowan of the Board of Aldermen and Borough Presidents Coler and Bermel to go over the proposed route and take up the adjustment of terms with the Rapid Transit Board. The members of this committee all agreed with the stand taken by the Mayor, and they have since made a careful trip over the route. This, they said, Mr. Nichols had never been able to do. As a result of the trip, they have come to the conclusion that Mr. Nichols undervalued the franchise rather than overvalued it, as the railroad officers contended.

The members of the committee of the Board of Estimate feel aggrieved at the way in which the officials and attorneys for the railroad have treated them. They feel that the attitude of the company has been that it believed it could do as it pleased with its right of way, regardless of the fact that the line was to cross city streets, and that the city therefore had a just right to regulate its crossing as a public service franchise.

There will be a meeting of the McGowan committee to-morrow, and at that time it will receive a further and a complete report of conditions from Mr. Nichols, who accompanied the members of the committee on their tours. This report will include, as far as possible, descriptions of the form of construction proposed by the company and its probable effect on the neighborhoods through which the line will pass.

COPPER MARKET REPORTS.

The purchases of copper by Germany are said to have increased considerably since the settlement of the Moroccan controversy, which resulted in the withholding of many orders. Most of the important American producers of copper have sold practically their entire output up to the end of June. The position of the copper market, representatives of large producing companies say, continues one of great strength. The opinion is expressed that there is very little likelihood of any material recession from present prices in the near future. On the other hand, these interests would not be surprised by a further advance in copper, possibly to 20 cents.

Closing prices on the Metal Exchange yesterday for copper and other metals compare as follows with those of Friday:

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Trading Restricted by Tight Money and Bad Weather.

Chicago Subway and United Copper Fairly Active—General List but Little Changed.

Trading in the outside security market was restricted yesterday by the combination of tight money and unfavorable weather conditions. Chicago Subway and United Copper were the only stocks in which any notable activity appeared. The former was strong until shortly after noon, having advanced up to that time from 52½ to 55. In the closing hour, however, all but half a point of this gain was lost. United Copper was heavy throughout, its opening and closing prices, 67⅞ and 66¼, respectively, being the highest and lowest of the day. The remainder of the market moved within the narrowest of limits, and net changes for the day were represented by the merest fractions.

* * *

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

INDUSTRIALS.

Sales.		First.	High.	Low.	Last.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT—The opening of the grain markets was generally quiet and rather featureless, upon a little firmer level. Wheat started better by 3-16@¼c, on ⅛@¼d higher cables. But the public speculative interest in wheat was small and the market soon became easier, declining a little after the opening, but again turning decidedly strong on renewed and increased strength in cash wheat markets, notably at St. Louis, where May contracts advanced over 1c per bushel. At the same time statistics represented a falling off in stocks. Offerings became light. A demand to cover carried prices ½@⅝c higher. The market for cash wheat closed firm. No. 2 red, 89c elevator and 89½c free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 87⅞c, free on board afloat.

CORN—There was a much better demand for corn, which developed a strong upward tendency on unfavorable weather, further belating farm work. At the same time the visible supply of corn showed a decrease of 2,131,000 bushels, cutting the quantity down to 9,260,000 bushels, against 8,980,000 bushels last year. Corn cables were firm and the movement was a subsiding one. The market was finally firm at an advance of ⅜@½c. Cash corn was held too firm for business. No. 2 corn, 56c nominal, in elevator, and 56c free on board, afloat; No. 2 white and No. 2 yellow, 56c, free on board afloat.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

BAINBRIDGE CREAMERY COMPANY.—A judgment for $163,026 was entered yesterday against the Bainbridge Creamery Company in favor of the Guaranty Trust Company, as agent for the bondholders for the amount now due, with interest, on $125,000 debenture bonds which were issued by the Bainbridge Creamery Company on April 1, 1902, and upon which default in payment of interest was made on Oct. 1, 1902. It is a New York corporation. Samuel B. Lawrence was President when the bonds were issued, and W. C. Edwards, Treasurer. Horace S. Gould, Secretary, was served with the summons, at 149 Broadway.

TURBINE ENGINEERING COMPANY.—Deputy Sheriff Murray has received an attachment for $2,960 against the Turbine Engineering Company of 17 Battery Place, with an office in Chicago, in favor of W. A. Pitt on a note of the company, dated Sept. 28, 1905, at Chicago, payable six months after date to the order of the Fox Security Company, which assigned it to Mr. Pitt. The attachment was granted on the ground that it is a Connecticut corporation, and the Sheriff put a keeper in the office. The company was incorporated on Aug. 1, 1903, with a capital stock of $150,000, and had the agency for a steam turbine in this city and several Western States. L. G. Read was President and General Manager and Samuel B. Fox Treasurer.

AARONSON CREDIT CENTRE.—Deputy Sheriff O'Neil yesterday took charge of the place of business of the Aaronson Credit Centre at 62 Bowery, dealers in clothing, jewelry, hats, shoes, and furniture on the installment plan, which was composed of Moses A. and Lionel E. Z. Aaronson, on an execution for $1,495 in favor of Nathan Rosenberg. They carried no stock to speak of, as they filled their orders in neighboring stores. The Sheriff found a tin box in the safe which contained some rings, breastpins, and silver watches, which he brought down to the Sheriff's office, but it was believed they were of small value. They have a large amount of outstanding accounts for goods sold on weekly payments. The present business was started in 1896. Moses A. Aaronson was previously in the dry goods business from 1877 to 1885.

HARRY H. HOYT & CO.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Harry H. Hoyt, who did business as Harry H. Hoyt & Co., stock broker, at 44 and 1,133 Broadway, show liabilities of $44,753, and no assets. There are 100 creditors, of whom twenty-four are women. Among the creditors are Hoyt I. Mortimer, South Norwalk, Conn., $7,000; Charles A. Freeman, South Norwalk, Conn., $5,000; J. H. On completion of the Penn. R. R. Subway.
Lot $300. $10 Down & $5 Monthly
With improvements, running water, etc.; no interest or taxes for one year. Title guaranteed. This is without a doubt the most beautiful and attractive piece of property and investment that was ever placed on the market before. Everybody knows John L. Childs, the seed and flower raiser; this property adjoins his handsome estate; it is also right at the depot and trolley. Floral Park has the best railroad service on Long Island, owing to four branch roads running through it. These lots are as good as 100 per cent. investment and could not be bought for less than that in a year from now, and a beautiful home site for any one wishing to build. All the new Penn. R. R. tunnels and improvements go straight to this property. For free tickets, booklets, etc., apply to

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

HAVE YOU EVER HEARD OF THE ENGLISH METHOD OF HOME BUYING

and of how many happy and independent HOME OWNERS it has made throughout the UNITED KINGDOM?

We are operating the same safe and conservative system here in OUR COUNTRY, and it has proven very successful, because the money you have paid heretofore in rent each month through our system is a payment towards a HOME, and you pay no more than you now pay in rent, and in a few years you will have YOUR HOME all paid for.

You have to pay only $5.00 down on each thousand you wish to invest in a home; $2.50 per month on each thousand (for three months), receiving credit for $2.00 of the $2.50. After the home has been purchased for you, you then pay us $7.00 per month per thousand, receiving credit for $5.00 of the $7.00 each month on the principal.

THE HAND OF THE CZAR CRUSHING THIS FAMILY

SON A SUICIDE IN NEW YORK

Daughter Dying Slowly in an East Side Tenement, Refusing Offers of Food and Money.

The tragedy of the Kaplan family, a member of which committed suicide about two weeks ago in the offices of Die Wahrheit on the east side, appears to be drawing to a close. It is one of the saddest stories that has come out of the east side in a long time. Like many others, it has had its beginning and will probably have its end as a result of the heavy hand of the Czar of Russia and his agents.

While the mother and father of young Nathan Kaplan, who shot himself in the newspaper office, are starving in Russia, his sister is seemingly starving herself to death in the rear room of a tenement house. Since her brother's death, not knowing how it may be with her parents in Russia, the girl has slowly pined away. Apparently she wants to die. Specifically she has consumption.

The Kaplans lived at Bielostock in Russia. Nathan Kaplan, the son, fled to this country and obtained employment. While he was living at 250 Madison Street last year he received a letter from his parents, telling him that the Czar's agents had seized their little property and that they were in dire straits. The parents said they could suffer and be silent, but they grieved for and feared for their daughter Jennie, who is a particularly beautiful girl.

Nathan sent them all the money he could raise, and Jennie came to this country. She stayed at the boarding house in Madison Street with her brother and found employment in the sweat shops. She had done little hard labor in Russia where her parents, previous to the confiscation of their property, had been fairly well off. The atmosphere and environment of the sweat shops ruined the girl's health.

She worked on, however, and she and her brother sent their little savings to their parents in Russia, at the same time putting a little away to enable the father and mother to join them in a land where they could be free and united. Some weeks ago, however, the girl's health completely broke down and she fell back upon her brother's support.

Nathan had a hard time of it. He worked day and night, but what he made was not sufficient to keep himself and Jennie, pay doctor's bills, and at the same time relieve the homeless ones in Russia. About two weeks ago, after receiving news that his parents were starving, he went into the offices of Die Wahrheit, laid two letters on the editor's desk, said he and his loved ones had been crushed by the hand of the "Great White" Czar, then, going to the next room, he shot himself through the head.

Since then the girl has been failing rapidly. She refuses any comfort, will not eat, declines all offers of monetary assistance, and sits all day with a miniature of her brother in her hand looking out of a window. She keeps a diary. The following are a few entries:

April 3.—Slept a little, but was restless most of the time. Had no food to eat all day.

April 5.—I am discouraged, and I wish to die.

April 7.—Another day of misery, but some friends called and cheered me a little.

April 8.—I feel despondent and sick. My only wish is that I die soon.

When asked if she would go to work again if the opportunity offered she replied:

"Yes, but I cannot return to the sweatshop. It would kill me just the same."

WORSE THAN THE FORECAST.

Mr. Emery Said It Would Rain, but It Also Snowed and Hailed.

When the local weather forecaster, who every night about 10 o'clock telephones to the newspapers the kind of weather that is due the next day, called up the papers on Sunday night he said that yesterday would be a warm, rainy day, with variable winds. What he forecast came true, but he forgot to add a little snow and some hail to his schedule.

The day began with overcast skies, and soon after noon the rain came.

For the rest of the day with few intermissions the rain fell in a most uncomfortable drizzle. It hailed for a time about noon, but the stones were not large enough to do any damage. As for the snow it never reached the streets, and was visible only from the top floors of the skyscrapers. Like the hail, the fall was of short duration.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., April 9.—Snow which fell at this place to-day covered the ground to a depth of several inches. The storm began in the morning and lasted all day.

INSANE MAN'S DEATH.

Explanations of Cologero's End Don't Satisfy the Coroner.

Coroner Harburger believes that Cornelio Cologero, a demented patient in the State hospital on Ward's Island, who died the other day, met his death as the result of a murderous attack made upon him, and he proposes to find out who is responsible. He began with the inquiry yesterday. The date for the inquest was fixed for April 20.

The Coroner has already collected evidence enough to have a thorough investigation. His physician, Dr. Philip O'Hanlon, reported yesterday as the result of an autopsy that four of Cologero's ribs on the left and two on his right side had been fractured. He adds: "There are no external marks of violence. The fractures are more than six weeks old."

According to the report on the case made by H. C. Evarts, the Acting Superintendent, Cologero seems to have had great powers of endurance. Cologero was admitted to the Ward's Island institution on Dec. 29, 1904. Mr. Evarts says he was "excitable and quarrelsome," and adds:

"On March 23, while marching on the grounds with several hundred others, the patient was struck by another patient and thrown to the ground. He continued marching and made no complaint, but exhibited some slight bruises afterward. On March 29 the patient was pushed down several steps of a fire escape by another patient, and later in the day was found to have fractures of the eighth, ninth, tenth, and eleventh ribs on the left side. He made no complaint, but said he had been struck and pushed by another patient. He was transferred to the hospital ward and put to bed. The next day fractured ribs were found on the right side.

"His disease, general paralysis, rendered him quite insensible to pain, and the well-known fragibility of bones in this disease doubtless explains the case with which the ribs were fractured.

The Coroner asked Dr. Philip Smith, who was in charge of Cologero, for the names of the patients who had struke and pushed Cologero, but he said he could not give them.

"I propose to go into this inquiry very thoroughly," said Coroner Harburger yesterday. "When I have been in one of these institutions guards have stood about as thick as bees. What are they for if not to prevent attacks on patients? But even granting that these occur, are unavoidable sometimes, it passes my understanding that a report of such an attack was not handed in to the proper authorities. And there were two of them upon this poor fellow. No names in either case."

McFADDEN WAS NO. 23.

Gave Up His Job for a Phantom, and Now He Wants Delany's Head.

Corporation Counsel Delany's removal from office is demanded in charges which were filed against him with Mayor McClellan yesterday. The complainant is George McFadden of 33 Stewart Street, Brooklyn, who has a grievance against the Corporation Counsel because he did not get an appointment as a process server. McFadden charges "perjury, discrimination, and conspiracy."

McFadden was a candidate for a city appointment for a long time, and was on the civil service lists as a glazier, but Park Commissioner Eustis, under Mayor Low, renamed the job and appointed another man from another list. Recently McFadden took an examination for a process server. He got a letter a few days ago from the Corporation Counsel's office, asking if he wanted a temporary appointment to work with the legal bureau of the Tenement House Department. He said he did, for, being an exempt fireman, he would then be the last man to be dropped. He says on Thursday he was summoned to the office and told he could have the appointment. Then he gave up a job he had in the Bronx, only to be informed the next day that he would not be appointed after all. Hence his charges.

At the Law Department it was said that only twenty-two men were wanted. McFadden was No. 23 on the list.

THAT POLICE BOARD.

Frawley Thinks His Bi-Partisan Plan Will Go Through.

State Senator James J. Frawley, who last week introduced in the Legislature the bill to recreate the old bi-partisan Police Commission of four members, declared yesterday that he believed the Legislature would pass the measure.

"We have seen how badly the scheme of appointing a military man to that post works out," said Senator Frawley. "Several Mayors have tried the plan, and it has worked with signal lack of success in each case. The training required for a military career and for the head of a Police Department are entirely different. What we need is a member of the uniformed police force to act as its chief, with a board over his head. The change is bound to come, and I think it will come at the hands of this Legislature."

A MILK CAN CONTROVERSY.

Dealers Try to Stop Woodbury from Selling Those Seized.

The Horton & Lewis Cream Company, through its counsel, A. C. Gilbert, applied to Justice Newburger, in the Supreme Court, yesterday for an injunction restraining Street Cleaning Commissioner Woodbury from selling milk cans seized on the sidewalk by employes of the Street Cleaning Department. Decision was reserved.

Two laws relative to milk cans seem to conflict. One section gives the Street Cleaning Department the right to seize and dispose of cans that may obstruct traffic, while another section forbids persons to buy, sell, or dispose of cans belonging to any dealer whose name or initials appear thereon.

CHOIR SINGER ASKS DIVORCE.

Mrs. Heath Was Married When a Schoolgirl, She Says.

Mrs. Katherine Cordner Heath, soprano soloist at the West End Presbyterian Church, 105th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, is suing her husband, Glen Orlando Heath, for divorce. Heath is a telegraph operator. Mrs. Heath was married to him in Ohio ten years ago, and six months ago they separated. Recently the Supreme Court assigned a referee to take testimony in the case, and his report has been made. Heath didn't oppose the suit.

Mrs. Heath, it is said, receives $1,500 a year from the West End Presbyterian Church. She also has an income.

"Mr. Heath and I were married when I was a schoolgirl," she said yesterday. "My friends have known for some time that I was not happy with him."

Hoyt Estate Trustees Upheld.

The trustees of the estate of Jesse Hoyt were sustained by Surrogate Thomas yesterday in the controversy of the executors of the will of Mary Irene Hoyt, Jesse Hoyt's daughter. Miss Hoyt died last Summer. The executors of her will contended that there was a surplus of $26,000 due to her estate.

NOCQUET'S FRIENDS PLAN BALLOON TRIP TO-MORROW

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas to Make an Ascension at Pittsfield.

DE LA VAULX MAY GO UP, TOO

Mrs. Thomas Says She Is Looking Forward Eagerly to the Trip and Has No Fears.

Dr. Julian P. Thomas of 172 West Seventy-second Street completed arrangements yesterday to make a balloon ascension to-morrow with his wife, from Pittsfield, Mass. Charles Levee, the young French aeronaut, will accompany Dr. and Mrs. Thomas as pilot. The same balloon will be used in which Dr. Thomas made his first trip last week, the day preceding the fatal ascension of Paul Nocquet. It is the medium-sized balloon of the three that Count de la Vaulx brought over with him, and holds about 35,000 cubic feet of gas. It is called the Orient.

Mrs. Thomas, provided the ascension is successful, will be the first woman in this country to make a flight through the air in an ordinary balloon. She said yesterday that she was looking forward eagerly to the ascent.

"Ever since my husband told me how peaceful and delightful were the sensations of ballooning I have been anxious to accompany him," said Mrs. Thomas. "I had not expected to go up, however, until Dr. Thomas's new balloon arrives from Paris, but we have heard that it cannot be delivered within a month or so, and as I am to leave for California before May 1, the present trip was planned. I have every faith in Mr. Levee, for he has made over a score of successful ascensions in France, and his skill is highly commended by Count de la Vaulx. I witnessed Dr. Thomas's first ascension last week, and I saw how very simple it was.

"Going up from Pittsfield, we will have the double advantage of making a fairly long trip, and in no danger of being blown out to sea. I have no fear at all. In fact, I am more eager than I have ever been to see what a balloon trip is like, and my hope is that Wednesday will be a delightful day, and that we can make an early start."

The balloon was shipped to Pittsfield yesterday, and with it went Count de la Vaulx's big balloon, the Centaure, holding more than 50,000 cubic feet of gas, one of the largest balloons that has ever been used abroad. In this balloon the Count has made some of his longest journeys, including his record-breaking trip for distance from Paris to the Russian border, nearly 1,200 miles.

It is likely that the Count will make an ascension in this balloon with two or three members of the Aero Club to-morrow. It will depend, however, upon the facilities for inflating the balloons at the Pittsfield gas works. Last week a sixteen-inch pipe was connected with the gas tank so as to supply a large quantity of gas, and it is believed that it will take barely an hour to fill the balloon in which Dr. and Mrs. Thomas will ascend.

If Count de la Vaulx does not go up to-morrow he will do so at the first favorable opportunity, and there may be several ascensions before Saturday. Several members of the Aero Club will go to Pittsfield to-morrow to see Mrs. Thomas sail away in the air. Leo Stevens will accompany the balloonists and assist in the preparations.

Mr. Stevens has finished the airship that was ordered in January by Major C. J. S. Miller of Franklin, Penn. The ship itself is in Mr. Stevens's shop at Schuetzen Park, N. J., where it will soon be fitted to the frame to see if everything is satisfactory. The motor, which will be of seven and a half horse power, will be attached this week. The length of the airship is 110 feet, the largest one ever built in America.

The seventy-five-foot airship that Mr. Stevens has been building for G. L. Bumbaugh of Charlestown, West Va., is nearly completed, and Mr. Bumbaugh came to the city last week to fit the motor to the frame. The ship is 75 feet long and will have a twelve horse power motor with four cylinders. Mr. Bumbaugh is the man who says he is going to sail over and under the Williamsburg Bridge and continue his flight to the Brooklyn Bridge.

SOCIETY GOES BALLOONING.

But Only Indoors—Count de la Vaulx Invites Passengers.

Society went ballooning yesterday with Count Henri de la Vaulx. It was an invitation affair given with the aid of the stereopticon views and the cinematograph at the Berkeley Lyceum Theatre. There should have been literally the social 400 present to make the ascent, that number of invitations having been issued, but a pouring rain is discouraging, even to indoor ballooning, and it was a much smaller number who took a bird's-eye view of Paris with the Count.

"I have made 200 ascents," he said, "taken up over 1,000 people, more than 100 being women, and I have never met with a mishap. I will take up any of you who like to go. In France people go up every few days, and I hope the sport may become as popular here as it is there."

The lantern slide views showed every part of a balloon ascension with the world below as it looks to the balloonist, and the sea of clouds when it gets into great altitudes. The balloon first appeared packed for transportation, then lying flat on the ground like a huge mushroom; its gradual inflation, and the ascent with passengers were shown.

The bird's-eye views were taken above Paris and the surrounding country. Count de la Vaulx pointed out different places as they appeared.

An amusing incident here was a moment of forgetfulness when the speaker was obliged to turn to the audience to ask which was the place in which was the statue of Napoleon, and a man in the audience told him—Place Vendome. There was the Place de la Concorde with the Madeleine near at one side; the Arc de Triomph, the Champs Elysées, the Seine, and a train going at full speed, all seen with the peculiar perspective of the balloonist high above them.

Other views were of a balloon with French warships following, experiments tried by the Count under the direction of the French Government for the benefit of the navy. The cinematograph showed the Lebaudy, Santos Dumont, and Archdeacon air ships. Invitations to the "conférence" yesterday were in French. It was under the patronage of Mesdames Edmund Lincoln Baylies, Cortlandt Field Bishop, Henry Clews, Newbold Le Roy Edgar, Ogden Mills, Victor Sorchan, Orme Wilson, and Norman Whitehouse.

Among those present were Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Mrs. Oliver Gould Jennings, Mrs. Moses Taylor Campbell, Mrs. T. J. Oakley Rhinelander, Mrs. Lanfear Norrie, Mrs. Cortlandt Field Bishop and Mrs. William R. Travers. A number of children were among the guests.

Double breasted suits.

Fine feathers they are, for men who are tired of single breasted jackets.

For most boys, double breasted suits are no novelty.

In such a stand-by style, smart patterns, skillful cutting, and perhaps such an added feature as bloomer breeches are needed to keep it out of the commonplace.

At that, there's no danger of our boys' double breasted suits being commonplace.

PROMOTER TEWKSBURY GIVES HIMSELF UP HERE

A Telephone Message to Jerome Had Said He Would.

LOCKED UP FOR THE NIGHT

Jumped His Bail in Philadelphia—His First Wife Charges Him with Stealing $10,000.

Lewis G. Tewksbury, the promoter and financial adventurer of international notoriety who is charged by his former wife, now Mrs. Mary Mills Grunhut, with having stolen ten United States $1,000 bonds from her, and who jumped his bail when arrested in Philadelphia two weeks ago, walked into the District Attorney's office at 6 o'clock last evening and gave himself up to Detective Sergeant Farley. He was locked up in Police Headquarters overnight, and will be arraigned before Recorder Goff in General Sessions this morning.

Late yesterday afternoon Assistant District Attorney Johnstone learned through a cautiously worded telephone message of Tewksbury's intention to surrender. He communicated with Assistant District Attorney Perkins, and they waited till the hour fixed, though taking small stock by the tender attentions paid by Tewksbury appeared, together with a friend, and made himself known. He was attired in the height of fashion, and went through the ordeal of being arrested with the graceful nonchalance of a man confident of his ability to extricate himself from tight places.

When asked by a small group of surprised reporters if he had anything to say, he replied with quite an English intonation:

"Nothing, my dear fellows. I must respectfully refer you to my attorneys, William R. Weeks and B. Gerson Oppenheim."

The allegation of Mrs. Grunhut, who was Mrs. Tewksbury for a few months only, after her affection had been won by the tender attentions paid by Tewkesbury to her first husband on his deathbed, is that Tewksbury robbed her of several hundred thousand dollars, forming part of the large fortune left her by the late Mr. Grunhut. She has laid before the District Attorney documents which seem to show beyond a doubt that he obtained at least $150,000 from her. The specific charge on which Tewksbury is to be tried is that he stole the ten bonds on Jan. 20, 1900. An indictment for this offense was returned against him in March, 1903.

Having obtained a divorce and resumed the name of her first husband, Mrs. Grunhut traced Tewksbury to Mexico, where, according to her own words, she found him "making the richest men in the country look poor." On her appearance Tewksbury fled, only to be followed by his Nemesis to London, where he had already succeeded in establishing himself as manager of a concern called the Consolidated Security Company.

He had torn up a block of ordinary dwellings to build for himself another fairy palace like his house which astounded New York several years ago, and there, according to Mrs. Grunhut, he lived with a woman who she thinks was his wife when she, Mrs. Grunhut, became married to him. She says she bearded the man first at his magnificent office and then at his residence, only to be told that she could undoubtedly "smash the whole thing," but that she would prove herself a fool by doing so.

When she insisted on getting back some to her, assaulted her and then called a cab and threw her into it. She complained at Scotland Yard. Before the man could be arrested he had fled to France, leaving behind him, among other treasures, forty pairs of trousers, each having a pair of gold-buckled suspenders attached. Relying on the man's vanity, Mrs. Grunhut says that she caused an advertisement about the trousers to be inserted in Paris papers, and in that way Tewksbury was caught in the French capital. He was brought to London, but obtained his liberty because Mrs. Grunhut was absent and could not reach the city in time. The second Mrs. Tewksbury, who also fled to France, has since been arrested and is now said to be awaiting extradition proceedings.

Tewksbury was seen and recognised a couple of weeks ago in Philadelphia, where he was negotiating for the purchase of one of the principal properties in Broad Street with a view to erecting a big hotel. His arrest was followed by his release on $1,000 bail. He failed to appear at the hearing set.

GEORGIA BANKER DIES HERE.

Mr. Cohn Was About to Sail for His Native Land.

Lipman Cohn, a banker of Macon, Ga., died suddenly yesterday afternoon of apoplexy in the Eden Musée on West Twenty-third Street.

Mr. Cohn was 76 years old, and was on his way to visit his native home in Poland. For the last few days he had been visiting his so, Esau, who lives at 182 Bergen Street, Brooklyn. To-day both father and son went to Grant's Tomb, and from there to the Musée. The father soon after entering the place fell to the floor dead.

He was to sail for Hamburg to-morrow on the Graf Waldersee, and had his ticket in his pocket.

BAILEY ROUTS SPOONER AND KNOX ON RATE BILL

Shows They Misled the Senate as to the Law.

HALE INDORSES HIS VIEWS

Agrees That Congress Has Power to Control All Federal Courts Except the Supreme Court.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—What was universally agreed among Senators of both sides to be one of the greatest speeches delivered in the Senate for many years was made to-day by Mr. Bailey of Texas. Not even the Senators who disagreed with it in principle failed to pay tribute to its greatness as a speech and a legal argument. Practically the whole House of Representatives deserted their own chamber and came over to stand up in the Senate. General admission to the Senate galleries was virtually suspended, and admission was by card.

While Bailey was still speaking, and about half an hour before the conclusion, Senator Hale of Maine rose on the Republican side and expressed his admiration for the character of the argument to which the Senate was listening. He declared that Bailey had proved his case as to the power of Congress to control all Federal courts except the Supreme Court. He predicted that the Senate was about to agree on a Rate bill, and declared that Bailey's speech had "largely contributed to that near and beneficent result."

Hale caused a panic on the Republican side, for he declared in favor of having the Inter-State Commerce Commission's decision stand until it was overturned by the Supreme Court. Aldrich, who was the picture of dismay, pulled his coattail and hissed:

"You mean the Circuit Court."

Bailey's argument was a strictly legal one designed to show that Congress had full power to abridge the right of the courts to issue restraining orders. The first part of the speech was in answer to the speeches delivered by Messrs. Knox and Spooner. He took the authorities cited by both and dissected them. He produced the Supreme Court reports and read to the Senate the language which convicted both of having misled the Senate as to the law.

From these decisions he convicted Senator Spooner of having read dissenting opinions as if they were opinions of the court, of having read an obiter dictum, or "essay," as Bailey called it, as if it had decided a point at issue before the court; of suppressing parts of decisions which contradicted or qualified the parts he read; of saying that there was no dissent from a decision when it was specifically dissented from in opinions which Bailey read; of reading a dissenting opinion by Story as if it were the actual decision, which was made by Marshall; of reading dissenting opinions as such and not reading the part in which the dissenting Justice conceded the essential correctness of the majority opinion on the point at issue.

He spent an hour on this pulverization of Spooner and then turned to Knox, on whom he spent another hour. He proved that Knox had taken his authorities from textbooks wherein the writers based what they said on the law as it was and not on what Congress could do with it.

Spooner sat throughout this speech looking thoroughly unhappy. Usually he is lively and alert with interruptions, and smiles at every good point. He never took his eyes from Bailey's face, never spoke, and never changed his expression. Knox was equally attentive, but Knox was able to conceal any chagrin he may have felt. He laughed at Bailey's witticisms. Spooner never smiled.

At the close of Bailey's speech the galleries, in utter defiance of the rules, broke into prolonged applause. The Vice President, as in duty bound, tapped mildly with his gavel, but did not indulge in the usual resounding bang and warning that the outrage must not be repeated under pain of clearing the galleries.

There was a rush from all parts of the Chamber to congratulate Mr. Bailey. The Democratic Senators pressed around. Senator Teller stood in tears until the rush had subsided somewhat so he could offer his congratulations. The Republican Senators came over in a long line, Foraker heading the procession.

Senator Spooner remained in his seat, but Senator Knox was among the first to tender his congratulations.

POWER OF THE JUDICIARY.

"The time was never so unfortunate as now for the revival of the doctrine of arbitrary power on the part of the courts," declared Mr. Bailey at the outset, referring to Mr. Spooner's speech. He spoke of the division of authority among the various branches of the Government, but said that he could not follow those utterings of recent years which seem to proceed on the theory that there should be no restrictions upon the judiciary. "This," he said, "is the first Government that ever conferred upon the judiciary the power to annul legislation. God knows that ought to be enough power to confer upon any nine men; we are ninety; they are nine. I would not trench upon their power; I would hold myself unworthy if I permitted them to encroach upon mine."

Referring to Mr. Knox's quotations from the textbooks on jurisprudence, he said that "The Senator forgets that they were discussing the law as it is, and that it is as it is because Congress wills it so," the point being that the legislative branch of the Government is supreme in the law-making and courts-regulating function.

"Happily, the Senator from Pennsylvania reduces the whole question to our point when he says Congress can say when, but not how, the judicial power shall speak," Mr. Bailey continued, and then said he was willing to accept that view. He did not want the courts to decide a question until they were able to decide it right. "Does the Senator agree to that?" he asked, and he replied to the question himself by saying that Mr.

BELMONT'S $125,000 HORSE.

Buys Rock Sand, Derby Winner, for Nursery Stud.

LONDON, April 10.—August Belmont has purchased the racing stallion Rock Sand, paying $125,000.

Rock Sand, brown stallion by Sainfoin, out of Roquebrune, showed unmistakable evidences of speed as a colt, and was first campaigned in 1902 as a two-year-old, winning every start save one and scoring an aggregate winning of £7,474. He was beaten by Flotsam in his single unsuccessful race.

The next year he met Flotsam in the Two Thousand Guineas Stakes, and with "Skeets" Martin up, beat his rival, ridden by Danny Maher, handily. He followed this victory by landing both the Derby and St. Leger, and rounded up his first year for his owner, Sir James Miller, with a total winning of £18,425.

His success continued in 1904, when at Newmarket he twice won £10,000 stakes and ended his season with a victory for the Jockey Club Stakes. In all he ran twenty races in the year and finished the winner in sixteen of them, totaling an aggregate of £19,719 as a result of his campaigning.

Last year he was not raced at all, and this year he has been at the Hamilton Stud Farm, Newmarket. The total winnings he has returned in his three years on the turf reach the exceptional sum of £45,618 or $228,090.

TRANSIT BILL PASSED.

Elsberg Measure Adopted Unanimously by the Assembly.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 10.—The Elsberg Rapid Transit bill, after being kicked about the Senate and Assembly for four years, was to-day unanimously passed by the House without a word of debate. It now goes to the Governor, having passed the Senate several days ago.

Stanley and Agnew of New York and a few others, in casting their vote, explained that they much regretted having to vote for such an emasculated measure, but inasmuch as it seemed to be the best New York City could get at this time, they would support it.

BOSTON IN FOUR HOURS SOON.

New Haven Road Preparing to Electrify Main Lines.

A four-hour train service from New York to Boston is promised by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad as soon as the company's plans for the shortening of its lines between the two cities have been completed. These plans have already made good progress. The recent issue of $5,000,000 of bonds by the New York & Boston Air Line was in furtherance of the scheme for a shorter line from this city to Boston, and the details of changes on other portions of the New Haven's lines have already been worked out.

That these plans of the New Haven for a four-hour service are regarded by the road's management as forestalling the proposal for the establishment of an independent electric air line between the two cities is indicated by this statement issued yesterday by President Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford:

"The revision of the Boston and New York Air Line between New Haven and Willimantic and the New England Railroad between Willimantic and Boston will make a line approximately 200 miles in length between New York and Boston upon which trains can be easily run in four hours by steam and in less time by electricity, and at as low a fare as upon any other road in existence, or proposed, or even theorized about.

"Such a line the New Haven management has in contemplation, the engineers are now at work upon it, the financing of the same has been provided for, and the line itself will be available for use before a charter even can be obtained for such a line as has been petitioned for before the Massachusetts Legislature."

The New York, New Haven & Hartford has probably gone further than any other railroad in the country in the direction of forestalling competition by electric lines. It has purchased one after another of the trolley companies operating in the New Haven's territory until it now controls most of the companies which threatened to offer aggressive competition. It controls the trolley companies in a number of towns in New England along its own lines, as well as many interurban electric lines. The principal trolley combination in New England not under the New Haven's control is the Connecticut Railway & Lighting Company. According to rumor this company is likely in the near future to pass under the control of the New Haven.

As indicated by various announcements of the New Haven management, including President Mellen's statement yesterday the New Haven intends to have an electric line the entire distance from New York to Boston. The work of electrifying its main line out of New York is already progressing rapidly.

UP IN A BALLOON TO-DAY.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Will Make an Ascension at Pittsfield.

Dr. Julian P. Thomas, friend of the late Paul Nocquet, left last night for Pittsfield, Mass., by way of Albany. He was accompanied by his wife, who will make a balloon ascension with him from Pittsfield to-day. Charles Levee, the young French aeronaut, who will pilot the balloon, was with the Thomases.

Dr. and Mrs. Latson were also in the party, and will watch the ascension. The same balloon used by Dr. Thomas last week, the day before the fatal flight of Paul Nocquet, will make the ascension to-day.

OUTLAW RAINES HOTELS; 500 ON THE BLACKLIST

DOUBLE PREMIUMS FOR REST

Prentice Bill Signed, and its Effect is Made Plain at Once—Action by Bonding Companies.

The news of the Governor's action in signing the Prentice bill, which abolishes a large number of Raines law hotels, was received last night by the representatives of the brewers and saloon keepers who had assembled in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Building for the purpose of learning just what the surety companies intended to do, the surety companies having made it known earlier in the day that they did not intend to take the saloon risks this year that they took last year.

It was the general opinion that the new law would wipe out at least a thousand places in Manhattan where liquor was sold, and that if the bonding companies stuck to the blacklist between 500 and 600 places in addition would certainly have to go.

The representatives of the surety companies met in the offices of the American Surety Company's excise branch in the Metropolitan Building at 8 o'clock, and the session which followed lasted until long after midnight. Among the companies represented were the American Surety Company, the United States Guarantee Company, the Bankers' Surety Company, the Metropolitan Surety Company, the United States Surety Company, the Fidelity and Casualty Company, and the National Surety Company.

When the meeting was called to order reports were read showing that the surety companies had lost last year on excise business $270,000, the State Excise Department recovering that amount in suits brought against the bonds furnished for hotel keepers who were convicted of violating the provisions of the liquor tax law. The majority of the surety companies reported that they had lost more money than they had collected on premiums and that they did not feel like taking the same risks this year. Further than this it was shown that many of the places guaranteed had proved to be dives, although this fact was not discovered until after the bonds had been furnished.

After much discussion as to what hotel keepers should be bonded in the future it was agreed that the surety companies form a permanent organization for the handling of excise business. The plan adopted was to open central headquarters in the Metropolitan Life Building near the offices of the Deputy Commissioner of Excise. A. F. Schwanecke was chosen to manage this office.

An agreement was entered into by which each of the surety companies will receive an equal share of the excise bonding, while all will stand a share of any losses that may result from the furnishing of bonds for liquor tax certificates. It was further agreed that each company send in a list of hotel owners who were known to be regular violators of the law, and none of these will be bonded.

In addition to this it was agreed at the meeting that none but first-class hotels be bonded unless a brewer or hotel keeper furnished an indemnity bond to insure the surety companies against losses.

When the meeting adjourned Mr. Schwannecke told a TIMES reporter that in the future the surety companies would take none but gilt-edge excise risks.

"We will not furnish bonds for any place that has a shady reputation or for any man who has been known as a divekeeper. The saloon man or hotel keeper who applies to us for a bond will have to show a clean record. All of the surety companies have agreed on this. Each company will turn in a list to the central office, and the men named on the list will be barred.

"In addition to regulating the excise bond business in this way we also decided to increase the premium rate for bonds from $20 to $40. But with our refusal to bond the divekeeper of New York several hundred of these places will be driven out of business, for they will be unable to obtain real estate security.

"The fact that no applications for licenses have yet been filed means that some may not get their licenses this year. Under the law they must file their applications by April 15. Then they file their bonds with their applications for liquor tax certificates, and after paying the license fee the Excise Commission will issue receipts for the money, which receipts will permit the hotel man to do business until the Building Department gets a chance to inspect the premises and reports back to the Excise Commissioner.

"But any hotel man who fails to put in before April 15 his application for a renewal of his liquor tax certificate will have a small chance of getting his certificate in time to continue in business after May 1. Applications that are not filed before April 15 will have to wait, and as the Building Department has thirty days in which to inspect the premises for which the certificate is asked the Building Department may delay matters so that on May 1 the tardy hotel keeper will find himself in the position of a man whose license has expired, yet who cannot get a new one until the Excise Commissioner hears from the Building Department."

Usually by the end of the first week in April 4,000 of the 7,500 saloon men in Manhattan have their applications filed with the Excise Department, but inasmuch as the application must be accompanied by the bond, the hotel men were not able to file their applications until now, as they could not induce the surety companies to take any action while the matter of creating a new excise law was pending.

Such liquor dealers as had heard of the enactment of the new excise law last night declared that its one redeeming feature was that it gave the liquor man an opportunity to reply to charges and be heard in case an attempt was made to revoke his liquor tax certificate. While under the old law a liquor dealer's license was taken away without a hearing under the provisions of the Prentice law, the liquor dealer now has a chance to defend himself against charges. However, the Building Superintendent will have to employ a large force of Inspectors and clerks to get around to all of the hotel inspections and make the reports which the new law requires.

INSURANCE INDICTMENTS

Expected Soon in the Case of the Old Washington Life Men.

Instead of adjourning as usual at 1 o'clock, the Grand Jury reconvened after luncheon yesterday and remained in session all afternoon. Their time was exclusively devoted to an investigation of the affairs of the Washington Life Insurance Company, about which concern a severe report was published by State Insurance Examiner Isaac Vanderpoel about a year ago.

Since then the company has been reorganized, its capital stock increased by $500,000, and a new set of officers placed in charge. The investigation just started by the Grand Jury and the preliminary investigation conducted by Assistant District Attorneys Nott and Kresel have nothing to do with the affairs of the company after 1904.

The principal witnesses examined by the Grand Jury yesterday were Mr. Vanderpoel, Assistant Examiner Saxton, and Mr. Tierney, the head of the Agency Department of the Washington Life. Tierney is a Notary and took the acknowledgments of the reports signed and filed by the old officers of the company. The statutes make it a misdemeanor for an insurance official to file a false report, but this offense becomes a felony if the report is made under oath. It is then regarded as a case of perjury.

It was understood yesterday that several indictments may be expected soon.

The Grand Jury will continue its investigation to-day.

DEATH OF E. S. WILLING.

Father of Mrs. John Jacob Astor is Stricken Suddenly.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—Edward Shippen Willing, father of Mrs. John Jacob Astor, died of heart disease to-day at his home, 511 South Broad Street. He had just been driving. He climbed the stairs to his room, sank into a chair, gasped, and was dead. Only his butler and the nurse who has been beside him constantly during the last two months were with him. His son, J. Barton Willing, returned to the house a short time later.

Mr. Willing was 84 years old. He had been ill for two years. Mrs. Astor was brought here by reason of her father's condition two weeks ago, but after a time decided that it was safe to go away again. She is expected here to-morrow.

Mr. Willing was born in this city on Aug. 26, 1822, the youngest of the seven children of Richard and Eliza Willing. In 1841 he was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania. Some years later he married Alice, daughter of Dr. John Rhea Barton, a distinguished surgeon. He never engaged in any pursuit, and was not at the time of his death a member of any social organization.

FEARS YANKEE INTRIGUES.

Berlin Paper Wants a First-Class Diplomat Sent to Rio.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 10.—The National Zeitung, commenting on the approaching Pan-American Congress, says:

"The Diplomatic Corps at Rio will probably be able to learn about the proceedings only what the press prints—in other words, what the Americans allow to leak out. It is therefore important for Germany to have a first-class representative there, and it cannot be said that the present Minister at Rio Janeiro is a first-class man.

"Germany ought to send another diplomat to Rio—one who speaks Portuguese and Spanish, and who will carefully watch the development of North American intrigues. That the Yankees have cast their eyes on South America there can be no doubt."

TO IMPROVE EAST SIDE CARS.

City Railway Company Promises to Make Changes.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 10.—The State Railroad Commission received to-day from the New York City Railway Company a letter promising these changes in traffic conditions on the lower east side of Manhattan:

Number of cars to be run on the Chambers and Madison Street line to be increased from twenty-four to thirty-six.

Thirty cars to be put on the Spring and Delancey Street line instead of twenty as at present.

A change to be made in the route of the Grand and Cortlandt Street Ferry cars, requiring them to be turned at Beach and Washington Streets instead of being run to the Cortlandt Street Ferry, and transfers to be given to and from the Sixth and Ninth Avenue electric lines at Beach Street.

The lights in all cars to be equipped with reflectors and kept clean.

Material to be ordered immediately for repairing the tracks of the Grand and Cortlandt Ferry line, the Chambers and Madison Street Line, and the Spring and Delancey Street line.

Cars to be cleaned and disinfected each night.

Orders to be issued to conductors and Inspectors which will result in closer attention to the ventilation of cars.

NEW ROCKEFELLER MANSION

To be Built at Pocantico Hills and Cost $1,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., April 10.—It became known to-day at Pocantico Hills, where John D. Rockefeller has a 5,000 acre domain, that the real object of Mr. Rockefeller's flying visit in the rain on Monday was to give instructions regarding work now under way for the erection of a million-dollar mansion at the highest point of his estate.

Surveyors have been busy on the estate during the last few days, and it is said that excavation for the foundation of the mansion will be begun next week. The house will be built of granite and will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Rockefeller and Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and John D. III.

According to the report Mr. Rockefeller will erect the new house as a present for his grandson when he becomes of age.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., April 10.—John D. Rockefeller arrived here on the 11:17 o'clock train from New York this morning. He was accompanied by John, his bodyguard.

In the afternoon Mr. Rockefeller was out on his private golf links and practiced driving the ball until he was driven indoors by a shower.

Lava's Advance Down the Mountain Side—Delusion That the Volcano Is Moving.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1906.]

SANT' AGNELLO, Bay of Naples, April 10.—The present eruption of Vesuvius is one of the most terrible on record. For some time past the volcano has been unusually active, and last week the outbreak began which has now done incalculable damage.

An enormous volume of black smoke rises to a height of two miles above the crater. Incandescent masses of stone are thrown up 3,000 feet. A continuous southeasterly wind carries the ashes over Naples, which is so completely enveloped in darkness that for three days our communications by sea have been cut off.

Steamers and large sailboats trying to reach Naples find themselves in total darkness several miles from shore and turn back, numbers of persons having fainted from the sulphurous fumes.

Fissures have opened far below the cone, emitting many streams of lava, one of which has completely destroyed the town of Bosco Trecase, which had 10,000 inhabitants. Another has reached the outskirts of Torre del Greco. Others have destroyed thousands of acres of fertile cultivated land, with farmhouses and stock.

The great cone of Vesuvius collapsed with awful thundering and flames, and the cable railway, the observatory, and the large new hotel near it were all totally destroyed on the night of the 7th.

The population of Bosco Trecase and other ruined places fled in time to Naples, and the roads were choked day and night with every sort of vehicle and crowds of people on foot.

Yesterday (Monday) I drove through Torre dell' Annunziata to the point where the main stream of lava stopped on Sunday. The lava carried vast masses of burned stone and sulphur on its surface like dross on melted lead, and nothing was visible toward Bosco Trecase but endless acres of dark scoriae, broken here and there by the greenish curling smoke of sulphur.

At the point we reached a great lone pine tree, torn up by its roots and turned to black charcoal, stuck out of the mass at a sharp angle. The air was almost unbreathable, the heat intense. The faces of the people who crowded upon the edge of the arrested stream expressed present terror or exhaustion from recent panic.

The Government has done what was possible to help the homeless people, and the large bodies of troops sent to the rescue have behaved with great energy and courage in saving property. When the stream of fire threatened Bosco Trecase soldiers dug a wide ditch across its path and threw up a formidable intrenchment in the hope of diverting its course, but every effort was useless.

The molten stone advanced like a colossal serpent of fire, turning its head to the right and left as a snake does, but keeping its general direction toward the fated town. It was not till it reached the first house, sending up great showers of sparks, that the people finally fled for their lives, taking such belongings as they could carry in their arms or pile upon the creaking carts.

I saw men, women, and children and infants whose mothers carried them at the breast or in their aprons. Dogs, too, and cats were on the carts, and sometimes even chickens tied together by the legs, and piles of mattresses and pillows and shapeless bundles of clothes, all white with dust under the lurid glare.

I saw one woman lying on her back across a cart, ghastly white, and if not dead already of fear and heat and suffocation, certainly almost gone. We ourselves could hardly breathe.

Happily there has been little loss of life as yet, for lava moves slowly, even in great quantities and down hill, and there has been no explosion of gases. On the other hand, the damage done is permanent, and the rich vinelands on the southern slope of Vesuvius are lost forever and buried under lava and scoriae. The whole effect is appalling in the extreme.

Near the volcano and in Naples itself there have been frequent shocks of earthquake, and the city was in continual darkness on Sunday and has been subject to the fall of ashes ever since the 6th.

Constant news of fresh destruction and the inexplicable impression that the volcano itself is mysteriously moving toward the city have driven the excited people to the verge of madness and the extreme of terror.

At the moment of writing, in Sorrento at 2 P. M., I can see nothing of Naples or Vesuvius or even of Ischia, thirty miles to the west of the volcano, for all is hidden by a lurid curtain that is not affected by the fresh easterly breeze. The ashes are a fine dark gray dust and are thick in my garden walks, on the terrace, and on all the plants. Even at a distance of fifty yards there is a slight film in the air.

The wind being steadily off shore, the sea is quite calm, and the noises from the volcano reach us very distinctly.

During the most terrible hours on Saturday and Sunday we heard a continuous roar like that from a battle of artillery, and even now peals of thunder roll across the bay from time to time, not caused by electricity, but by the discharge of masses of molten material from the cone.

We confidently hope, however, that the worst of the eruption is over, and the panic is certainly subsiding. The admirable conduct of the King and Queen and of the Duke of Aosta in visiting the scene of destruction and suffering has done much to encourage and cheer the poor, and the royal family have been royally generous with money.

The homeless remember, however, that in previous eruptions the lava has been known to break out again and again for weeks, and the possibility of danger is therefore not yet past.

BUELOW MAY HAVE TO QUIT.

Condition Said to be Such That His Retirement Is Necessary.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 10.—It is announced that Prince Bülow was able to leave his bed to-day and Prof. Renvers says the Chancellor will recover if he abstains from work altogether for the present.

I learn on excellent authority, however, that the Chancellor's condition is such that his retirement is only a question of time.

MANY SHIPS WRECKED.

Damage from Severe Storms Along the New England Coast.

BOSTON, April 10.—The storm which passed over New England last night and this forenoon was one of unusual severity for the month of April. Telegraphic communication in Maine was interrupted, and along the coast several vessels went ashore. The worst accident reported was that to the schooner D. Gifford of Boothbay Harbor, Me., which was wrecked on the rocks in Gloucester Harbor.

At Kittery, Me., the two-masted schooner Marion Draper was blown ashore, and after she had been pulled off by two tugs she capsized. Her crew escaped. At Provincetown four small vessels were sunk, and another was cast ashore. High tides were reported from Cape Cod. In Vermont several inches of snow fell, and in Northern New Hampshire the fall was more than a foot.

PENNY POSTAL GRAFTER.

Clerk Readdressed Weekly Newspapers to His Own Friends.

Max J. Schwalbe, a clerk employed in Postal Station B, at Grand and Attorney Streets, was arrested yesterday and held by United States Commissioner Shields on the charge that he did "wilfully detain and delay and embezzle" certain copies of newspapers. He took copies of expensive weekly publications and, erasing the names on the wrappers, redirected them to friends and relations, "just to be a good fellow," according to Inspector Jacobs.

"It's easily the oddest case of penny grafting we have come across," said one of the Inspectors.

STILL AFTER THE PACKERS.

President Said to Have Stirred Federal Officers to New Efforts.

CHICAGO, April 10.—The Chronicle to-morrow will say:

"President Roosevelt has once more taken a hand in the prosecution of the packers and the result is apparent in a resumption of activity on the part of the local Federal officers. It has been announced that the effort to punish the packers as individuals is to be renewed with vigor.

"This action is under direct instructions from the President and Attorney General Moody to United States Attorney C. B. Morrison of Chicago. Attorney Morrison has been directed to proceed against the packers under the injunction of Judge Grosscup of the United States Circuit Court, and also to seek new indictments before the next Federal Grand Jury.

"The Government agents are now at work securing information which is to be used as a basis of complaint before the Grand Jury next month. This evidence, it is said, will sustain a charge by the Government that the packers, as individuals have violated the injunction of Judge Grosscup."

POMPEII IN PERIL; OTTAJANO A RUIN

Fury of Vesuvius Increases—Lava Again Flows.

TWELVE DEAD IN NAPLES

Cinders on the Roof of a Market Cause It to Fall.

HEROIC WORK BY TROOPS

NAPLES, April 10.—The flow of lava from Mount Vesuvius, which had almost ceased last night, began again early to-day. The stream, which started anew in the direction of Torre dell' Annunziata, reached the cemetery of that town and then turned in the direction of Pompeii.

It seemed this morning that, in spite of the increased flow of lava, the activity of the volcano was decreasing, but later in the day it was seen that this hope was vain. Instead of decreasing, the fall of sand and ashes from the volcano became greater.

Ottajano has been completely destroyed.

A great eruption of sand is observed on the east side of the main crater. This is worse than ashes, as it is heavier. The ejection of ashes seems to have diminished.

Fresh shocks of earthquake are being felt, especially in the direction of Ottajano, Somma, and Nola. Fortunately the great amount of ashes on the ground seems to have counteracted the action of the shocks.

Another part of the main cone of the volcano has fallen in, causing a great discharge of red-hot stones, flame, and smoke.

The Neapolitans were plunged into a condition bordering on frenzy this morning by the collapse of the Mount Oliveto Market, which covered a plot of ground 600 feet square. The structure fell upon 200 or more persons, of whom 12 were killed, 2 mortally injured, 24 dangerously hurt, and 100 less seriously injured. Several of the dead were crushed and mangled beyond recognition.

The roof of the market fell in under the weight of cinders from the volcano. The structure was crowded with buyers and their children, the accident happening at the hour of the day when trade is most brisk. With scarcely a tremor of warning, there was a terrifying crash, and the brilliant sight disappeared in a cloud of dust, while shrieks of agony were heard.

Just previous to this disaster religious processions had been passing through the streets of this city, the people desiring to render thanks to the Almighty for having apparently averted a disaster to Naples. Here and there these processions wended their way, with images of the Madonna or saints dressed in gorgeous robes. The processions were headed by boys walking two and two and carrying lighted candles.

When the news of the market disaster was passed from mouth to mouth the processions quickly disbanded. The people seemed demented. They surrounded the market, in many cases tearing their hair, cursing, and screaming "My husband is there!" or "Bring out my child!" and endeavoring with their own hands to move heavy beams from beneath which the groans of the injured were issuing.

The cries for help were so heartrending that even rescuers sobbed aloud as they worked with feverish eagerness. Such was the anxiety of the people to take part in the work of rescue that it required determined efforts on the part of the large force of police and carbineers present to keep the most desperate from moving beams too hurriedly, and thereby cause further deaths or injuries.

The indignation of the people as a result of the market disaster increased as each additional body was taken out. The people loudly insisted that the authorities were aware that the roof of the market was unsafe, and that they were so excessively economical that they would not appropriate the funds necessary to repair the building.

The market itself is a mass of ruins. It was surrounded all day by enormous crowds of people, who were kept in order by cordons of police and carbineers. The work of searching the ruins continues in the most energetic manner, doctors, firemen, municipal guards, police, and arsenal employes

After visiting the ruins of the market, the Duke and Duchess of Aosta proceeded to the Pelligrini Hospital, to which institution many of the injured persons were taken.

The Duchess of Aosta spent the entire day at the hospital, comforting the bereaved and assisting the wounded. As the Duchess bent over a cot to give a cooling drink to a child who was bruised and battered from head to foot, she felt a kiss imprinted on her hand. Looking down, her eyes met those of a woman kneeling at her feet.

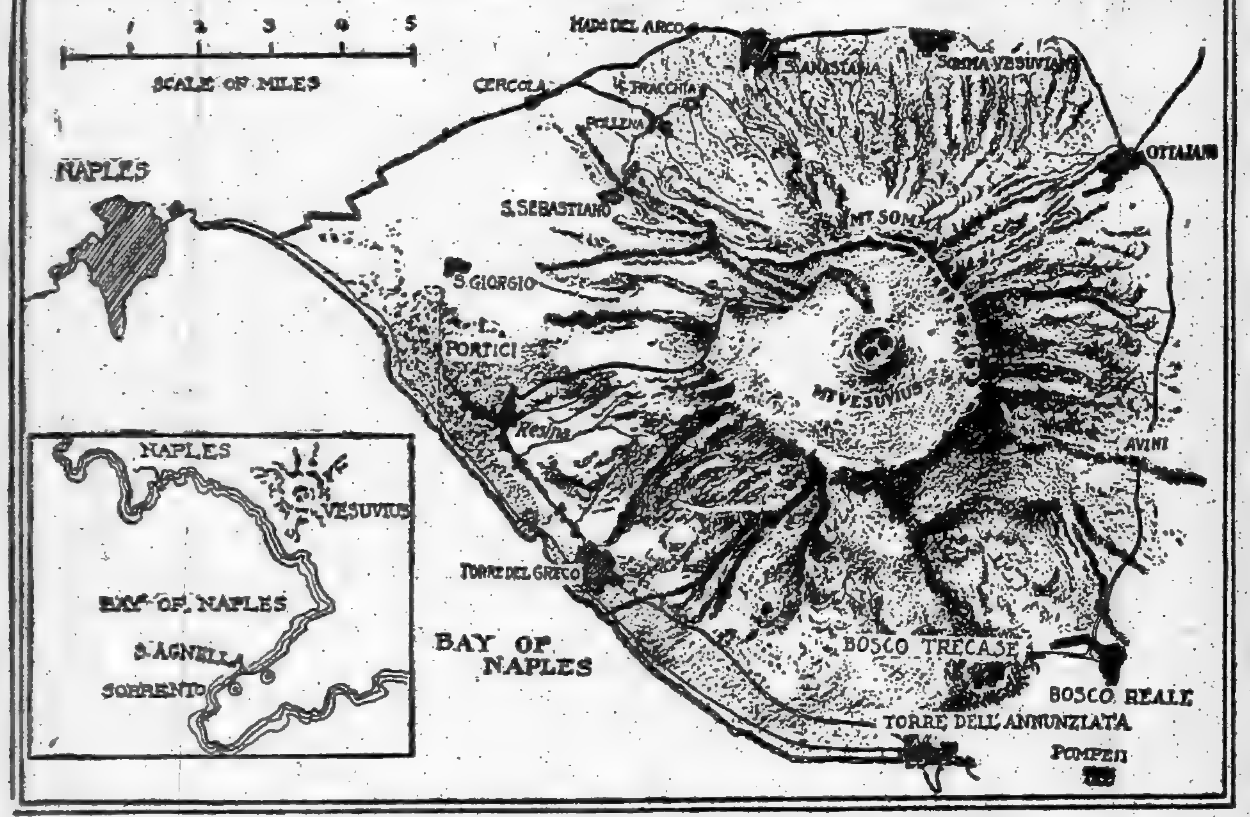
"Your Excellency," said the woman, pointing to the suffering child, "she is all I have. I am a widow. May God reward you."

Cardinal Prisco, Archbishop of Naples, visited the people wounded by the fall of the market and took to them the benediction of the Pope.

The disaster was a lesson to the whole city, causing the inhabitants to scramble upon the roofs of their houses and hastily remove the accumulation of ashes resulting from the volcanic outbreak. This roof-clearing made walking and driving in the streets both dangerous and disagreeable. Ashes came pouring down from the roofs upon pedestrians and vehicles, resulting in many angry scenes.

The inhabitants of many houses near the collapsed market have been ordered by the police as a matter of precaution to evacuate their residences, owing to fear that the roofs will fall in.

This morning the wind, which had been blowing the ashes away from Naples, suddenly shifted and ejecta from the volcano again began falling fast over the city. The wind is high, and the enormous amount of ashes in the air makes breathing difficult.



MAP OF VESUVIUS AND THE BAY OF NAPLES.

The above is a bird's-eye view of Vesuvius, the towns that surround it, and Naples, and in the lower left-hand corner is an outline of the Bay of Naples. It will be seen that Sant' Agnello, where Marion Crawford lives and from whence his dispatch printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES to-day is dated, is about as far distant from Vesuvius on the south as is Naples on the north.

So far definite news has been received of the destruction of three towns—Bosco Trecase, Ottajano, and San Giuseppe. How many of the other places on the slopes and at the base of the mountain have been covered by lava or laid waste by burning ashes cannot be learned. A fortnight ago these towns were among the most beautiful in the world, and the country which surrounded them was wonderful in its fertility and picturesqueness. Now, it appears, practically everything has been destroyed, and in place of the fields and vineyards is a desolate waste of lava and scoriae.

The latest news is that the lava stream that advanced as far as Torre dell' Annunziata is proceeding toward Pompeii. How great is the peril of the ancient Roman city, unburied at such an enormous cost in money and labor, can be seen by a glance at the map.

The situation in the towns on the slopes of Vesuvius is appalling. The fall of volcanic ejecta in these communes to-day was enormous. It is feared that the weight of ashes on roofs will cause the collapse of many more buildings both here and in the towns and villages nearer the volcano. An enormous area is buried beneath ashes and cinders.

Even with the sun high in the heavens the light was a dim yellow, in the midst of which the few people who remained in the stricken towns, their clothing, hair, and beards covered with ashes, moved about in the awful stillness of desolation like gray ghosts.

Scene in a Deserted Town.

The case of Torre del Greco is typical. For thirty hours the place has been practically deserted, but amid the ruins and a semi-darkness, illuminated from time to time by vivid flashes of lightning, a few of the inhabitants go about hungry and with throats parched with smoke and dust, seemingly unable to tear themselves away from the ruins of what so recently were their homes.

Communication by rail or tramway with Torre del Greco and Torre dell' Annunziata is impossible, owing to the cinder, sand, and ash deposits.

Railway travel to and from Naples is much hampered by the same conditions, and a collision to-day resulted in injuries to twelve passengers.

Telegraphic communication with the towns furthest within the danger zone is interrupted.

Director Matteucci, who continues at his post at the observatory, telegraphed to-night that the volcano was generally calm last night, with occasional sharp explosions, these becoming more violent toward morning. Signor Matteucci says his seismic instruments indicate great subterranean agitation.

Signor Matteucci states that new small craters and fissures which have opened at several points are likely to contribute to a diminution of the eruption, as they afford more numerous outlets.

Conflicting reports have been made concerning the condition of the observatory buildings, but it is evident that part of the station, at least, is standing.

All efforts on the part of the press representatives and the authorities to ascertain the number of those who have already fallen victims to the eruption have so far failed. This is accounted for from the fact that the buried villages are impossible of access, and further because the people who fled when their houses began to fall have scattered throughout the country districts. Early this morning it was stated that at San Giuseppe 40 bodies had been found, at Terzigno 20, and at Ottajano 27. Many more bodies were found in the course of the day.

The Duke of Aosta this morning tried, in order to encourage the people, to visit the villages buried or partly buried under the ashes from the volcano, but it was impossible to proceed in a motor car or on foot, so he tried horseback, and by making strenuous efforts succeeded in directing the work of rescue and saving several people who were at the point of death.

Finance Minister Salandra, accompanied by a party of officials, went to-day by automobile to Portici, Resina, and Torre del Greco on a tour of inspection. Progress was greatly hindered by the ashes. The Minister called on the inhabitants of the towns visited to co-operate with the troops in clearing the ashes from the roofs of the houses in order to prevent their fall.

The Ministers next proceeded to Torre dell' Annunziata, where normal conditions are being resumed. Afterward Scafati, Terzigno, and Pompeii were visited. An attempt to reach the ash-covered town of Ottajano was unsuccessful, owing to the impassable condition of the roads. It was found that the lava in the vicinity of Bosco Trecase had formed a species of lake.

The party returned to Torre dell' Annunziata amid a heavy fall of ashes. A large number of the inhabitants of that place are leaving it.

The Minister and his party were unable to return to Naples overland and proceeded to Castellamare on board a tug. Navigation is very dangerous, the flying ashes darkening the atmosphere.

The Minister's visit has resulted in a better organization for salvaging with the co-operation of the inhabitants.

All the bodies of those who were killed in the church at San Giuseppe yesterday have been recovered, the number being 105. Search is being made of the houses at Ottajano, where fifty corpses have already been found. It is believed that there are still many to be recovered.

The newspaper Pungolo graphically describes a visit of a member of its staff to Ottajano, San Giuseppe, and Vesuviana. Ottajano was enveloped in black smoke. The troops were clearing the ruins, demolishing tottering buildings, and re-establishing communications.

Entire families perished in the town and terrible scenes occurred when refugees returned in search of missing relatives, whose bodies were unrecognizable. The cemetery at San Giuseppe presented a tragic spectavle, people vainly searching there for missing relatives among heaps of dead. Sudden showers of hot ashes caused precipitate flight from the locality.

The fate of many children at Ottajano is unknown. When the military carts arrived at the scene of the disaster last night the soldiers arranged to have the children and aged people get into the carts, but when the vehicles had gone a few hundred feet it was found that although there were four horses harnessed to each wagon they could not pull their loads through the deep ashes in spite of desperate efforts. This caused a panic among the children, who expected to be buried in the ashes from the volcano, and they fled in all directions in the darkness and blinding rain and have not since been heard of.

Searching parties went after the children, but in spite of continuous shouting and calling, no trace was found of them and it is feared that the children have been smothered in the ashes.

Bodies in a Confessional.

The scenes at Ottajano when the first victims were unearthed there were terrible. The positions of the bodies showed that the victims had died while in a state of great terror, their faces being convulsed with fear. Three bodies were found in a confessional of one of the fallen churches.

One body was that of an old woman who was sitting with her right arm raised as though to ward off the advancing danger. The second was that of a child about 8 years old. It was found dead in a position which would indicate that the child had fallen asleep with a little dog close to it, and had died with one arm raised across its face to protect itself and its pet from the crumbling ruins. The third body, that of a woman, was unrecognizable. These three victims were reverently laid side by side while a procession of friends and relatives offered up prayers beside them.

Other bodies which were found later caused such an impression among the already frantic population that the authorities did not deem it advisable to permit any more bodies to be identified for the present.

Forty-nine bodies have already been taken out of one of the churches at Ottajano.

Many tales are told of heroic rescues on the part of the soldiers sent to the assistance of the sufferers at Ottajano and elsewhere. One man at Ottajano rode his horse through ashes which reached up to its flanks, calling out, "Who wants help? Who wants help?" He was rewarded by hearing a woman's voice reply in weak tones, and, springing from his horse, the soldier called a comrade to his assistance and floundered among the ashes until he arrived at the ruined walls of a house, from which the voice seemed to come.

As he made his way toward the building the soldier shouted words of encouragement, and, climbing over a heap of ruins and braving a toppling wall, he entered the building, and in the cellar found the bodies of three children. Near them was a woman, barely alive, who by almost superhuman efforts lasting for hours had succeeded in freeing herself from a mass of debris which had fallen upon her. The soldier picked the woman up in his arms and carried her to a place of safety, where it was found that both her legs were broken and that she had been badly crushed about the body. It is believed that she will live.

The troops on duty in the volcanic zone are utilizing the railway carriages at different localities as camp hospitals. Many of the persons injured at Ottajano have been placed in railroad cars, and measures are being taken to convey them to Somma, where the railroad is operating.

The Prefect has removed the Mayor of San Giuseppe from office because, in the face of danger, he left his village without informing his superiors. The Red Cross has established a hospital in the vicinity of San Giuseppe.

The fugitives from Torre dell' Annunziata are leaving for Castellamare, where the terrified population of Torre del Greco are arriving, amid a continuous fall of sand and ashes.

The Municipality of Torre del Greco has sent an urgent request for assistance, in order to prevent the remainder of the inhabitants from leaving the town.

King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena have forwarded to Premier Sonnino, who is here, $20,000, to be applied toward the relief of the sufferers by the volcano.

The ashes and cinders which fill the air are causing an epidemic of eye trouble, and many people in the worst affected districts are threatened with blindness.

LONDON, Wednesday, April 11.—A dispatch from Capri to The Times says that 200 persons perished by the collapse of the church at San Giuseppe on Monday, and that 200 more are believed to have been killed in the district.

Among the interesting opinions of scientists on the eruption of Mount Vesuvius is that of Prof. Belar of Laibach, an authority on seismic disturbances, who, in a telegram to The Daily Mail, attributes the eruption to the action of a great sun spot.

ROME, April 10.—A dispatch from Naples to the Tribuna reports that 500 persons have perished in the district between Ottajano and San Giuseppe.

MONARCHS CHEERED IN ROME.

Everywhere Acclaimed on Account of Their Aid to the Sufferers.

ROME, April 10.—King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena returned here this morning from Naples.

They were everywhere acclaimed on account of their sympathetic activity on behalf of the sufferers from the eruption of Vesuvius.

A REPOSITORY OF HISTORY.

Relics of the Past That May Be Overwhelmed in Pompeii.

If the eruption of Vesuvius should again overwhelm Pompeii it would undo the work of excavation that has been in progress there since 1748.

The modern town and its vicinity now have a population of about 80,000. The old city is in the form of an irregular ellipse, the circumference of its walls measuring 8,000 yards. The excavated portion embraces about half of the town, including the Forum, with the contiguous temples and public buildings; two theatres with large colonnades, the amphitheatre, and a great number of large and small private dwellings. The streets of the city are straight and narrow, and are paved with blocks of lava.

The wall decorations of Pompeii lend it a peculiar charm. The museum there contains many interesting objects, though none of artistic value. The Forum forms a central point in the town, on the north side of which stands the Temple of Jupiter. On the west side is a set of steps which formerly led to the Temple of Apollo. On the left side of the Temple of Jupiter are two triumphal arches of brick, both divested of their marble, and on the most northerly side of the Forum is the Marcellum, or hall for the sale of provisions, in front of which are ancient pedestals for statues.

ATHLETES MAY BE DELAYED.

The eruptions of Mount Vesuvius may seriously affect the chances of the American athletes in the Olympic games at Athens. The members of the team are passengers on the North German Lloyd steamer Barbarossa, which is due to arrive at Naples Thursday, April 19. The molten flow from Vesuvius has shut off nearly all railroad communication with Naples. Should the eruption continue the Barbarossa may have no port of entry on the west coast of Italy, and may be compelled to lie at anchor in the Bay of Naples at a sufficiently safe distance from the shower of cinders.

Railroad facilities in Southern Italy are not of the best. A coast line surrounds the peninsula with a double-track line from Naples to Brindisi, a distance of about 300 miles. According to the original programme, the team was to disembark at Naples and proceed overland to Brindisi, where they were to embark on a coast steamer, reaching Piraeus, the port of Athens, on Sunday, April 22, the first day of the games. The Americans, however, are not scheduled to compete until April 23.

A number of American yachts are cruising in the Mediterranean, and could be used for the purpose of taking the athletes from the Bay of Naples to Athens.

RELIEF COMMITTEE FORMED.

A relief organization, to be known as the Vesuvius Relief Committee, was organized in this city yesterday and a fund started by prominent Italians to aid their countrymen who have suffered through the eruption of Mount Vesuvius. A meeting was held in the office of ex-Judge John Palmieri, at 61 Park Row. It was decided to issue an appeal to the public. Eighteen hundred dollars was raised from among the men who attended yesterday's meeting.

President Cables to King Victor.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The President has sent by cable a message of condolence to the King of Italy upon the havoc and loss of life resulting from the eruption of Mount Vesuvius.

King Edward Telegraphs Sympathy.

MESSINA, April 10.—King Edward, who is here on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, has telegraphed to King Victor Emmanuel his profound regret at the volcanic disasters and his sympathy with the sufferers.

AUTHORIZED TO SUE THE CITY FOR $1,000,000

FIERCE OPPOSITION FUTILE

Keenan Characterizes the Measure as a Big Steal—Vain Plea for a Public Hearing.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 10.—After a severe arraignment on the part of Senator Keenan of Long Island City and Marks of New York, a bill introduced a week ago by Senator Barnes of Troy, Gov. Black's bailiwick, to authorize the New York and Queens Electric Company to commence an action against New York for nearly $1,000,000, was jammed through the Senate to-day.

Senator Keenan characterized the bill as a steal as big as had ever been attempted against New York in which cuch rules of evidence were laid down for the conduct of the case on trial that the city had no defense whatever and would be mulcted out of the sum named in the bill.

Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge are counsel for the light and power company, and when Keenan asked why the company had sent to Rensselaer for a representative to push it, Senator Barnes admitted that he introduced the bill to please a constituent of his. In spite of Keenan's plea that the people of Queens should have a chance to be heard at a public hearing on the measure, Barnes insisted on his motion to pass the bill finally, and openly electioneered the floor for its passage. Col. Gruber remained in the Senate chamber ante-room until the bill had been passed. Senator Brackett, out of whose committee (the Judiciary) the bill was reported, spoke in its advocacy, urging that it was admitted that the company had supplied light and power to the city, but not under a contract, and that the suit would only determine what the light and power furnished were worth.

Keenan replied that Brackett was very keen on getting out anything which favored corporate interests, but was not so willing to report out his (Keenan's) bill for semi-monthly payments of wages to Long Island Railroad employes.

Grady echoed Brackett's statements and favored the bill.

Senator Marks, in opposing it, read the following section of the bill in support of his contention that it took away from the city all rights to a legal defense:

> The action hereinbefore provided for shall be commenced, proceeded in, tried, and determined as are other actions of like character in said court, and the said company shall not be required to have or produce upon any trial thereof or in said action, or to prevent making of, or entering into, of any written or other express contract with said city for the furnishing of any of the materials, appliances, matters, or things hereinbefore mentioned, or for the performance of any such work, labor, or services. Nor shall the failure or omission of said company to allege or prove the making, entering into, execution, or existence of any such written or express contract constitute or be any ground or cause of demurrer, motion, answer, plea, or defense to said action.

Senator Foley, in opposing the bill, said that if the company had a leg to stand on it would not have to come to the Legislature in this way and ask that the city be forced to a settlement with it.

By a vote of 30 to 21 the motion to recommit the bill for a hearing was lost, and with the same vote it was finally passed.

From Jan. 1, 1903, the city refused to make contracts with a number of the lighting companies, among them the New York and Queens Electric Light and Power Company, which supplied current for lights in streets and public buildings in the Borough of Queens. After the expiration of the contract on this date the company continued to supply the current, and the city used it as before on the theory that it would pay for it according to a price which would be determined by a court decree or commission named to fix the compensation.

The company did not bring its action for three years, and the purpose of the bill is to make the city pay for the current supplied at the contract price as it existed before the contract expired.

PERJURY BILL RECOMMITTED.

Grady Wins Fight Over Insurance Measure Amendment.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 10.—After a long fight in the Senate to-day, Mr. Grady succeeded, with the aid of the Lieutenant Governor and several Republican Senators, in having sent back for amendment the first of the contested insurance bills. This is the one which seeks to amend the Penal Code relating to perjury. The bill was sent back after two of the uncontested bills, those relating to the acquisition of real property by life insurance companies, and the amendment of the Penal Code relative to rebates, had been passed unanimously.

As soon as the Perjury bill came up for passage, Grady moved to recommit it, with instructions to strike out the enacting clause. This motion was lost by a narrow margin, 20 to 27. Grady immediately moved another amendment to the effect that no person could be held for perjury on a statement unless it was made in writing and subscribed to. The vote on this resulted in a tie, 23 to 23, with Lieut. Gov. Bruce for the amendment. The bill now goes back for reprinting, and cannot be passed before next week. This, however, does not end the opposition to the bill as a whole, and it would cause little surprise if it was defeated upon final passage.

Senator Brackett gave notice to-day that he would introduce several important amendments to the Insurance bill, which amends the insurance law generally, when the bill comes up for third reading on Thursday. There are six, but only two of them are of importance. They make any person who was a Director of any one of the three large companies on the first day of February, 1905, ineligible as a Director for three years from the time the act takes effect.

CHAFFEE FOR S. P. C. A. HEAD.

Gen. Adna R. Chaffee came to town last night for a three weeks' stay, and in conversation with a TIMES reporter admitted that he had been asked to allow his name to be presented for election as President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to succeed John P. Haines, but had not decided to consent. He declared incidentally that there was no truth in the report that he had been asked to become Police Commissioner in succession to Gen. Bingham.

"I haven't decided about the S. P. C. A. proposition yet," said Gen. Chaffee.

"It is understood that you have declined an offer, but that you are open to another proposal," was suggested.

"It's one and the same thing," replied the General.

"Will you meet any of the S. P. C. A. people or hold a conference with them?"

"I may meet some of them in the course of a few days," Gen. Chaffee replied.

"How about the Police Commissionership?"

"There is no truth in any of those reports," said the General. "The place has not been offered to me since December, before Gen. Bingham took it."

He declared that both Mr. Knox and Mr. Spooner had misconceived the theory under which Congress establishes the inferior courts, saying that if so disposed Congress could to-day disestablish every one of the inferior courts. He did not agree with Mr. Spooner that such a course would be anarchy, because the State courts would be left. Congress might, he argued, declare war against every nation of the globe, and while there was no doubt that the people would scourge the Congress that would do so, still there was no doubt of the Congressional power. So it was with the right of Congress regarding the courts.

THE POWER TO LIMIT.

"The power to create and the power to destroy must include the power to limit. The Senator from South Carolina has been pressing this point as a cornfield lawyer," he said, "and the constitutional lawyers have never yet been able to satisfactorily answer his contention." In support of the plea that the legislative authority is not curtailed he called attention to the fact that with reference to the inferior courts no limitation is put upon Congress as to their number, their jurisdiction, or their power.

Along with decisions by the courts he quoted the text writer Conkling as saying that "the Circuit Courts possess no power not conferred by Congress," and when Mr. Spooner evinced an interest in the book, Mr. Bailey remarked: "He wrote and lived before the Senator from Wisconsin and the Senator from Pennsylvania delivered their remarkable speeches."

He quoted a case decided by Chief Justice Marshall, involving a law suspending the writ of habeas corpus, in which he said that the courts cannot issue a writ of habeas corpus except upon the authority of a written law. "And yet," he said, "the Senators tell us that Congress has no power to put a limitation on the injunction power of the courts."

As a matter of practical convenience, a railroad company could better afford to sue 10,000 shippers for the difference in rate in case of a final decree favorable to it than 10,000 shippers could afford to sue the company.

He asserted that in more than one decision the Supreme Court had held that the inferior courts have no "inherent function," as contended by Mr. Knox. He quoted an opinion in which was made the statement that Congress had withheld jurisdiction. "How, in the name of common sense, can Congress withhold from a court jurisdiction of a subject and not withhold judicial power?" he asked, to further support his contention that the phrase "judicial power" and the word "jurisdiction" are used interchangeably by the courts.

POWER OF CONGRESS.

"If," he said, "the President is commanded by a statute to perform a certain duty he does not consider the authority is given directly by the Constitution. The Constitution is the source of all power, but it is a dead letter unless Congress breathes into it the breath of life. He declared that even the courts have no power to execute their own judgments without specific authority from Congress, and quoted the case of Fink vs. O'Neil in support of the contention.

Mr. Bailey disavowed that he had any intention of attacking the courts, but he said that he had himself known some courts that were guilty of abuses; hence it was necessary to place limitations upon all of them. Moreover, the manifold duties of the Judges would prevent their giving the careful attention necessary to railroad questions. He contended that commissioners could be found as competent as the Judges of the courts. "And," he added, "if we cannot get commissioners equal to some of the Federal Judges I know, God save the Republic!"

Coming then to the consideration of Mr. Hale's question relative to the final decision of railroad cases by the Supreme Court of the United States, Mr. Bailey said that he did not believe that the courts were the best tribunal for the settlement of those questions, but that under the Constitution he did not believe that the right to such adjudication could be denied the carrier.

"If," he went on, "a railroad can take my property upon paying me what the court says is right, why can't you permit me to take the property of the railroad company and hold it until it is finally decided?" This, he added, may be regarded as elementary in the Senate; it will be so accepted by the plain people, who have a right to demand their voice shall have respectful consideration.

He expressed his regret that he had not been able to agree with Messrs. Knox and Spooner. "They have," he said, "taken a position never before taken in the Senate or announced in the courts in their effort to draw a distinction between jurisdiction and judicial power. They could get a patent on it for its novelty, but it would be denied for its lack of value."

He had no apprehension concerning the effect of the proposed legislation. Instead of undesirable results he was of opinion that the railroads would be forced by it to do justice. "Then," he said, "we would hear no more of railroad Senators and railroad influence in politics, and I for one would be delighted to have the railroads entirely eliminated from the public affairs of the country."

EFFECT OF BAILEY'S SPEECH.

Two Republican Senators Desert Aldrich—Tillman Predicts Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Senator Bailey's speech in the Senate to-day has had the effect of a severe shake-up on the Rate bill situation. Things are moving faster to-night than at any previous time since the bill came up. Aldrich and the group which follows him are thoroughly stirred up. Aldrich is determined on prompt and radical measures which will bring the situation to a head.

He desires to head off the possibility of Bailey's making any more inroads on his strength. At present he is confident he has enough votes to defeat Bailey's amendment, but he does not wish to give Bailey any more chances. He is, therefore, moving to bring about an immediate and independent vote on the Bailey proposition. He believes he can get it this week, and is to-night planning to have the amendment voted down and out of the way before Saturday.

Aldrich's headlong course has alarmed many of his friends, and one of the most eminent of them said to-night:

"Aldrich has bedeviled the whole situation. There is no limit to what he is capable of trying to do. He has been too active. He is not a lawyer, and ought to have kept in the rear."

Aldrich will not succeed in carrying these men with him in his attempt to have the Bailey amendment taken up and voted on separately from the other amendments, and it is difficult to see how he can have it done. He is thoroughly sure to-night, however, that he can and will do it.

Those Republican Senators who have not been in accord with the President have arranged an entente cordiale with some of the President's friends, and as a result Senator Long has redrawn his amendment. It now includes Mr. Knox's idea that the statutory as well as the constitutional rights of a railroad shall be reviewed by the courts. There is no indication whatever that the President has agreed to it or has been consulted about it.

It is practically certain now that the bill will include a provision for what is called "the broad review," that is, a review by the Supreme Court, if not by the Circuit Court, of all the questions tried by the Inter-State Commerce Commission. That question is believed to be settled. The fight now is over the question whether the order of the commission shall go into effect immediately or wait until it has been upheld by the Supreme Court.

The Aldrich leaders were scouting to-night the idea that by Bailey's speech they had lost any votes on that question except Senator Hale's. It is a fact, however, that they have lost at least one more and that a very prominent and active Senator on their side, who after Bailey's speech went over to the Democratic side and announced his conversion to the Bailey amendment.

The principal damage done by Bailey's speech to Aldrich's group, however, is not in its effect upon Republican Senators, but upon Democrats. Many of the wavering have indicated a disposition to come into camp.

Senator Tillman has held out against a caucus until Senator Bailey should have made his speech, and he is now anxious to get the Democratic Senators together if that accomplishment is at all feasible. The caucus may be held Thursday.

There could be no doubt of the full force of the statement by Senator Hale. It indicated more than anything that has yet occurred that an agreement is in sight. Senator Spooner said to-night that he expected the debate to run only a few days longer. It was not improbable that there would be an adjournment by the middle of May. He likened the situation to a log jam. "When the key log goes out the whole thing will go with it like an avalanche," observed the Wisconsin Senator. Senator Spooner will reply to Bailey Thursday. Senator Knox will make no set speech in reply, and may not say anything.

It was said on good authority to-night that Senator Tillman counts on twenty-three Democratic Senators and twenty-five Republican Senators who will support the Bailey amendment.

SEVENTH IN BRIGHT ARRAY.

Lieut. Gen. Bates Reviews the Regiment and Presents Service Bars.

There was a brilliant military display at the Seventh Regiment Armory last evening when the regiment held a review and parade in honor of the distinguished riflemen of the command. Lieut. Gen. John C. Bates, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, was the reviewing officer, and the spectacle was witnessed by a large assemblage of friends of the militiamen.

The men were in full uniform, with white trousers. The Adjutant's call for guard mounting was at 7:30, and the Assembly one hour later.

The gold bar to the Cross of Honor for twenty years' service was presented to seven officers and men, and the silver bar for fifteen years' service to fourteen others. The presentations were made by Gen. Bates. The Edward Kemp trophy and the Emmons Clark trophy were awarded to Company G, to be held by it until the close of the next competition.

GAMBLERS FINED $5,000.

Counsel Pleaded That Play at Lakewood Was by New Yorkers.

Special to The New York Times.

TOMS RIVER, N. J., April 10.—Lawrence J. Gallagher, proprietor of a gambling house at Lakewood known as the Albemarle Club, with his three assistants, Charters, Fay, and Silbers, pleaded guilty to-day to conducting a gambling house, and were fined in the aggregate $5,000 and costs. This amount they paid.

Gallagher promised the court not to re-engage in gambling in Ocean County.

Senator Minturn, counsel for Gallagher, said that the gambling at the Albemarle had little bad effect because it was done entirely by New York people, who live in an artificial atmosphere.

Judge Hendrickson said emphatically that the gambling houses in Lakewood must quit business.

GOODS FROM THE OREGON.

Customs Officers Tracing Articles Said to Have Been Smuggled.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 10.—Smuggled goods of considerable value, which were brought to this city on the battleship Oregon, were seized by the United States Government Inspectors to-day at a local freight shed. Among the articles were pieces of valuable silk, many curios, and expensive china sets and costly specimens of ivory.

The Custom House officers expect to make other seizures. They have sent telegrams to many places asking that suspicious packages be intercepted and held until an investigation of their contents can be made.

MORE HEARST "PETITIONS."

Three Found with No Genuine Signatures—Nervousness "Higher Up."

In their investigation of the charges against Clerk Benjamin M. Goldberger of the City Register's office, who is under arrest for filing petitions nominating W. R. Hearst for Mayor in the last campaign, Assistant District Attorneys Kresel and Whiteside learned yesterday beyond all doubt that three more petitions were prepared by Goldberger in such a way that not one of the signatures shown on the actual petitions was genuine.

These are the petitions nominating Justice Edgar Lauer of the Fourteenth Municipal Court, Assemblyman Frederick De Witt Mills of the Twenty-ninth Assembly District, and Alderman Clarence R. Freeman of the Thirty-first Aldermanic District (Twenty-ninth Assembly.) All three were elected on the combined Republican and Municipal Ownership ticket. As far as has been learned by the District Attorney's office, they were not aware of the manner in which their petitions were got up by Goldberger.

This is only a part of the new evidence that has come into the hands of Mr. Kresel, and more is coming every day. It is not likely that any arrest will be made until everything has been collected that can be prepared in advance for the benefit of the Grand Jury. It was reiterated yesterday that Mr. Kresel has already facts at his disposal which positively connect some of the men "higher up" with the doings of Goldberger.

Several lawyers said to be connected with those supposed to be endangered were seen about the Grand Jury room asking for permission to give explanations to that body. Such explanations have lately been used in attempts to upset returned indictments, and the District Attorney will probably take no risks.

Jersey House Passes Auto Bill.

TRENTON, April 10.—The Automobile bill passed the House late to-night. The bill provides among other things for a Chief Inspector and seven assistants to enforce the law, which is to go into effect on July 1.

At that time all outstanding licenses expire. New licenses are to be granted on the basis of the horse power of the machines. No license is to be granted to any person under 16 years of age. The speed limit is six to twelve miles an hour in cities and twenty miles an hour on country roads.

James A. Bailey's Condition Critical.

The condition of James A. Bailey, general director of the Barnum & Bailey Circus, who is ill at his home in Corcoran Manor, near Yonkers, with erysipelas, was very critical last night, and showed no improvement. He is 70 years old and his recuperative power is not great.

The bill was rushed through the Assembly with the aid of an emergency message from the Governor. It was passed in the same way last session and became a law, but the courts held it to be unconstitutional. Since then it has been amended in many particulars, and it is now expected to stand the test suits which the liquor dealers will undoubtedly bring against it.

"I believe this bill will, in a large measure, eliminate some flagrant abuses which have grown up under the present law. While the 'fake hotel' is and has always been without any legal sanction under the present liquor tax law, and while the keeping of such 'hotels' is and has been punishable with severe penalties, the local authorities charged with the duty of enforcing the police laws regulating the liquor traffic have not always had the disposition to prosecute violations as rigorously as might be. The preliminary detailed inspection of hotel buildings made mandatory by this act, and the provisions for the institution of proceedings to cancel or revoke liquor tax certificates will render it easier to enforce and more difficult to evade the law."

The purposes of the new law are thus described by the Governor:

"First—To compel an inspection of hotel buildings in connection with which the traffic in liquors is to be carried on before any hotel liquor tax certificate is issued. In the City of New York the Superintendent of Buildings of the borough in which such premises shall be situated, in other cities the Mayor of such city, and in incorporated villages the President of such villages are charged with the duty of inspection, and are required to file a sworn statement that such declared hotel building complies with the provisions of Section 31 of the liquor tax law, relating to hotels and hotel keepers; in other words, that such hotel is a bona-fide hotel for the accommodation of guests, and not a sham or fake 'hotel,' so styled only for the purpose of obtaining the advantages of a hotel liquor tax certificate, and not intended to accommodate the traveling public with rooms and food. If such declared hotel building does not comply with the provisions of the law relating to hotels and hotel keepers, no liquor tax certificate shall be issued to any person proposing to carry on the traffic in liquor at such place, and the police authorities shall be notified that a liquor tax certificate has been denied.

"Secondly—The bill provides that any taxpayer of a city or incorporated village who has reason to believe that any hotel building situated therein for which a liquor tax certificate has been issued does not comply with the provisions of the law relating to hotels and hotel keepers may file a statement to that effect with the State Commissioner of Excise, who must thereupon cause an inspection of the hotel building to be made and file a statement in detail in his office. If it appears from said statement that said building does not comply with the provisions of the law relating to hotels and hotel keepers the said Commissioner shall forthwith commence proceedings to revoke and cancel the liquor tax certificate issued for the said hotel building, unless, in accordance with his demand such certificate shall be immediately surrendered."

POLICEMAN IS HURT.

Roth Mourned Loss of His Pet More Than a Broken Leg.

Policeman Roth of the Traffic Squad, whose post is at the Eighth Avenue entrance to the Park, lay in Roosevelt Hospital last night with a fractured leg.

"I don't mind the leg so much," said Roth. "What I feel most is the death of 'Count.' Poor old 'Count.'"

Count was a big, gentle bay horse that Roth had ridden for several years at the Park entrance. Yesterday evening a runaway that Roth was trying to stop lost his footing and fell, carrying Roth and his horse down, too.

A Roosevelt Hospital physician found that Roth had a fractured leg, and saw that his horse had broken a limb also.

"He'll have to be shot I guess," said the doctor.

"No, make it the other way," said Roth, jokingly; "shoot me and take the horse to the hospital."

The runaway had thrown Oscar Hunter of Seventh Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street. Hunter was not hurt.

DOWIE DECIDES TO WAIT BEFORE INVADING ZION

SEVERAL ZIONISTS ON HAND

His Guards Hurl a Deputy Sheriff Over a Fence—Voliva Issues Anti-Mexican Scheme Order.

CHICAGO, April 10.—John Alexander Dowie will not advance on the "hosts of Zion" as suddenly as he expected. To-night, after a long consultation with his legal adviser, Emil C. Wetten, Dowie gave out the statement that it might be several days before he saw fit to enter the city which he had founded.

"The First Apostle" arrived in Chicago this morning before 9 o'clock. A crowd was at the station to greet him. Escorted by some loyal followers who had boarded the train at Englewood, a suburb of Chicago, he made his way to the end of the train and stepped down on the station platform. He was greeted with an assortment of welcomes ranging from the "Peace be with you" of the Zionists to the more jocular "Good boy, Dowie," of the members of the curious throng. The crush was so great that the police protection proved inadequate and the members of the Zion Guards who were protecting their leader had to fight vigorously to get him to the carriage which was awaiting him.

Just before he reached the vehicle a man sprang past his bodyguard and waved a legal document in Dowie's face, but before a further move could be made the Zion Guards had lifted the intruder from the station floor and thrown him bodily over a near-by railing. It was afterward learned that the man was a Deputy Sheriff who was endeavoring to serve Dowie with a summons in a civil suit in which a medical expert sought fees to the extent of $500 which he avers have been due him for several years. The incident seemed to disturb Dowie very little, and he was assisted into a carriage and driven to the Auditorium Annex, where apartments had been reserved for him and his party.

After a short rest Dowie summoned his legal advisers, and then ensued a conference which lasted the greater part of the evening. Just what means will be taken to reinstate the "First Apostle" in Zion City were not definitely stated, but Dowie did say most emphatically that there would be no compromise with Voliva, and that Dr. John Alexander Dowie must be the leader of Zion or nothing at all.

Just as little desire to compromise was shown by Dowie's opponents at Zion City to-night, when at a conference of the business committee of twelve appointed by Voliva some time ago it was decided to send to all branches of the Church throughout the world the following order:

"Officers, members of the Christian Catholic Apostolic Church are directed not to send any more money for Mexican land warrants."

Regarding the order, W. H. Piper, one of the overseers, said:

"The step was taken because of a desire to completely block Dowie's Mexican scheme, and at the same time remove all chances of his access to funds. The Mexican contributions are the last resort, control of them being in the hands of Deacons John A. Lewis and Fielding H. Wilhite, Dowie's friends, who are officers of the Plantation Association."

Voliva gave out a statement to-night in which he said:

"I wish to say now that so far as we, the leaders of the Church, are concerned, Dowie is in no danger of bodily injury, but there are many people in Zion City who have been so shamefully deceived and have suffered so much through his mismanagement that it is just possible some one might attempt to do him some physical injury.

"Regarding any legal steps he may take, he will be compelled to meet overwhelming testimony to the fact that the transfer of Zion from Dowie through me to Deacon Granger was absolutely necessary to protect Zion City, and Zion's creditors as well. This move has been ratified by every Zion congregation in the country with the exception of San Antonio and St. Louis.

"If Dowie wishes to come quietly to Zion City and go to Shiloh House, he will be permitted to do so. Immediately upon his arrival he will be presented with a carefully prepared statement of the charges against him. Should he express a willingness to answer the charges, he will be allowed to do so in the presence of the overseers."

SOFT COAL FIGHT ON.

Three Arrests—Health Board to Make More to Stop the Smoke Nuisance.

Health Commissioner Darlington made the first move yesterday in his campaign against the violators of the smoke ordinances. Frank G. Burke of the Manhattan Soap Company, whose factory is at Thirty-sixth Street and Eleventh Avenue, was arraigned in the West Side Court for using soft coal. He waived examination, and was held in $1,000 bail for trial.

Commissioner Darlington said last night that many more arrests would follow.

"We have got summonses upon affidavits submitted to Magistrate Barlow," he said, "and just as soon as we can serve them on the officers of the companies who are violating the ordinance we shall do so. I have given my Inspectors a list of 100 offenders, and seven of these are to be brought to court immediately. Their arrests may be expected to-day or to-morrow."

Last night Arthur Moody, a fireman at the Ansonia Hotel, and Bartley Hannahan, fireman at the Hotel Regent, were arrested by a policeman of the Health Squad, who charged them with creating a nuisance by burning soft coal in the furnaces of the two hotels. Both men were bailed by the managers of the respective hostelries.

Charles Rohde, manager of the Regent, said that soft coal was being burned in his hotel because it was impossible for him to get hard coal, and that other hotels were in the same fix.

JACOB A. RIIS IN HOSPITAL.

Undergoes a Very Slight Operation and Laughs About It.

Jacob Riis, the author, and biographer of President Roosevelt, is in St. Luke's Hospital, where a slight operation was performed on him last Saturday by Dr. Robert Abbe. Mr. Riis is in no danger. He laughed when a TIMES reporter asked him about it.

"It was just like going to a hospital to have a sore finger attended to," he said, "and it's all over now. I expect to be out on Thursday and the less said about it the better."

Tell of a Wedding and Sail Away.

Among the passengers sailing for Europe on the White Star liner Baltic to-day are Herbert Pierson Wenig, auditor of the Windsor Trust Company, and his bride, who was Miss Julie Lange of this city. They surprised their friends last night by announcing their marriage, which took place three months ago. Mrs. Wenig has spent many years in Europe and speaks several languages. They will make a tour of the Continent, returning here in June.

National Arts Club's Officers.

There wasn't any great fuss over the RUSSIAN CABINET SMASH-UP.

Rumors of Complete Reorganization Current in St. Petersburg.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 10.—Rumors of a complete reorganization of the Cabinet are everywhere current to-night. Many well-informed persons believe that the fight between Premier Witte and Interior Minister Durnovo will result in the retirement of both, but that no change will take place until the pending loan negotiations have been concluded. Finance Minister Shipoff and Minister of Commerce Fedoroff also are said to be slated to go. M. Yermoloff, ex-Minister of Agriculture, who holds extremely liberal views, is regarded as most likely to be appointed Count Witte's successor in the Premiership.

In the midst of these sensational reports of a complete smash-up of the Witte Cabinet, the Russkoe Gosudarstvo, the official organ, strikes a very menacing note in an article entitled "At the Rubicon," laying the onus of the attempts to prevent the convocation of the national Parliament on the revolutionists, and appealing to the representatives to come together, not as extremists, but in a sober, constructive spirit. In this case, the article says, reforms may be accomplished, as the Parliament will not be gagged; but the warning is given that "a discordant tone will spoil the music" and lead to the dissolution of the Parliament.

THE DUMBWAITER SWINDLE.

Uptown Crooks Have Been Working It Successfully in Apartment Houses.

A band of successful swindlers are infesting the Morningside and Washington Heights districts, where they are reaping a rich harvest. The gang comprises three persons who are well informed as to the habits of occupants of apartments. It is customary for the weekly grocer's and butcher's bills to be placed in the letter boxes. When this is done the swindlers follow up the drivers of the wagons and collect the bills after they have been stuck in the letter boxes. As the end of each usually protrudes from the box, no trouble is experienced in extracting the bill.

One of the gang then enters the tradesman's entrance, rings the dumbwaiter bell, and asks if there are any orders for the dealer whose bill he is ready to present. On receiving the answer he will call up the shaft, "Here is your bill," and at once send it up on the dumb waiter. It is usually paid.

In many instances the man has been asked for change for a $5 or $10 bill. He is obliging, and volunteers to procure the change. Upon receiving the money he disappears.

Sometimes the swindler goes to the door of an apartment, presents the bill, and in an off-hand way asks whether the person wishes to pay or send the money to the store. In a big apartment house the gang will clean up $20 or $25, and by operating in as many as six or seven a day have gotten a big sum.

B. A. Cushman & Co. of 146th Street and Amsterdam Avenue have lost several of their best customers through the swindlers, as they said they had already paid their bills when they were sent a second time. The complaints became so numerous that an investigation was ordered. Detectives have been employed to run down the gang.

FOR DIRECT NOMINATIONS.

Kings Republicans Indorse the Plan—Dady Calls Jerome a Fakir.

The Kings County Republican General Committee meeting in the Johnston Building in Brooklyn last night adopted the report of the Committee of Twenty-one recommending the adoption of the direct nomination system at the next primaries.

Michael J. Dady spoke to the question, saying in part:

"I am in favor of the direct nomination system, but sometimes it fails, as in the case of District Attorney Jerome, the largest fakir ever foisted on the people of New York. But I'm a reformer, too, and if the people want to be fooled, I'm willing to help."

Ex-Municipal Court Justice William Watson made a long speech, in which he referred sarcastically to "Woodruff's absentee leadership." The speaker declared that the Senators now representing Kings are a disgrace to the county, but he didn't say why.

The committee recommended changes in the by-laws of the General Committee by which each election district in the county should be represented by one delegate, and by which there shall be one delegate at large for each Assembly district.

It is planned that the delegates at large shall make up the Executive Committee. The last proposal was referred to a committee of seven, which will report in June.

HORROR WHITENED HIS HAIR.

An Odessa Survivor Arrives with the Worst Tale Yet of Slaughter.

A terrible story of his experience in the riots in Odessa was told by Morris Lebkovitz, a steerage passenger on the steamship Dora when that vessel arrived at Bush's stores in Brooklyn, yesterday.

To escape the Cossacks and rioters, Lebkovitz said, he, with his wife and two children and forty-four other persons, took refuge in an underground room of a house. The room measured only about 10 by 12 feet, but for thirty-six hours the forty-eight people remained there, terrified by the sounds of the slaughter in the street above.

Those in the cellar were so closely packed that none could lie down. One woman and two children were suffocated. Their bodies were held upright by the others in the place, who feared that if they put the bodies out the attention of the rioters would be attracted to the hiding place.

Lebkovitz's hair turned white as a result of his experience. With his family he finally escaped to a place of safety. He has come here to establish a home.

C. P. MILLER'S SLAYER DIES.

Tracey Was the Chief Figure in a Murder Trial Years Ago.

William Tracey died on Sunday night at 527 First Avenue. He was the central figure in a sensational murder trial of two decades ago. His victim was Charles P. Miller, a confidence man, who had shot and slightly wounded him in Darling's saloon, which stood where Weber's Music Hall now stands.

The killing occurred in Darling's saloon, 1,217 Broadway, Nov. 7, 1881. When the two men met both drew revolvers, and Tracey was the quicker. Miller's pistol snapped without firing.

After his acquittal luck turned against Tracey, and for years he has been a pensioner on the bounty of his old friends.

$25.00 Likly Trunks at $15.75
All Sizes, from 32 to 40 inches.

Henry Likly makes a trunk of bass-wood, hickory, rawhide, steel and rivets, as good as it can be wrought and then stands pat for the price—$25.00.

We could not get under it, but we did get around it—our price for this season is $15.75. How the deed was done will keep our contemporaries guessing for many a day. It may not interest you.

The trunk will. Call to mind the best twenty-five dollar trunk of which you know—one with three compartments, two trays and bound all around with two heavy leather straps and fastened with a Corbin brass lock—that describes the trunk.

We've Prepared a Special Series of Suits and Overcoats at $20 and $25

¶ By special we mean suits and overcoats that are out of the common run; that typify the latest-day fashions in men's garments; that are invested with every knack of style and all the clever tailoring that can be put into a garment. And when it comes right down to a comparison of values, you'll find these $20 and $25 suits greater values, by far, than the average garment at $20 or $25.

¶ Overcoats that reveal the modern advances of fashion. The series includes the new gray Chesterfield coats with fitted backs, flaring over hips and deep centre vent.

METHODIST MINISTER ATTACKS BIRD S. COLER

Wishes He Weren't a Preacher So He Could Discuss Him Right.

THE OPEN SHOP IS UPHELD

Conference Enthusiastic for It—Many Pastoral Changes Announced by Bishop McCabe in Brooklyn.

The Rev. George P. Mains, one of the agents of the Methodist Book Concern, occupied the attention of the New York East Conference of the Methodist Church in its afternoon session in Brooklyn yesterday, when he replied to the letter of Borough President Coler. Mr. Coler, he haid, had reiterated the charge that the Methodist Book Concern was receiving money from the Citizens' Alliance for its fight against the closed shop. Mr. Mains said there was not one word of truth in that story.

Mr. Mains also said that if he were not a minister he would be able properly to speak of a man who would write such a letter as the Borough President had.

A resolution was passed requesting the Pope and King Leopold of Belgium to stop the abuse of natives in the Congo. The following cablegram was prepared at the suggestion of Bishop McCabe:

"The New York East Conference of the Methodist Church requests his Holiness, the Pope, to take into consideration the reports of the grievous oppression in the administration of the Congo Free State, and to use his potent influence to secure an effective remedy for the same."

Again last night the ministers reverted to the difficulty between the Typographical Union and the Methodist Book Concern. A set of resolutions setting forth the views of the conference on the union question was adopted unanimously amid tumultuous cheering.

The resolutions said the ministers recognized the right of labor to organize for its own benefit, they regretted the present strike between capital and labor, but they maintained that every man has the right to work wherever and whenever and for whom he pleased.

Following is a list of the changes in pastoral charges announced by Bishop McCabe at the end of the Conference session last night:

MAGISTRATE STOPS RUNAWAY.

Horse Bolted Twice in One Evening, but Didn't Hurt the Higginbothams.

Magistrate Higginbotham and Mrs. Higginbotham came out of their house, at 691 Bushwick Avenue, Brooklyn, last night and stepped into a coupé. Their course lay through Willoughby Avenue, and all went well till Broadway was reached. Then a trolley car hit the coupé.

Charles Meyer, the driver, was knocked from his seat, and the horse bolted. Meyer somehow managed to hang to the reins, and the horse at length stopped. Mrs. Higginbotham and the Magistrate got out, but Meyer said everything was all right, and Mrs. Higginbotham re-entered the carriage, the Magistrate sitting on the box with the driver.

At Stuyvesant Avenue, a gust of wind blew Meyer's hat off. He made a frantic grab for it, and in doing so gave the reins a jerk. That made the horse bolt again. Meyer was thrown clear off the box, and Magistrate Higginbotham grabbed the reins and stopped the horse.

Mrs. Higginbotham got out this time to stay. The Magistrate called an ambulance for Meyer, and Dr. Thompson of the Bushwick Hospital said the driver had a dislocated shoulder. The Magistrate and his wife continued their journey on a trolley car.

ARTISTS WILL HONOR NOCQUET, THE AERONAUT

ART LOVERS PROMISE AID

Public Exhibition of the Work of the Adventurous Balloonist to be Opened on April 30.

Sculptors and artists who knew the late Paul Nocquet, the sculpture-aeronaut who lost his life last week in the marshes on the south shore of Long Island, met last night in the studio of Gutzon Borglum, 166 East Thirty-eighth Street, to discuss plans for providing a suitable memorial to him in this city. Paul Nocquet left about sixty to seventy-five pieces of sculpture, and it has been proposed that half a dozen of these, as well as a number of his drawings, be purchased for the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Mr. Borglum said that two or three wealthy art lovers in the city had already promised to advance sufficient money to make these purchases, and in the coming week proper steps will be taken so that a permanent exhibit of Paul Nocquet's best work may be placed in the museum.

It is probable that a few other pieces of Nocquet's work will go to France. Mr. Borglum said he had heard that efforts were being made in this direction, but he did not know whether the French Government or private collectors were back of the movement. It is probable that the Belgian Government will obtain a few pieces.

Isaac Seligman, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Daniel French, the sculptor, and Mrs. John Woodruff Simpson sent word regretting their inability to attend, but offering to aid the enterprise in every possible way. Mr. Borglum announced that arrangements had been completed to hold a public exhibition of Nocquet's work in the American Art Galleries, East Twenty-third Street, near Broadway, beginning April 30. The exhibition will be open one, perhaps two, weeks. The pieces that are not engaged before that time for museums will be disposed of at the exhibition at private sale.

The exhibition and the proposed memorial will be in charge of an Executive Committee, of which Gutzon Borglum, the dead sculptor's closest friend, is Chairman. He appointed last night as special representatives Daniel French to

"The Bond" Watches
For Easter Gifts.

IF THE EASTER MORNING SURPRISE is to be a Watch, no more dependable sort can be selected than "The Bond" Watch. These Watches have made an established place for themselves in Brooklyn. Chiefly by personal recommendation from one person to another, their fame has spread until now they are one of the most appreciated features of Loeser Store service.

Our idea was in the beginning to produce a moderately priced Watch entirely equal in appearance and accuracy of movement to American-made Watches which sell at a much higher cost. "THE BOND" Watches are made for us expressly by a celebrated Swiss watchmaker. Because we control their manufacture we are able to sell them for greatly less than Watches of equal character usually cost.

We guarantee "THE BOND" Watches absolutely. These prices:

COAL OPERATORS WOULD ARBITRATE

But Won't Allow Fundamental Questions to be Reopened.

WANT OLD COMMISSION TO SIT

And Decide If Changes Warranting Modified Awards Have Occurred—Independents Angrily Assail Union.

The anthracite operators announced yesterday that they will arbitrate, but not on the same subjects or before the same tribunal as the miners suggested. They refuse to reopen the whole question of the conditions of the mines settled three years ago by the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission, and pass over as altogether inadmissible the recognition of the union and the adoption of the "check-off" system.

They protest strongly against the necessity of having another arbitration, but admit that it is possible that new conditions may have arisen since the award of the commission, in relation to wages and the adjustment of complaints. They say they are willing to submit to an impartial tribunal the question whether such changes have arisen and to request it to make such modifications in the agreement as it may deem necessary. They have withdrawn their former proposal for a continuance of the award of the Anthracite Strike Commission for another three years.

The operators assert that no fundamental changes can exist, but say that the Arbitration Board may consider, in view of these changes, whether the wages of the miners are to be increased or decreased, and to alter the present method of settling minor disputes that arise in the operation of the mines between employers and employes.

In the place of the Conciliation Board, suggested by Mr. Mitchell as a fit body to arbitrate, the operators propose the men who formed the Anthracite Strike Commission or any five of them. They are already familiar with the conditions of the mining industry, and the Conciliation Board, consisting as it does of three operators and three miners and an umpire, is certain to divide on party lines upon all matters of controversy, so that, practically speaking, the responsibility of the decision would be put entirely on the umpire.

The offer of the operators was made yesterday afternoon at the meeting of the sub-committees of operators and miners at the Jersey Central Building, 143 Liberty Street. Before the meeting convened the operators held a conference, at which J. L. Cake presented the report of the convention of independent operators, held at Wilkesbarre on Friday and Monday.

The meeting with the miners began at 1:30 P. M. This document, embodying the proposals of the operators, was laid before the miners' representatives:

To Messrs. John Mitchell and Others, Representing the Anthracite Mine Workers:

Gentlemen: You suggest that your propositions, which include recognition of the union, check-off, limitation of the number of men permitted to work under a contract miner, limitation of the amount of work which may be done by each miner, no termination of employment of any individual without arbitration, and supervision of our mining operations generally, with all the machinery that your organization has created for controlling the coal business, shall be submitted to the Board of Conciliation, created by the Anthracite Strike Commission, a board with which you have shown your dissatisfaction by asking, in the propositions which you have submitted, that it be abolished.

Your proposal, as we understand, even involves the submission by us of the question of our making an agreement with the United Mine Workers of America to the exclusion of non-union workers—a question which we did not submit to the Anthracite Strike Commission for reasons then stated, in which we were fully justified by that commission.

Fundamental Questions.

Every question that you have presented was in some form or other, after careful investigation, passed upon by the Anthracite Strike Commission—a commission composed of disinterested parties. The award it made has been faithfully lived up to. Although the duration of the award was limited to the 1st of April, 1906, it was our expectation and that of the public that the principles upon which it was made would be permanent and continuing. That expectation was justified because the commission in its hearings and in its award was guided by the President's express desire that it should "endeavor to establish the relations between the employers and the wage workers in the anthracite coalfields on a just and permanent basis."

We cannot assent to reopen the fundamental questions decided by the Anthracite Strike Commission. They have formulated principles and rules of right to govern the relations between employer and employe, which have received the hearty assent of all good citizens of the land.

We stand firmly on the principles so clearly enunciated in this award. No new commission or arbitration should have the power to overrule them. Any arbitration that does not permanently settle such questions between the same parties is a farce.

It is essential to the welfare of the country that these principles shall be firmly maintained, just as it is essential in the administration of justice that the precedents of the courts shall be followed, so that every citizen may well understand his rights and duties.

While controversies involving in their nature generally accepted principles for the conduct of a business ought not to be submitted to arbitration, differences as to such matters as wages may at times be subject to this method of decision. In the present case, however, the Anthracite Strike Commission broadly covered the whole field of the controversy, and by the wise provision of a sliding scale sought to remove the necessity for any future controversy or arbitration even on the question of wages. Although the wages were advanced in 1900 to a sum varying from 10 to 16 per cent., the commission in 1903 first further advanced wages 10 per cent., or its equivalent, and then established the wages so advanced as the minimum to be paid under all conditions, quite irrespective of the price the operators may receive for their coal. In addition it established the sliding scale, under which, as the price advanced above $4.50, free on board, New York Harbor, wages are increased at the rate of 1 per cent. for each 5 cents' advance in the price of coal. This gives the men the benefit of any increase in price. They share in the profits when the price advances, and they suffer no loss when the price declines, for their wages are fixed on a minimum basis.

The Question of Wages.

Under these conditions there seems to be no justification for an arbitration to determine even the question of wages.

Your propositions, moreover, cover various methods of increasing wages to such an extent that the price of all coal would be increased, the increase on domestic sizes running as high as $1.20 per ton. In the absence of convincing proof of the necessity, we are opposed to any action which will have the effect of increasing the present price of anthracite coal.

The Board of Conciliation to which you have asked that all these serious questions be referred was not created for any such purpose. It was designed as a minor tribunal to give effect to the awards the commission made, and to determine controversies arising thereunder.

Your suggestion of a reopening of the entire controversy before the Conciliation Board is open to the most serious objection. Three members of the board are District Presidents of the United Mine Workers and members of your committee. They are thus suggesting the choice of themselves as arbitrators. But they are, by their membership of your committee, already committed to the support of your propositions and against our proposition that present conditions continue. It is true that three members of the Board of Conciliation represent the operators. But this shows merely that the entire membership of the board is deeply interested in the result, and, therefore, disqualified from acting. The arbitration suggested by you would practically be by one man—namely, the umpire, whose personality is uncertain.

Moreover, the decision of these questions necessarily involves the further, and most important one of all, that is, increase in the price of coal to the consuming public. A Board of Arbitration consisting so largely of your representatives and ours would hardly be considered by the public a proper one to pass on this question.

Reject Conciliation Board.

For the reasons stated, we, therefore, decline your suggestion to refer the questions decided by the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission to the Board of Conciliation.

Our proposition to continue to work under the award of the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission seems to us, under all circumstances, a fair and just one.

It is, however, possible, though we are convinced to the contrary, that some new conditions have arisen to change the award of the commission in matters not relating to fundamental principles, but to wages and the adjustment of complaints.

We are willing that these subjects should be examined by impartial persons. We therefore propose the following course:

The members of the Anthracite Strike Commission, or such of them as may be able and willing to act, (not less than a majority of the whole number,) shall be requested to decide whether any changes in the conditions of the anthracite industry have occurred since the award of the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission which require that the award should be modified, as to the following subjects, and, if so, what that modification shall be:

Questions Admitted.

(1) As to wages or rates of payment of the employes, either by way of increase or reduction.

(2) As to adjustment of complaints through the Conciliation Board or otherwise.

Any party so desiring shall present his claim in writing to the commission, stating the same in detail.

Work shall be resumed at once. The award shall be effective from April 1, 1906, and the present award of the commission with any modification thus made shall continue in effect until March 31, 1909. Three years are suggested because that time has been found satisfactory in the present case, and also because this would avoid introducing into purely business questions the political considerations of a Presidential campaign.

The members of the commission shall be paid such compensation for services and expenses as may be fixed by themselves. The operators shall furnish one-half of the same and your committee shall furnish the other half.

Yours respectfully,
GEORGE F. BAER,
W. H. TRUESDALE,
J. B. KERR,
DAVID WILLCOX,
MORRIS WILLIAMS,
E. B. THOMAS,
J. L. CAKE,
Committee.

New York, April 9, 1906.

When this document had been read Mr. Mitchell asked:

"Do I understand that you withdraw your former proposal to continue the present arrangement for another term of three years?"

"Yes," was the answer.

"Will the operators have the right to demand a reduction in the rate of wages?" was the miners' next question.

"Yes," was again the answer.

"Have the members of the Strike Commission been sounded as to their willingness to act again?"

Commission Ready.

Mr. Mitchell was informed that no negotiations had been opened with them, and that no appeal had been made to President Roosevelt on the part of the operators. It was understood, the operators said, that all the old Strike Commission, with one exception, were in good health, and it was thought that they would be willing to take up their work again.

The miners then requested a further adjournment until 1:30 o'clock to-morrow, so as to consult with the full Scales Committee on the new proposals.

This was granted, and the meeting adjourned at 2:10 P. M., after having been in session for a little more than half an hour.

The operators as they came out had nothing to say about the situation, but authorized the publication of their reply to the miners and also of a letter which J. L. Cake had brought from the independent operators' conference. It is signed by H. H. Ashley, President, and H. W. Kingsbury, Secretary, of the Anthracite Coal Operators' Association, and represents the views of forty-seven operators and fifty-three coal companies. It is addressed to Messrs. Baer, Truesdale, and others of the operators. The letter says in part:

Independents Protest.

"The independent operators, most of whom are residents of the anthracite-producing counties of Pennsylvania, desire to express their firm conviction that any agreement to arbitrate with the United Mine Workers will be an unjustifiable surrender to anarchy and mob violence.

"Far more important than the wages of the miners and the profit of operators is the preservation of civil rights and the maintenance of an orderly government. None of us have forgotten the fearful events of the strike of 1902, when men, who desired or were compelled by family necessity to go to work, were wounded, maimed, and even murdered. And the United Mine Workers have already given ample warning that these acts of violence will soon be repeated or exceeded unless we surrender to their demands. Not only have they laid idle our collieries, before receiving any reply to their demands, but men attempting to work have already been actually wounded, and others, in many places, have been intimidated by threats, beating, or similar display of force. The firemen and men running the pumps, that are necessary to prevent the flooding of the mines, are so frequently and persistently threatened that many of them say they must quit work.

"If this be a fair sample of a republican form of government, all good citizens may well pray for a despotism.

"In view of these well-known facts we contend that it would be better that our mines shall lie idle for years than that we shall accede to the highwaymanlike demands of an organization that lacks either the wish or the ability to restrain its members from acts of violence that would disgrace the much-despised Russia.

"There is another important question that may as well be settled now as hereafter, which is: Has our Government itself the power and the disposition to protect life and property? It never forgets to collect enormous taxes from anthracite properties. Let us demand from it the protection that is our due, and see if we receive it.

"But if your committee shall decide that in deference to public opinion some offer of arbitration must be made, we submit that it should be only to the same body that met in 1902 and 1903, or to at least five members thereof.

Independents' Belief.

"We wish to reaffirm our belief and strong desire that until an organization shall arise that shall have both the desire and the ability to compel obedience to law and order, there shall be no submission to arbitration."

Mr. Mitchell appeared in very much better spirits as he came out of the conference than he did last Thursday. He declined to express any opinion of the terms offered him, and merely said that he would call a meeting of the Scales Committee at the Ashland House in the evening to lay the whole proposal before the thirty-six delegates from all parts of the coal district.

He was plainly surprised when he was told about the letter from the independent operators. It had not been read at the meeting. It was shown to him, but he refused to say anything about it. As much attention was paid by the miners at the Ashland House to the independents' utterance as to the formal offer of a new form of arbitration, and it was evident that they felt the accusations against them very keenly.

What the Miners May Do.

It was predicted last night that Mr. Mitchell would not refuse the operators' proposal absolutely, but would suggest some modification of its terms. The withdrawal of the former offer of a continuation of the present agreement for three years, it was represented, had left him no alternative between that and a prolonged strike. In the face of the operators' declaration that they will bring up the question of a reduction of wages as well as an increase, and that they think there is no possible ground for a rise, it was argued that in forcing a fight the miners would be endangering the advances already won. Whether the miners would assume such a responsibility at a season of the year when the necessity of the public is not likely to cause a cry for peace at any price to be raised for several months, was admitted to be a serious problem.

It is, however, open to the miners to contend that the altered conditions since 1903 make arbitration on other points than wages and the methods of the Conciliation Board legitimate, and many of them are in favor of making another effort to induce the operators to consent to a reopening of such questions as the weighing of coal and an eight-hour day.

In regard to the choice of the old Strike Commission as the Arbitration Board the miners know that one of their greatest friends among its members, Bishop John L. Spalding of Peoria, Ill., is now in too weak health to serve. The others are all available. They are: Judge George Gray, Carroll D. Wright, Brig. Gen. John M. Wilson, Edgar E. Clark, Grand Chief of the railway conductors; Thomas H. Watkins, formerly an independent anthracite operator, now in the bituminous mining business, and Edward W. Parker, expert statistician.

President Truesdale of the Lackawanna Road said last night:

"It's all up to Mitchell now. I consider the offer of the operators fair to both sides. There has been complete harmony among the operators in all important matters, although there may have been some debate upon matters of detail."

"Is it true that there has never been any complaint by the miners against your road?" he was asked.

"I believe that is correct," he replied. "There have not been any complaints in the Lackawanna district, and I never thought there could be."

Price of Coal Here.

He was then asked about the position of the retail market here, and he said:

"It is true we are not delivering coal very freely. We are acting conservatively, and will continue to do so. Not that we are anxious about the situation, but we feel we should be conservative, and there is no excuse at present for raising the retail price."

The full Scales Committee of the miners met last night at the Ashland House. The sub-committee made its report of the meeting with the operators, but there was no discussion in detail of the new arbitration proposal. The session lasted a bare half hour and was adjourned until 9 o'clock this morning.

BY JAPANESE ARTISTS.

Paintings and Water Colors at the American Art Galleries.

Next Friday evening the American Art Association, 6 East Twenty-third Street, will sell at auction seventy pictures by Japanese artists belonging to Mr. Bunkio Matsuki of Boston, who has sold several collections of Japanese porcelains and other art objects in these same galleries. They are by natives of Japan, but the influence of the Occident seems to have been potent in the education of these Orientals. This is naturally most visible in the oil paintings, eleven in number.

"The Widow," by K. Mitsutani, is a three-quarter length, standing, of a young Japanese woman carrying on a pillow the military cap and sword of her husband, who has fallen in war. She has a pleasing face, and her robes are dark without being funereal. There is some fair modeling in the face, but no signs that the artist has mastered the difficult art of oils. The picture suffers also from the difficulty that it requires a commentary to understand it; for there is a lack of grief on the face, and so the clue to the meaning is missing. One regrets that the artist did not attempt to give the smile struggling with grief which would be natural to a Japanese woman in such conditions, according to the custom of suppressing emotion in public. Like the painter-craft displayed, this anecdotal picture is neither Eastern nor Western, but falls between two stools. It is impossible to subscribe to remarks on it made by the compiler of the catalogue, who says: "The finely balanced restraint of the artist's rapport with his theme makes this simple figure a dramatic creation of rare power." One feels that it lacks dramatic effect entirely. Still less can one follow this statement: "As an epitome of conjugal love and devotion it takes rank with the symbolizations of maternal affection embodied in the finest Madonnas (!) of our Occidental art."

The same painter is represented by "A Drowsy Maid," an oil painting of very little merit, and by "Dawn on the Tone River," where he works to better effect in landscape. "Early Autumn" shows dim figures in the grove beyond, and a man in big wooden boots, back turned, who stands in the water washing the enormous long white turnips they grow in Japan. Other oils are "Dusk in May," "Upland Pasture," "A Passing Shower," and "Lotus at Dawn," by H. Yoshida, and "Iris Pool," by M. Koshugi. These have interesting passages; especially attractive is the last one, which shows a duck swimming under old forest trees in a pond fringed with iris beds.

The water colors have more of the charm we feel in Japanese pictures, and generally speaking the charm is strongest where a foreign influence counts least. Interiors of temples by R. Kimura, such as "Temple of Rio-Daishi" and "Ikegami Temple," are fine in tones and impressive through their quiet and their twilight atmosphere. "A Moonlit Shore," with Japanese fishing boats stranded and a figure with big basket on back, by H. Yoshida, and "Snow in Tabata," by the same artist, a village street with soft, slushy snow and a hunter coming forward, are pleasing for their broad touch as well as their Japanese subjects. Miss F. Yoshida has an "Azalea Garden," brilliant but not hard. Down the broad stone stairway from a teahouse comes a Japanese girl in flowered garments under a sunshade. A smooth facture in water colors is seen in K. Miyade's "After the Rain," and "The Brook," but there is more feeling for atmosphere in his "Tone River," where the trees, yellowish green, the flying birds, the square white sail up the stream make a pretty picture and at the same time suggest Autumn.

BROKAW BROTHERS

The dull yellow glow in the sky of the same artist's "Shinziku River," three spindling trees in the foreground, with small blots to indicate the leaves not yet fallen, and the peculiar touches of color in the snow, make this a notable picture.

M. Kosugi has a scene of Japanese soldiers at breakfast in camp just outside Liao Yang during the battle that took place around that town. The crenelated wall of the city and a gate are seen in the background.

The famous mountain Fuji is naturally of this company. F. Miyake draws it in Summer, raising its snow-covered cone above clouds to peep at the landscape foreground in sun and shadow; he also shows it almost swathed in clouds. H. Yoshida, a fanatical lover of this beautiful mountain, supplies "First Light in Japan" with Fuji just tipped with the sun, and depicts it again in Winter at dawn, one edge beginning to brighten against the coming of daylight. Other strictly Japanese subjects adequately rendered in water colors are Kimura's "Maples in Takawo River" and "Toganowo Bridge."

PORTRAITS BY CAROL AUS.

Miss Carol Aus, the miniature painter, has a little show of two dozen portraits in charcoal and colored crayon at the Knoedler Gallery, 355 Fifth Avenue, which marks her progress from the smallest likenesses to those the size of life. A study in charcoal of a young woman with abundant dark hair standing in profile with downcast eyes, and another of a little girl in a white dress, seated, who wears a big hat with flowers and looks thoughtfully out of clear brown eyes, are among the better pieces. Admirable is the young girl in broad sailor collar seated on a folding chair of antique design who clasps her hands on her lap. It is in charcoal, heightened very discreetly with red chalk. Two feminine heads in sanguine are excellent for their drawing and expression.

Miss Aus has a large clientèle among children; half the portraits here are little Masters and Misses. One of the most agreeable figures for technical qualities, pose, and expression is that of a young girl who props her chin on her hand and her elbow on the arm of her chair, and looks down with a slightly mournful gaze. She has brown hair shot with gold, and the forearm between chair and chin is nicely modeled.

The exhibition remains until April 21.

Get Your Garden Ready!

The city man may laugh all he likes about the suburban resident who is attacked with "gardenitis" about this time of the year—later on, when the latter's home is a bower of roses and his patch of ground is supplying the table with such vegetables as the city man seldom tastes, the laugh is the other way around.

It's time to get ready. And we are here to help.

For our part, we have here everything in the nature of seeds, bulbs, and potted plants and have the rest grown especially for us under the supervision born of long experience and thorough knowledge of the business.

Everything that our gardeners know is at your service for the asking. We have expert horticulturists here all the time to answer questions and give advice.

And here's a hint or two as to the tools and some things that the happy suburbanite may need.

RIOT OF ENTHUSIASM GREETS MAXIM GORKY

Russian Writer Says Arms Must Force the Revolution.

FOR FEDERATION OF NATIONS

He's a Socialist, Not an Anarchist, and Will Raise Funds Here for Revolution—Calls Witte a Scoundrel.

Maxim Gorky, the Russian novelist and revolutionist, landed at Hoboken yesterday from the North German Lloyd steamship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, with the cheers of thousands of his countrymen ringing in his ears. They had been waiting for hours in the rain to greet him, and they gave him a reception which rivaled the welcome given to Kossuth, Hungary's champion of freedom, and Garibaldi, the Father of a United Italy, when they came to this country. Yet these were exiles; Gorky is not.

"I do not know how long or how short my stay will be in this country," said Gorky when asked about his mission, "but of this I am sure, that while I am here I will try to do something for my fatherland."

Maxim Gorky was down on the Kaiser's passenger list under his real name, Alexei Maximovitch Pieshkoff. Gorky, which is only his pen name, means the "bitter one." The novelist was accompanied by his wife, who is a Russian actress, well known on the stage as Mme. Andreeva, and his friend and secretary, Herman Teodorevitch Bourenine. The party occupied one of the finest suites on the saloon deck of the big steamship. Gorky will remain in this country for at least two months and possibly longer, chiefly for the purpose of raising funds for the Russian revolutionists, but partly for the benefit of his health.

A party of friends and representatives of various revolutionary bodies in this city went down the bay on the revenue cutter Hudson to greet the famous Russian writer. In the party were Gorky's adopted son, Nocolay Zavolsky Pieshkoff; Ivan Narodny, one of the Russian revolutionists now in this country for the purpose of raising funds and otherwise enlisting support for the revolutionaries in Russia, and Joseph Mandelkern, the New York real estate broker, who traveled in Russia last year and at that time visited both Gorky and Tolstoy.

Others in the party were Abraham Cahan, editor of the Jewish Socialist organ, the Vorwaerts and author of "The White Terror and the Red," a novel dealing with Russian revolutionary life; Gaylord Wilshire, publisher of Wilshire's Magazine; Morris Hillquit, the Socialist leader; Leroy Scott, manager of the University Settlement, and Dr. Maxim Romm, who met Gorky as the representative of the Russian Bund in this country, a revolutionary organization made up chiefly of Jews.

These warmly welcomed him, but Gorky got his real big reception after the ship had reached her pier. Among those on hand to meet him there were Nikolas Tchaykoffsky, the "Father of the Russian Revolution," who is now in this country on a mission identical with that of Gorky, and delegations from a dozen organizations interested in the cause of Russian freedom. These had passes admitting them to the pier, but beyond the lines established by the customs officials the pier was black with men and women who had come to cheer the Russian writer or catch a glimpse of him.

As Gorky, accompanied by his wife, his adopted son, his private secretary, and the little party that had gone down the Bay to meet him, passed up the pier on the way to their carriage there were few who recognized them until they reached the roped-off space where the customs officials standing on guard were holding the enthusiasts back from swarming over the pier. When those in the front ranks recognized Gorky, they threw their hats in the air and sent up a cheer which was taken up by the throng until the pier shook.

Gorky was apparently overwhelmed. Removing his traveling cap, he stood for a minute inside the inclosure bowing and waving his hand at the frenzied thousands on the other side, where men were jumping about like mad and filling the air with their clamor and waving hats frantically.

Then the wicket was opened, and the Customs Inspectors pushed the writer and the little party with him through the gate. The next instant a dozen pairs of arms had laid hold of the writer and lifted him bodily from the floor. Others were preparing to do the same thing to Mme. Pieshkoff and the youth who was trying to protect his adopted mother from the well-meant but inconvenient homage. Gorky, himself the centre of a human vortex, threw up his hands as a signal that he had had enough. Then the customs officials sallied forth and dragged him back within the protecting inclosure.

A moment later a flying wedge of customs officials, Hoboken police, and pierhands sailed into the crowd Cossack fashion, and pushed it bodily back sufficiently to make a passage for Gorky and his party to the elevator. On the street level there were carriages in waiting to take the party to the Hotel Belleclaire, where he will remain as the guest of Mr. Wilshire.

When Gorky came down and prepared to enter the carriage the mob had reached it and was busy getting the horses out of their harness and preparing to haul the carriage to the ferry themselves. As the driver called for aid a squad of police came to his assistance and prevented the substitution, but as the carriage drove away it was surrounded by a surging mob of hundreds, who hung to the carriage wheels all the way to the ferry.

The little party which boarded the Kaiser down at Quarantine found the Russian writer doing business with the immigration and customs officials in the small private dining room adjoining the large one. The customary question was put to Gorky as to whether he was an Anarchist or believed in law and order. His wife was with him at the time. The question of the immigration officer was translated to the latter by one of the officers of the steamship. Gorky does not understand any language except his native Russian, but his wife speaks German and French fluently.

Gorky smiled broadly when the question was repeated to him.

"No, I am not an Anarchist," he said. "I am a Socialist. I believe in law and order, and for that reason am opposed to the Russian Government, which at this particular time is organized anarchy."

There was no difficulty in allowing Gorky to set foot on American soil after that. His declaration to the customs officials occupied even less time.

The meeting between Gorky and his adopted son, who has not seen his benefactor for more than three years, was a most affectionate one. Gorky was leaning up against the end of a table, dressed in a small peaked traveling cap of dark gray and a huge Russian dolman with an enormous cape over his blouse made familiar by the pictures of the writer. He looked in rugged health, and there was color in his typical Russian peasant face with its blonde mustache and its high cheek bones.

Meets His Adopted Son.

Gorky stands fully five feet ten or eleven, and he towered over his adopted son, who is small of stature and slight of build. The youth rushed into his arms and gave him a resounding kiss on each cheek and then one on the mouth. For a moment Gorky held the son out at arm's length and looked into his eyes. Then he drew him close again while the young man covered the face of the writer with kisses for fully a minute. Then Gorky made a gesture toward his wife, who was seated by his side. The boy bent swiftly over her and kissed her lips.

Then one by one the members of the party were introduced to the author. When the reporters' turn came Gorky at first declared that he would not say a word for at least two days, as he was very tired. After no end of persuasive efforts on the part of his friends he finally went to his cabin and prepared a brief apology for not talking for publication, but later he submitted gracefully to an interview. His apology he wrote on a sheet of paper in Russian in a fine, almost feminine hand, and handed it out to the reporters. Here is a translation:

"I apologize many times to the press of free America that I cannot speak to its representatives at this time. I am fatigued, and overwhelmed with the grandeur of the ocean. I shall take a rest, and then in two or three days I shall be delighted to receive the representatives of the press. Once more I beg you to excuse me, and send hearty thanks for your welcome."

Later Gorky received a number of reporters in his suite and consented to answer a few questions. He explained that he was not ill, but had been writing twelve hours a day on the steamship, and for that reason was tired. He said he would give much attention to the press in the future. He talked in Russian, and the questions and answers were translated by an interpreter.

"What influence will the recent elections have on the cause of freedom?" was one of the first questions.

"None at all. I take no stock in these elections at all. I am not interested in the elective Liberals. They can be of no use to the Russian people," said Gorky.

The Douma of No Avail.

"The Douma," he went on, "is something apart from the people. It can be of no avail for the liberation of Russia. The Social Democrats have taken no interest in the elections. Nevertheless, a number of Social Democrats were chosen electors at the primaries. There were forty-seven in Moscow alone. I cannot speak of the final elections to the Douma itself, because I was not in Russia when they occurred, but I suspect that many Social Democrats have been elected, and that in proclaiming the results the Government has called them by some other name for the sake of efffect."

"What is the actual condition of the revolutionary cause in Russia at present?" was the next question, and this was the reply:

"That's a difficult question to answer. All I can say is that the people are getting armed.

"In twenty-two provinces," Gorky added, after a brief silence, "the people are starving to death. In the province of Tula in the famine district, the people use the money given them to buy bread with for the purchase of arms. They say: 'Let us die, perhaps our children shall have freedom, which is better than bread.' That is only a typical instance."

"Don't you think the Russian revolution could be brought about without arms?" asked one of the reporters.

When the question was translated to Gorky he smiled broadly. Then he raised a clenched fist toward the ceiling of his cabin and let it sink again.

"You ought to know from past experience that this cannot be done," he said. "You have been there yourself."

"How does the Orthodox Church stand toward the revolution?"

Again that Russian smile. But this time it denoted satisfaction.

Priests in the Revolution.

"A minority of the priesthood have assumed the leadership of the revolutionary movement among the peasants," he replied. "Some of the priests are in prison already for their share in trying to make Russia free. That they can find any followers at all is interesting and significant to anybody who knows how our people hate and distrust the Church."

"If the revolutionary movement is successful, what will be Russia's form of government?"

"Russia will go the way America went—Federation. If the Russian revolution goes through we will have a Government framed along the lines of your own, with a federation of nations—such as Finland and Poland—instead of a federation of States. That is my opinion."

"What will become of the Czar then?" asked a reporter.

The Russian writer shrugged his shoulders as if to indicate that he did not know and did not care.

"What do you think of Witte?" was the next question. When it was translated to him Gorky flared up for the first time during the interview.

"Witte is a scoundrel," he exclaimed. "It would take me too long to tell you what our people think of him. He is a man devoid of talent and devoid of honesty."

"What will be the status of the Jews in Russia after her new birth?"

"There is another very complex question," said Gorky. "My own idea is that the Jews are a valuable race. Russia needs their activities, and they should be given every opportunity."

"Do you think the resumption of the revolutionary efforts will see a return of the barricades?" M. Gorky was asked.

The Barricades Again.

A sad look came into the blue eyes of the Russian writer and his brow clouded as he replied:

"Unfortunately, yes. I am afraid the battle for Russia's freedom will have to be fought from behind barricades."

"What are your plans, your hopes, and expectations in coming to this country?"

"I don't know how long or how short my stay will be. That depends much upon circumstances. I expect to travel over the whole country, and whatever I shall do, I hope I shall be able to do something for my fatherland. And you, gentlemen, must help me."

Gorky said that his next work in all probability would be an autobiography.

"But I am not concerned with literature just at present," he said, "and I do not know when I will begin to write it."

When Gorky was asked whether he would make any public speeches in this country he replied in a shrinking manner that he was not an orator or public speaker, adding:

His Public Appearances Here.

"I shall probably read from manuscript lectures on some interesting phases of the revolutionary movement. Some of the lectures will be on the Jewish riots and massacres, and others will deal with incidents of the insurrection in Livonia and in the Baltic provinces."

Gorky, who did not suffer from sea sickness, made many friends during the trip. With some of his German fellow-passengers he talked freely, through an interpreter, regarding his plans.

"We are not Anarchists, but Socialists," he said on one occasion. "The Government of Russia in its present state is simply anarchy. There is no law, no order. The situation is not anarchy of the people, but of the Government.

"I gave up the fortune I had derived from my literary work to aid the people's cause. Then the Government put me in prison. A rich merchant of Moscow, who is my friend, gave 15,000 rubles and got me out of prison. Now I must work hard and make more money to help along the revolution. I don't know whether I shall lecture or write magazine articles. I shall spend at least two months here, and expect to devote at least part of that time to getting some rest and recreation."

Both the author and his wife asked many questions from American passengers regarding the best methods of enlisting the sympathy of the American people for the revolutionary cause. To one American passenger Gorky said he had about made up his mind that if he could visit Chicago he would be able to do much good there.

Capt. Cuppers of the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse had told Gorky that land would be sighted some time yesterday morning. The author was up long before daylight, searching the horizon eagerly for the first glimpse of America. When finally the Shinnecock Hills appeared, blue in the distance, with their outlines growing more and more distinct, the author with his wife was standing on deck near the railing.

"America! America! America!" cried Gorky, pointing to the land. "I have been waiting years for this moment. Columbus could not have been more anxious to discover America than I."

Then for ten minutes he stood with arms folded and gazed at the land, apparently oblivious of everything that was going on about him.

At luncheon yesterday Gorky made a speech, and proposed a toast to America.

Gorky was taking his meal in the small dining saloon. In the large saloon a fellow passenger had proposed his toast in German. Capt. Cuppers brought word of it to Gorky, and translated the remarks made by the other traveler. Then Gorky rose with a glass of champagne in his hand and said in Russian:

"I want to express my pleasure at having traveled with so many kind people, and especially at coming to America, the land of liberty. It has been the desire of my life to come here. So many of my literary friends have written me letters of sympathy and asking me to come. I drink to the health of the passengers on this ship and the American Nation."

Gorky paid renewed homage to America when the Kaiser came abeam of the Statue of Liberty. He had just fled from a swarm of interviewers and sought the seclusion of his cabin when the band on deck struck up Sousa's march, "Hands Across the Sea," by way of greeting to the goddess.

Goddess of Liberty Fascinates Him.

There was a delegation at the door of Gorky's cabin clamoring for an opportunity to extend their welcome. M. Bourenine, the private secretary, had opened the door to let them in when Gorky held out his hand to ward them off temporarily. Then he called his wife from the adjoining stateroom. He took her hand, opened the port of his cabin, and both of them gazed in silence together at the statue.

For fully two minutes the couple stood there with the delegation waiting at the door and looking on. Gorky seemed fascinated by the giant figure that held the torch of liberty over everything within sight.

It had been raining just before, and the sun, which peeped out a moment behind the clouds before setting, broke oddly on the wet, bronze robes of the Goddess until little violet shadows flitted all over her giant limbs and the folds of her draperies.

Members of the delegation declared that Gorky remained under the spell all the time they were talking to him. It was then he made up his mind to talk to the reporters.

The author's wife seemed just as interested in everything she saw as her husband. She remained on deck most of the time while the Kaiser was steaming for the pier.

"We have had a fine trip, and it has done my husband good," she said. "We expect a happy time here. I have been more surprised than I can say at the knowledge of my husband's works that every one displays. I can scarcely collect my thoughts. Everything is so new, so strange, and so large. I don't mean the big buildings," she said with a sweeping gesture toward the Manhattan shore, with its skyscrapers, "but everything. I suppose it is the American way of doing things, the true expression of the American spirit that so impresses me."

Gorky and his wife will be guests at many receptions here. This evening he will be a guest of honor at a dinner at A Club, 3 Fifth Avenue. Mark Twain, W. D. Howells, Peter Finley Dunne, Robert F. Collier, Robert Hunter, Gaylord Wilshire, M. Narodny, and M. Tchaykoffsky will be among the other guests.

DEFENDS "MUCK RAKE" MAN.

His Revelations Elected Jerome and Folk, Says Mr. Hapgood.

Not content to wait for the President of the United States to make his speech next Saturday on "The Man with the Muck Rake," Norman Hapgood, editor of Collier's Weekly, defended himself in advance at the twenty-fourth annual dinner of the Exeter-Phillips Alumni at the Hotel Manhattan last night.

"To my mind," said Mr. Hapgood, "this temporary reaction against disclosures of public corruption is entirely without significance. It only points out slight and necessary exaggerations which are necessary when any good work like this goes on.

"The President of the United States, it is said, will make an attack next Saturday on 'The Man with the Muck Rake.' Ten years ago it was the fashion to call any man who worked for reform and helped to disclose corruption a 'knocker.' But the journalists who do their part in the work of showing the people the truth need not be permanently afraid of any name that may be applied to them, either by the President of the United States or an official of less importance.

"Neither Folk in Missouri nor Jerome in New York would have been elected if it had not been for what the President contemptuously refers to as the 'muck rake.' If the newspapers and magazines had not told the people of Missouri about the bribery and general public corruption in that State Joseph W. Folk would now be in private life instead of Governor. If the newspaper in New York had not laid bare the 'red light' horrors and the system of police blackmail District Attorney Jerome would now be in private life."

"Between a statesman and a politician I'd lots rather be a politician," said Job E. Hedges. "A statesman is a man who knows what ought to be done and does nothing, and a politician is a man who thinks he knows what ought to be done and does something, whether it is right or not.

"There's no great difference between thinking wrong and thinking right if you're not going to do anything.

"Limelight virtue is not a National asset. Headlines don't make character. The cry, 'Stop, thief!' doesn't always mean that you haven't the goods yourself. Nobody ever forged a name when the other man was looking, or knowingly took a marked bill. Think out your life, and live it, whether the electric light is shining or you're alone."

Principal Amen told about the progress that Phillips-Exeter was making and what it still needed. Benjamin N. Johnson spoke in behalf of the New England Alumni Association. S. Sidney Smith, President of the Board of Trustees, also spoke. Among the guests were Prof. Wentworth, Prof. James A. Tufts, Robert Winsor, Dr. Arthur G. Leacock, N. T. Bond, and S. S. Pascal.

THEY'LL WRITE 500 LETTERS.

Congress to Hear from Women Republicans About Child Labor Laws.

Five hundred letters in a correspondence with the members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives was the commission the Woman's Republican Club voted to undertake at its regular meeting at Delmonico's yesterday morning. The letters will be written in the interest of Congressional legislation for the protection of children.

The vote to send letters of appeal to Congressmen was a direct response to an appeal by Mrs. Ralph Trautman. Sorosis has formed a committee to work in the interests of child labor, and Mrs. Trautman has been made its Chairman. One of its first lines of work has been to inaugurate a Club Correspondence League, which is to inundate the members of Congress with individual letters, an appeal "from the women of the country to its men," requesting them to use their influence in favor of all legislation which will benefit children. Sorosis sent out her 500 letters last week.

"The Woman's Health Protective League, at Sorosis's request, is to follow with 500 letters," said Mrs. Trautman. "The Political Study and Eclectic and Post Parliament Clubs are to follow, and we hope the Republican Club will do the same. There is very little that women's influence cannot accomplish."

Dr. Samuel McCune Lindsay spoke of the value of the Child Labor Bureau, for which the bill of Senator Crane of Massachusetts provides. He spoke of the illiteracy of the working child.

"Because of the lack of legislation upon this matter," he said, "the colored children in the Southern States who do not make satisfactory mill workers are going to school and getting an education, while the white children reach their majority without being able to read or write. This in time is going to affect the vote in the parts of the country where it exists.

"Mill owners in the South argue against legislation because of a law which they have made for themselves called the 'gentleman's agreement.' This binds them not to employ children under 10 years of age, though as a matter of fact it is done."

NEGRO FELLS WOMAN ON ELEVATED TRAIN

CROWD BEATS HIM SEVERELY

Score of Men Go to the Police Station, Where the Negro Is Held on Southern Woman's Charge.

The striking of a Southern woman by a negro in a packed west side elevated train at 6:20 o'clock last evening just as it pulled out from the Seventy-second Street Station resulted in such a free fight that the conductor was compelled to send his train back to the station. The motorman then whistled for the police and got them.

The negro was severely handled, but escaped with no broken bones. He said he was Albert Trott of 217 West Sixty-seventh Street.

As the train started from Seventy-second Street, Trott started to work his way to the door of the car to leave at the next station. As he elbowed his way, he was rough in the handling of other passengers and knocked Miss Bella Oliver of 292 West 142d Street into the lap of another passenger. Miss Oliver, who says that she is from Alabama, struggled to her feet and made bitter protest against such treatment by a negro. According to witnesses, Trott turned and struck her squarely between the eyes with his fist.

The men in the car went for the negro, swinging right and left at his head. He fought like a tiger for the platform. When he got there the conductor stopped the train and signaled for it to go back. Trott meanwhile was knocked flat several times. He got loose at the station and got off the train. He seemed glad when Policeman Flattery dashed from the head of the stairs to his rescue and arrested him.

A score of men who were passengers in the car followed the policeman and his prisoner to the station. Miss Oliver was escorted to the station, where she made her complaint. The police drove the crowd back from the station, allowing in only witnesses for their names and addresses. In the station Miss Oliver started for the negro, declaring that she would kill him, but she was restrained.

MUSTN'T BUILD STORES.

An Injunction Granted, Pending a Suit Over Madison Avenue Property.

Justice Fitzgerald granted an injunction to David Korn of 924 Madison Avenue in the Supreme Court yesterday restraining his next-door neighbor, Georgine Campbell, from altering her house by placing stores on the ground floor, pending the trial of a suit. The court directed Korn to furnish a bond for $5,000 to secure the defendant against damage in case the injunction is dissolved as a result of the suit.

The property was formerly a part of the old Lenox Farm. When James Lenox conveyed the land on which both houses stand on Aug. 10, 1870, to William Lalor, the deed included a clause against nuisances, and provided that the purchaser "will use or suffer the premises to be used for the erection of first-class residences only."

Although Justice Fitzgerald held that the property is still subject to the covenants mentioned in the Lenox conveyance, he said that conflicting affidavits made it evident that the questions at issue could be satisfactorily determined only upon trial.

THAT DEMOCRATIC ADDRESS.

There's Trouble in the Club About It—Bryanism Versus Hearstism.

Dissatisfaction has arisen in the Democratic Club over the address to Democrats which has been prepared by the sub-Committee on Reorganization and, as a consequence, the sub-committee, at its meeting last night, decided not to issue the address until it has been passed upon by the full committee to-morrow evening.

The sub-committee, consisting of Thomas L. Feitner, William Pitt Mitchell, and John R. Dunlap, met with the Law Committee of the Board of Governors, consisting of Judge Edward F. O'Dwyer, Eugene L. Bushe, and E. T. Kiernan. The dissatisfaction has arisen over the manner in which the address attacked some of the present movements in the party as "anarchistic and socialistic." Other members thought the movement savored too much of Bryanism in order to head off Hearstism. The address will be made public after Thursday night's meeting, possibly with some amendments.

SWORE WALSH WAS "SMITH."

Mulligan's Trial in Election Fraud Case on Again To-day.

Deputy Superintendent of Elections Hayes, George Walsh of 428 East Sixteenth Street, and Mrs. Hannah Seltzer of 187 Avenue B, testified for the prosecution yesterday at the continuation before Judge McMahon in General Sessions of the trial of James A. Mulligan, a lieutenant of Tammany Leader John T. Oakley, on the charge of making false statements under oath.

It was shown by their testimony that on the night of Oct. 19, when Hayes was at the house of Mrs. Seltzer to inquire about a man who had registered from that place under the name of "Arthur Smith," Mulligan walked in with Walsh and remarked to Mrs. Seltzer in the hearing of Hayes:

"This is your boarder, Mrs. Seltzer."

Mulligan and Walsh were then taken to the office of the Superintendent of Elections, where Mulligan affirmed under oath that Walsh was "Smith." Walsh maintained for a while, too, that that was his name, but finally broke down and told the truth.

Walsh said on the stand yesterday that he was ignorant of the whole matter until Oct. 19, when Mulligan got hold of him and took him along to Mrs. Seltzer's house, saying to him on the way:

"Remember, your name is Smith in this case, and you just stick to that whatever happens."

The People closed their case yesterday and the defense will begin to-day.

ALDRIDGE CALLS ON ODELL.

Visit Starts a Rumor That He Has Left Higgins's Camp.

Railroad Commissioner George W. Aldridge, the Republican leader of Monroe County, came to town yesterday and held a long conference with Chairman Odell of the State Committee on the legislative situation, especially concerning reapportionment. Aldridge opposed Odell on the organization of the present Legislature and made possible the election of James W. Wadsworth, Jr., as Speaker.

As one of the bulwarks of the Higgins anti-Odell contingent, his meeting with Odell caused a flurry in Republican circles, and guesses were hazarded that Odell had gained another friend from the opposition. Both men declined to say anything about their talk. Odell returned to Newburg late in the afternoon, but will be in the city again to-day.

Chairman Parsons of the County Committee also will be in town to-day, and the reapportionment of New York County then will be taken up in earnest. The Executive Committee will be called to meet soon, probably Friday or Saturday, to pass on the Odell and Parsons plans for rearranging the districts.

As yet there is no sign of a compromise between the supporters of the two plans, twenty-two leaders supporting Odell's arrangement and sixteen Parsons's.

LOCAL OPTION BILL OUT.

Assembly Takes It Away from the Excise Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 10.—By a vote of 79 to 39, the Tully-Wainwright Local Option bill was to-day dragged out of the Excise Committee by the Assembly, on a motion of Wainwright of Westchester. Discharging committees from further consideration of a bill is very seldom countenanced by either Senate or Assembly, and to-day's action was taken only after a bitter fight.

Representatives of the Anti-Saloon League hurried about the Chamber lobbying for votes to get the bill out of committee. Many country members were told what the Church interests would do to them if they did not get in line quickly and vote for the Wainwright motion. That issue was what won the day.

The bill will be on the calendar on the order of second reading to-morrow.

TENEMENT BILL SIGNED.

Prentice Measure Extends Classification of Unclean Dwellings.

ALBANY, April 10.—Gov. Higgins today signed the Tenement House bill of Mr. Prentice, which includes tenements in which articles are "altered, repaired, or finished" as among those which, under certain conditions, the State Commissioner of Labor may cause to be classed as unclean, according to the provisions of the Tenement House act.

The bill also provides that such goods when exposed to contagion may be so tagged.

$10,000 Asked for a Broken Promise.

Trial of a $10,000 action for breach of promise of marriage brought by Miss Marie A. Arns, who lives in the Bronx, against August D. Reimer, was begun before Justice Fitzgerald, in the Supreme Court, yesterday. Mrs. Arns testified that she had her trousseau ready for the wedding, but Reimer broke his promise.

The case will be continued to-day.

N. Y. 'Varsity Beats Tufts in Debate.

The debate between Tufts College and the New York University last night was won by the latter. The subject was: "Resolved, That Congress should delegate to a committee the power to fix a maximum freight rate on complaint of the shipper, and that after a public hearing, the said rate should apply until revised by a Federal court."

Transportation Men Dine A. Lederer.

Agents of steamship lines and railroads gave a dinner at Shanley's, Times Square, last night, to Arthur Lederer, manager of the White Star Line, on his retirement. Mr. Lederer has been associated with the White Star and American steamship lines for more than twenty-five years. He will hereafter devote his time to managing property at Forest Park, Penn.

SIX RAILROADS DIVIDE THE SOFT COAL TRAFFIC

PRIVATE CAR DISCRIMINATION

By-Laws of Association Produced Before Inter-State Commerce Commission, but with Pages Missing.

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—That the bituminous coal traffic is divided among six railroad companies was developed to-day at the first hearing of the Inter-State Commerce Commission held here for the purpose of determining whether the railroad companies are interested directly or indirectly in the oil or coal which is transported over their lines.

The commission also brought out the fact that by means of the private car system large mining companies are able to enter into contracts for the delivery of coal at stated periods, while smaller companies which own no such cars are unable to guarantee the exact time when their coal will be delivered. The Pennsylvania Railroad, it was learned, declines to handle private cars unless the owner guarantees to have at least 500 cars, the possession of which would involve an outlay of $500,000.

Four members of the commission are here to conduct the inquiry. They are Martin A. Knapp, Chairman; ex-Senator Francis M. Cockrell of Missouri, Judson C. Clements, and C. A. Prouty. William A. Glasgow of this city and Edward B. Whitney of New York have been engaged as counsel for the commission; General Solicitor Francis I. Gowen and Assistant General Solicitor George Stuart Patterson represent the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and the Reading Company is represented by General Solicitor Judge J. D. Campbell.

The principal witnesses to-day were Upton H. White, Statistician of the Tidewater Steam Bituminous Coal Traffic Association; W. W. Atterbury, General Manager of the same company, and Theodore Voorhees, Vice President of the Reading Company. Through these witnesses it was brought out that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the Reading Company, the Beech Creek Division of the New York Central Railroad, the Baltimore & Ohio, the Chesapeake & Ohio, and the Norfolk & Western Railroad Company are members of the Tidewater Steam Bituminous Coal Traffic Association, which was organized in 1896. The members of the association, it was shown, have an agreement by which a certain percentage of the soft-coal tonnage is allotted to each.

Upton H. White, the statistician of the Tidewater Bituminous Steam Coal Traffic Association, was the first witness. He said he would produce the contract of organization if ordered to do so by the commission. His duties, he explained, were the gathering of statistics of tidewater tonnnage and the issuin of statements of it to the roads. The statements furnished showed how much each road was entitled to move.

He said the Executive Committee of the association consisted of Mr. Searles of the Pennsylvania, Mr. Herman of the New York Central, Mr. Savant of the Norfolk & Western, Mr. Jones of the Reading, Mr. White of the Baltimore & Ohio, and Mr. Whitaker of the Chesapeake & Ohio. Those named are the Coal Traffic Managers of their roads.

J. G. Searles, Coal Traffic Manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad, testified that a statistical bureau was maintained in Pittsburg for the purpose of compiling statistics of coal moved to the West and Middle West. There was a meeting of the association in Buffalo about a year ago, but the members had not gone there to regulate the tonnage to be carried by each road. They had met to talk over the situation and learn what freight the other roads carried.

Mr. Glasgow asked why they wanted to know this—whether it was for the purpose of dividing up the traffic. The witness replied that it was not, and Mr. Glasgow then asked what conclusion was reached. Mr. Searles said that it was decided that there was no necessity for the roads to make any change in the rates.

First Vice President Voorhees of the Reading Company said his company got its coal from the Fairmount Coal Company and Somerset Coal Company of Shippensburg. The company, he said, paid $1.80 or $1.90 a ton. He admitted that the company also purchased coal from the Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania Railroads. Mr. Voorhees was excused, after agreeing to furnish the commission with a statement showing the amount of coal purchased by the Reading Company since 1891.

W. W. Atterbury, General Manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad, promised to furnish the commission with a statement showing how much coal his company purchased and from whom.

Mr. White was recalled. He was requested to produce more particulars about the workings of the Tidewater Bituminous Steam Coal Traffic Association. He presented to Mr. Glasgow a copy of the by-laws of the association.

It was shown that the association was organized Feb. 5, 1896, and that during the same month and year the Pennsylvania, the New York Central, the Baltimore & Ohio, the Chesapeake & Ohio, and the Norfolk & Western Railroad signed agreements of membership. It was brought out that the traffic association was organized so that rates might be fixed and adjusted and mutual protection afforded.

Attorney Glasgow called attention to the fact that several pages were missing from the pamphlet. Mr. White said he was not aware that any pages had been torn out, but stated that he would endeavor to produce the missing portions. Before adjournment Mr. White was informed that he would be called again to-morrow.

GEORGE J. GOULD TESTIFIES.

Bought $1,000,000 of Western Maryland Stock Just for Friendship.

The appearance of George J. Gould and the telling the story of the investment of $1,000,000 of the Equitable Life Assurance Society's money by "James H. Hydes and Associates" in the stock of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, interested spectators in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn yesterday. The case was that of Morris C. Menges, who is suing Gen. Louis Fitzgerald under an agreement alleged to have been made between them by which Menges was to have received $1,000,000 for information which he alleges enabled the defendant to purchase the controlling interest in the railroad.

Mr. Gould said that Gen. Fitzgerald had tried to interest him in the road, but that he didn't want it. Early in 1902, he said, he again heard of the road from Mr. Burton of Baltimore.

Later, he said, Wayland Pierce, counsel for Mr. Gould, saw Mr. Gould about the road.

"He came to me," said Mr. Gould, "and told me that a Mr. Baker, who had subscribed for $1,000,000 worth of stock, had failed to take his share and that this circumstance had greatly embarrassed him. I then said that if that was the truth I would gladly subscribe $1,000,000 to help out, as a matter of friendship. I went in as a matter of friendship, merely, for Pierce."

The Camera Club elected these officers last night: President—F. Benedict Herzog; Vice President—Chauncey H. Crosby; Treasurer—H. T. Leonard; Trustees—George W. Blakeslee, Frank B. Cleland, Willard P. Little, H. Holbrook Curtis, M. D., and Frederick C. Beach.

The Business Science Club of New York will hold its April dinner to-night at 111 Fifth Avenue. Henry George, Jr., will speak of the duties of the business man as a citizen. O. J. Gude will give an address under the title of "Grow or Go." The Rev. C. D. Case of Brooklyn will speak on "Personality in Business."

FRANCE TAKES OUR PART.

Asks Russia, as a Favor, to Postpone The Hague Conference.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The French Ambassador has been informed that the French Foreign Office has sent a dispatch to St. Petersburg, saying that the French Government would consider it a great favor if Russia would lend her influence to have the date of the second Hague Conference postponed according to the wishes of the American Government.

The Russian Ambassador stated to-day that he had communicated to his Government the request of the State Department that the date for the conference be changed from that suggested in the Russian note, but that so far he had not received any reply.

Senhor Nabuco, the Brazilian Ambassador, to-day received a cablegram from his Government stating that the Dutch and Belgian Governments had informed the Brazilian Minister in Belgium that they had no objection to the postponement of the date mentioned by Russia for the conference.

Secretary Root will return to Washington from New York in time to meet South and Central American diplomats to-morrow afternoon to discuss the Pan-American Congress. By that time, it is expected, Mr. Root will be able to announce that The Hague Conference will be postponed so that it will not conflict with the Pan-American Congress.

It is now freely predicted that The Hague meeting will go over to 1907, as there seems to be no demand for haste. There seems to be a preponderance of opinion among diplomats that a meeting in June, 1907, when The Hague is at its best, should be agreed upon.

MORE OUTBREAKS IN CHINA.

Anti-Dynastic Troubles in Ho-Nan—Bandits Pillage Towns.

PEKING, April 10.—Disturbances in the southern part of Ho-Nan Province and in Western Shan-Tung, caused by the "Big Knife Society," a relic of Boxerism, are reported. They were nominally caused by hostility to the new educational scheme and the Catholics, but they take the form of the pillage of towns by bandits.

In Ho-Nan the bandits are said to number 12,000 and to carry banners inscribed with words "Down with the Manchu dynasty!" Many towns are rebuilding their ancient walls for protection against the bandits.

The scene of the disturbances in Ho-Nan is close to the Han-Kow—Peking Railway, and travelers over that line can hear rifle firing. Troops have been sent from Han-Kow to the disturbed districts, and it is expected that they will suppress the bandits.

COLON, April 10.—Charles E. Magoon, Governor of the Panama Canal Zone, arrived here this morning from New York. Later he went to Panama by train.

HURT BENNET'S FEELINGS.

Representative Hopkins's Unheard Speech Stirred Things.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Young Mr. Bennet of New York, who is serving his first term, recently assailed Mr. Hopkins of Kentucky for some remarks that budding statesman made about New York, roasting Hopkins's district to the Queen's taste. To-day Hopkins took the floor to reply. He read his speech laboriously from manuscript, and no one but Bennet paid the least attention to him.

Suddenly Mr. Bennet stilled the roar of conversation. He arose, stalked down the aisle, hurled his index finger at the Speaker, and called Hopkins to order for unparliamentary language.

This is a serious matter, and every one was on the alert at once.

The trouble was that not a soul but Bennet had heard Hopkins's words. Hopkins said they were parliamentary, and Bennet, still standing in the aisle, sternly declared that they were not. But every time Bennet started to tell what the dread words of Hopkins were, the whole Democratic side would tumultuously cut him off with objections.

Then Chairman Sherman called upon the stenographer to produce the words of Hopkins.

The stenographer read them. They were to the effect that Bennet's words, in the language of a negro exhorter, "were like a Mother Hubbard; dey kivered everything an' touched narry p'int."

"Those were not the words," broke in Bennet. "The gentleman from Kentucky really said—"

"I object!" roared all the Democrats in chorus.

"I have an idea," said Mr. Sherman, who was presiding. "The stenographer took down the words correctly, but was one sentence behind the gentleman from Kentucky when the gentleman from New York called him to order. I will read from the manuscript of the gentleman from Kentucky the next sentence, as follows:

"'The statement of the gentleman from New York that 30 per cent. of my constituents cannot read or write is untrue.' Did the gentleman from Kentucky say that?"

"I did," cried Hopkins, striking a heroic attitude, "and I stand by it."

"Is that what the gentleman from New York refers to?" continued Sherman.

"It is," cried Bennet, striking an equally heroic attitude, and evidently waiting for the thunders of expulsion to descend on Hopkins. The two men glared at each other.

The House listened in stupefied amazement. A laugh started in the back of the House and swelled into a Titanic roar. Republicans and Democrats joined in. High above it came the heron-scream of John Wesley Gaines:

"Why, Mr. Chairman, I have heard that sentence ten times a day for nine years!"

"The Chair is ready to rule," said Mr. Sherman. "The language used by the gentleman from Kentucky is perfectly parliamentary."

MR. BEDE ON SENATORS.

Prefers Those Representing Sunsets to Those Standing for Financiers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Representative J. Adam Bede of Minnesota furnished a half hour's diversion to the House this afternoon by a speech on the Postal Appropriation bill. It turned out to be a sustained sarcasm at the expense of the House organization for jamming through the Statehood bill by which Speaker Cannon is endeavoring to force the joinder of Arizona with New Mexico and their admission as one State. In beginning his speech he sent to the desk and had read a resolution apparently aimed at the division of Texas into four States.

He proposed to have a common capital at Austin, with the new boundary lines radiating from there. There should be one Governor and four Lieutenant Governors, one for each State, with separate Legislatures, each having power to elect two United States Senators.

By this scheme, Mr. Bede pointed out, Texas would be forever barred from sending ten Senators to Washington, as she now may do if she chooses to form five States from her territory, as she has authority to do under the terms of her admission into the Union. Thus the East would be the gainer by this procedure, and the method would be simpler than the enforced joinder of Arizona and New Mexico merely to avoid having two more Western Senators.

"I hear it said that Senators are bad folks," remarked Mr. Bede. "I don't know whether it is against the rules of the House to speak well of Senators or not, but I'm going to try it. I'd rather trust my political rights to Senators from the Rocky Mountains who represent nothing but the sunsets than to Senators who stand under the shadow of a trust company and represent the unearned increment."

NASSAU PRESBYTERIANS CRITICISE DR. SHEARER

They Accuse Him of Meddling in Their Affairs.

TALK OF MALICIOUS CONDUCT

Nassau Churches Forbidden to Deal with N. Y. Presbytery's Stated Clerk —Pulpit Supplies in Question.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick E. Shearer, Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of New York, was criticised by the Rev. J. Howard Hobbs of Jamaica, L. I., and others at the Spring meeting of the Presbytery of Nassau, held at Far Rockaway yesterday. It was charged by Mr. Hobbs that Dr. Shearer had interfered with the prerogatives of Nassau, and that he "carries a ministerial bureau in his vest pocket."

Mr. Hobbs's remarks led up to the introduction by him of the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That all vacant churches in this Presbytery shall be instructed to make their wants known and apply for pulpit supplies to the Presbytery's Committee on Vacancies and Supplies; and that no church in Nassau Presbytery have any communication with the Rev. Dr. Frederick E. Shearer of New York Presbytery relative to supplying the pulpit, or other church affairs.

In leading up to the resolution Mr. Hobbs said:

"There have been two or three cases of such extravagant and audacious conduct on the part of Dr. Shearer that notice must be taken of them. He has repeatedly displayed unwarranted interference in our affairs.

"When we set out to establish a church in Flushing some years ago a committee of Flushing citizens was appointed to found it. Dr. Shearer informed some of the committee that the Nassau Presbytery was under a ban and was to be disciplined by the Synod. We were also informed that Dr. Shearer volunteered to organize the new church. Some of us were present when the meeting night came. Dr. Shearer was taxed with unwarranted interference. He disclaimed any such intention, and thus displayed a craven spirit.

"I asked some members of the Presbytery of New York what the matter was with Shearer. They said I would be doing them a favor if I would prefer charges against him. I declined. Some of you know about how he carries a ministerial bureau in his vest pocket."

Elder Prall of the Elmhurst Prebyterian Church said that Dr. Shearer had endeavored to arrange with his session to supply ministers while they had no permanent pastor, and had been informed that they could manage their own affairs.

"There is a big row coming in the New York Presbytery," said Elder Davidson of Hempstead. "We will hear from it soon."

A second resolution was adopted to the effect that the Presbytery of New York be notified of the Nassau Presbytery's action relative to supplying its own pulpits.

The Rev. Dr. Shearer said last night at his home in this city:

"There are many young clergymen in New York who have no permanent pulpit. In order to assist them and to supply the needs of congregations in the smaller Presbyteries, the New York Presbytery appointed as a Committee on Vacanies the Rev. Dr. Wiley of the Scotch Presbyterian Church, Lieut. Gov. W. Linn Bruce, and myself. We supply vacant pulpits without expense. We are frequently called upon to do so, often getting messages over the telephone on Saturday afternoon to supply preachers on the following morning.

"We have believed that outside congregations would sooner hear a New York preacher for nothing than go to the trouble of supplying the pulpits themselves.

"I will not discuss the other matters said to have been referred to at the meeting of the Nassau Presbytery until they come to my attention officially."

WED, DESPITE THE STORM.

Brooklyn Pair Sought Bishop Potter Vainly, but Dr. Steen Married Them.

When Cupid tapped on the door of the Rev. Dr. John F. Steen of 261 West Forty-second Street late Monday night the rain was coming down in sheets, and Cupid, if he had been anybody else, would have spent all of yesterday in drying and pressing his trousers.

"Goodness!" exclaimed the minister as a gust of moist air swept into his snug hallway. "Want to get married!"

Allen S. Carmichael, 21 years old, an insurance broker of Brooklyn, shook the rain drops from his shoulders and said that he did. Then he presented Miss Rosalie Wade Davidge, also of Brooklyn, a relative, by marriage, of Bishop Potter.

"Poor souls!" said the minister yesterday. "It was surely a love match or they wouldn't have faced such a storm."

But the pair were married, and bride and bridegroom seemed anything but "poor souls" as they hurried back to Brooklyn through the storm.

Miss Davidge is the daughter of Mrs. Helen C. Davidge, a widow, of 15 Berkeley Place, Brooklyn. She was to have married Mr. Carmichael a month hence, but last night the bridegroom-to-be was invited to dinner at the Davidge home, and before dinner he and his fiancée decided to slip off in the storm and be married. First they went to Bishop Potter's house. Learning there that he was away, they tried a neighboring minister, and then a second, but were unable to find either of them. Then they found the Rev. Dr. Steen.

Dies on Elevated Platform.

John Giles, a retired liquor dealer, of 109 East Eighty-fifth Street, left his home yesterday afternoon to go down town. He climbed the steps of the Third Avenue Elevated station at Eighty-fourth Street, and after buying his ticket, sat down on a platform settee to wait for a train. Just as a downtown train pulled into the station he fell from the bench to the floor and died of apoplexy. He was 78 years old and a native of Ireland.

DREAMED OF A FORTUNE—NOW IT'S BACK TO TROY

SPENT IT AND SHOT HIMSELF

Duck Pretended to Get Tips from H. H. Rogers and Bailey Believed Him, to His Own Undoing.

With him went the remains of his dream of a fortune in Wall Street, the consciousness of bitter defeat in having been fleeced out of $50,000 by a conscienceless manipulator, and the prospect that, instead of spending the remainder of his life in the luxury of a $4,000,000 fortune, he must begin all over again.

Bailey came to New York fifteen years ago with $100,000 he had accumulated in the produce business up State. In his advancing years he had conceived the idea that he could "beat the Street." He had speculated in stocks in a small way at his home town, but, feverish to get into the swirl of the game where it moved most rapidly, he came to New York.

He went to stay at a Brooklyn boarding house and lived the simple life. His daily food was bread and milk, served with the newspaper market reports. He arose at 7 o'clock and went to bed at 10. His whole day was spent in the Wall Street district.

Bailey became a familiar figure in the office of Lewis G. Tewksbury, in Lower Broadway. There he dabbled in stocks, winning and losing, until one day he met a man who said he was Arthur E. Duck. Duck had winning ways, and soon took Bailey into his confidence, telling him that he represented the firm of Barren, Anderson & Co. of London, large dealers in American stocks.

"We are just now engaged in a big blind pool," he told Bailey. "We're going to make a barrel of money. You'd better get in while there's a chance."

Bailey said he'd think about it, and while he was thinking Duck improved opportunities. One day a couple of years ago he was standing in front of the Standard Oil Building when Bailey passed.

"Just going in to see my friend, Mr. Rogers," said Duck with a flourish. "Wait a moment and I'll join you." Bailey waited, and in half an hour Duck returned.

"Mr. Rogers says it would be a good scheme to buy copper," he said. "I tell you, old man, we're in good."

At another time Duck met Bailey in front of the office of J. Pierpont Morgan and related another fairy tale of how Mr. Morgan had advised this or that. Bailey was impressed with Duck's importance as a friend of the leading men downtown, and at length intrusted to him a sum of about $50,000 for investment.

The old man got wild with excitement when Duck told him shortly after that he was credited with $210,419 of stocks in Duck's firm.

"It won't take long for you to have a fortune now," said Duck. "Just watch the reports." Bailey hung over the tape all day, and at night, after his bread and milk, went to bed dreaming of the great fortune he had accumulated. Before long Duck had what money Bailey had left—also "for investment."

"It'll soon be $4,000,000 now," Bailey told Mrs. Armstrong, his landlady, the other day. "Mr. Duck and I have made a great killing. I knew I could beat the Street. It's all in having a good acquaintance."

Bailey told Mrs. Armstrong that he had no more available cash, but that his pile in Wall Street would be over $4,000,000, and he thought it about time to cash in. He was happy in his good luck, and used to plan all sorts of ways in which he intended to enjoy life.

"Im fixed now," he said, "and I can look the world in the face as a philosopher and enjoy the things that are here."

On the morning of March 9 Bailey read in the newspapers that a man who had registered as "A. Darling" had died after shooting himself at the Grand Union Hotel. He didn't think much about the report, but he had become anxious about his friend Duck, who had oddly disappeared. On Sunday night word came to him that "Darling," who had been buried in the Evergreens Cemetery, was none other than Duck. The old man fell back in a faint.

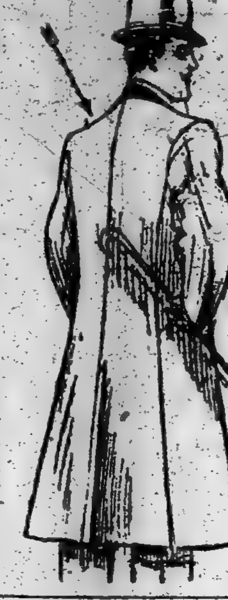
"I thought so," he moaned. "I felt it a week ago. Duck has squandered my money, and now he's dead."

He went to his room and stayed there till Sunday, when he packed his things and departed.

"I'm going back to Troy," he remarked sadly, "and I'll try to raise $2,000. Maybe I can beat 'em yet. Anyhow, I'm going to try. There are millions in it for any one who strikes it right."

Duck is said to have been well connected in London, where his body is to be taken. It is said that he fleeced men in Wall Street out of sums aggregating over $1,000,000, and that he squandered it all in fast living.

The Radical Overcoat for Spring.



This store's been a sort of style barometer for the past few weeks. And we can safely predict that on Easter day you'll see many a man with this radical new overcoat. It reaches a little below the knee, the back conforms to the lines of the figure and flares out over the hips, with a deep centre vent. The collar is of velvet in self or contrasting shades.

From $15 to $40 we present these overcoats in every shade of gray, from very light to very dark.

SUIT OVER A BREWERY.

De Witt C. Flanagan Objects to Stock Allotment of the Zeltner Company.

Edward W. Hatch of 32 Liberty Street is taking testimony in a controversy instituted by De Witt C. Flanagan involving the stock and Directorate of the Zeltner Brewing Company of 170th Street and Third Avenue. Flanagan made application to Attorney General Mayer on Saturday for permission to bring an action in the Supreme Court for the removal of Amasa Lyon, William H. Zeltner, and Henry A. Rubino from the company's Directorate, the first named being Treasurer and the second Vice President of the company.

He says Lyon and Zeltner issued to themselves without consideration to the company stock of the concern. Rubino, as attorney, is alleged to have participated in the issue.

Papers in the case indicate that Flanagan, Lyon, and a Mr. McLaughlin of Malden purchased the Zeltner property and issued $700,000 of stock and $100,000 of bonds of a prospective bond issue of $250,000. The stock was to be divided in sums commensurate with the amount of money put into the syndicate by each, Flanagan having invested $20,000, Lyon $45,000, and McLaughlin $10,000.

After the division Flanagan applied to the Supreme Court to have the division resupervised. In February, at the annual meeting of the Directors of the company, the Zeltner, Lyon, and McLaughlin interests, as opposed to those of Flanagan, elected a Board of Directors, giving Rubino one share of stock and making him a Director.

Flanagan contends that the new election created a trust, and the question whether the new allotment was legally issued or not is a point made in the Supreme Court action which is still pending. Flanagan now wants the Attorney General to proceed to have the three men removed, and Rubino is named especially because, as an attorney, he advised the allotment to which Flanagan objects. Judge Hatch will soon render a decision.

SLOSSON AND SUTTON ARE BILLIARD WINNERS

CUTLER LOSES FIRST MATCH

Banner Crowd of Meeting in Madison Square Garden Concert Hall—Slosson's High Average.

Displaying the perfect execution of his ball-to-ball billiards, George F. Slosson, the "Student," last night defeated the French expert, Louis Cure. The final score was 500 points to 351, and it recorded the second consecutive defeat for the favorite of the Parisian academies in the international championship tournament. It was an unusual match, for Slosson fell behind at the start, playing skyrocket shots of an open-table character. He changed all this upon his seventeenth turn at the table, in which he counted 107 carroms at the eighteen-inch balk line method, two counts in balk. All of this run was the perfection of the method which keeps the object balls rolling always before the player and under his control. Slosson never changed from this to the end; electrifying the spectators in the Madison Square Garden concert hall and finishing with an average of 21 17-23—so far the best of the tournament.

The matineée contest resulted in George Sutton defeating Albert G. Cutler, the ex-amateur of Boston, by 500 points to 220, in which Sutton used the balk line nurse for two big runs, 116 and 109, and an average of an even 20.

Cure redeemed his poor showing of the previous night. He gathered 4 from the spot after winning the bank for lead, and after Slosson had counted twice, put together a prettily played 58. The Frenchman had the ivories at his command and gathered them splendidly in one of the corners on a single shot. He never flinched, playing difficult draws or bank shots upon several occasions. His selection of shots was also perfect, and he showed no uncertainty in this at any time. The veteran American did not do so well. Playing brilliant ball-to-ball billiards, Cure, with a run of 36, totaled 98 on his third inning, while Slosson had only counted 37 on his string. Despite occasional line-ups, Cure persisted in his method of keeping the globes rolling in front of his cue ball. He kept counting every time he took his turn at the table. That he had no intention of changing his style was made evident in his portion of the seventh inning. His first shot was a long draw nearly the length of the cushion, bringing all three balls together in one corner. A few shots later Cure amazed the spectators by playing a fancy jump shot, the cue ball hurdling the red, to effect the carrom as the balls had lined along the side cushion. This run netted him 22, and it was replete with surprises.

Slosson was the first to miss counting in his sixth turn at the table, a careless cushion carrom retiring him. This failure appeared to nettle him, and he went after the carroms more diligently on his next turn. Cure, facing difficult problems of his open table game, slumped when his opponent began to play strongly. He was only able to count small single figures, while Slosson steadily drove the balls around the table for runs of 20, 41, 27, and 26, beginning at his ninth inning. In negotiating these runs Slosson electrified the spectators with any number of three-cushion shots, which the onlookers rewarded with almost continuous applause. The run of 26 placed Slosson ahead of the Frenchman for the first time at the end of the twelfth inning, the standing being then 183 to 176. This did not please Cure, and he tried on his next turn for a line nurse, but missed after counting 2 on cushion shots.

The next inning Cure secured the coveted position on the eighteen-inch line, the balls so closely bunched that they might have been covered by the player's hand. Driving first one and then the other to the short rail, Cure in a few minutes' time counted 65 before losing the position and missing.

Because of bad leaves Slosson was unable to recover the lead for some time. On one occasion the American counted by a long massé, in which the cue ball described a serpentine spiral around the first object ball before completing the carrom.

But Slosson's stroke was easy and perfect as he came to the table for his seventeenth turn. Repeatedly the most difficult shots were presented, but he appeared unable to miss, amassing a big cluster of 107 before he gave way to Cure. Nearly all of the caroms were ball to ball billiards. On the ninety-third count the balls were frozen and he had them respotted, getting them in the corner again on three pretty shots. At 100 Cure caused a titter to run among the spectators by pouring out a bumper of water and drinking it as if to the success of his opponent.

Two innings later Slosson gathered a run of 73, which was of the same style as his higher count, which placed him within his last 100. His run of 27 previous to this had been terminated by Referee McLaughlin's failure to see a delicate carrom, the balls meeting at the rail. Slosson accepted the decision with a shake of his head, although there was a murmur of protest from the spectators.

The seeming carelessness of the French expert was costing him dearly at this stage of the contest. He appeared to play too quickly, while Slosson displayed great care and calculation. At the end of the twenty-second inning Slosson was 112 points in advance of Cure, the score being 440 to 328.

The French player stopped completely as Slosson began to make his caroms rapidly. He made one palpable scratch, which caused Slosson to laugh and drop his cue with mock amazement. But Slosson was actually in perfect stroke, and felt it, for he skillfully held the ivories and ran out his string with 60, unfinished, by keeping the balls rolling before him, and which prevented Cure from getting a good leave when he missed. The Summary.

Slosson—2 14 21 14 5 0 4 9 20 41 27 26 3 3 1 1 107 27 73 7 0 35 60. Total, 500 points. Average, 21 17-23. High runs, 107, 73, and 60.

Cure—4 58 36 12 17 8 22 1 5 8 2 3 2 65 15 3 15 4 20 11 4 13 23. Total, 351 points. Average, 15 6-23. High runs, 65, 58, and 36.

Referee—Edward McLaughlin.

George Sutton, who began thirty years ago as a pool player in Elmira, N. Y., won the first of the matinée games with points to spare. Sutton had as his opponent Albert G. Cutler, the former Boston amateur, and counted his string of 500 points at the eighteen-inch balk-line game, two counts in balk, while the aspirant for professional honors was filling out his string with 220 points. Sutton ended his innings at the table on his twenty-fifth turn, which gave him an even average of 20. But the best portion of Sutton's play was his two big runs of 116 and 109. In both of these his nursing was delicate and so sure as to arouse the enthusiasm of the fair-sized crowd gathered about the table.

At the beginning of the match Cutler led off with 3 from the lay-off after winning the bank. He followed with 40, during which he overcame a bad line-up with a cleverly executed massé resulting from an unfortunate kiss. He terminated this run by missing a straight three-cushion carrom. Sutton fairly pounded the spheres around the table in a fruitless effort to amass carroms during the first few innings. A small cluster of 11 put Cutler in the lead, at 54 to 11, for his half of the sixth inning. Then Sutton took his turn, and in 4 carroms brought the balls together in close position. Carroms fairly rippled from his cue. Rapidly he counted along, and at 65 had the ivories rolling under perfect control on the end rail. At 83 he began the first exhibition of the true nurse that has been played so far in the tournament. The balls indicated the warm temperature of the room, as they responded to his cue under the most gentle strokes, and he held the nurse until they separated at 108. Sutton negotiated the next carrom by a cushion shot, but an over-fine two-cushion brought the run to an end at 109.

This placed Sutton ahead with a commanding lead. Cutler continued to play for position, getting in a run of 50 on his eighth turn at the table, and two innings later he followed with 61, that again temporarily put him in front. Both of these runs were made by the cleverest sort of all-around billiards. The fourth count of the latter run was a kiss shot that was daring because of a perplexing lining of the balls, but Cutler played it perfectly.

With Cutler's string showing 169 and his opponent's 140, Sutton took his place at the table, and by a combination of cushion carroms brought the balls together. He experienced several problems in the way of line-ups, but by using the massé he overcame them up to his thirtieth count. This placed him just 1 point ahead of Cutler, and the crowd of spectators settled back in anticipation of a long and close competition. But the cluster of 61 was the last of the Bostonian's good cue attainments. Sutton played for position right along, and obtained it in the sixteenth inning, in which he counted 55 at the short-table nurse before the balls broke badly for him. Two innings after this he again used his cue so skillfully as to get the rail nurse, and after counting 70 at the cushion worked the spheres to the unlimited centre panel, where he cued his ball to the object balls until he had sent the count up to 116. On the next count the balls had worked over to the side line, and he missed on a single-cushion angle shot. From this inning to the end Sutton never failed to count every time he went to the table, finishing with a run of 3 in his twenty-fifth inning.

Jacob Schaefer will make his first appearance in the tournament this afternoon against Morningstar. William F. Hoppe will also make his début in the evening against Cutler. The summary:

Sutton—0 5 0 0 8 109 5 1 0 14 30 0 17 33 0 55 1 116 5 1 51 1 4 43 3. Total—500 points; average, 20; high runs, 116, 109, and 55.

EASY GAME FOR NEW YORK.

Beats Providence, Eastern League Champions, by 11 to 0.

The Eastern League champions from Providence, under the leadership of "Jack" Dunn, the former utility player of the New York National League team, fared badly at the hands of the world's champions at the Polo Grounds yesterday, being beaten by a score of 11 to 0. Dunn's men were lamentably weak with the bat, the best that they could do being a two-base hit in the sixth inning and a single in the ninth. On the other hand, the New Yorks found no difficulty in gauging the delivery of Maddox and McKinney, fourteen hits, including three doubles, being the total of the champion's efforts.

It was far from being an ideal day for the display of good baseball, a stoppage of play being required in the fifth inning on account of rain, and more was falling at the finish. Still the ground was in admirable condition until the first appearance of the rain, then it became slippery, and fielding was rendered difficult.

In all, fourteen men were used by the New Yorks, Ames, McGinnity, and Taylor each pitching three innings. In the sixth inning the infield was considerably changed. Manager McGraw taking Gilbert's place at second, Strang playing shortstop, while Marshall relieved Bresnahan. These changes did not affect the work of the team, for the play was just as accurate, not a solitary mistake occurring throughout the contest. A change in the batting order of the Giants, by placing Bresnahan in the lead, led to no ill results, excepting that the premier catcher failed to make a hit in three times at the bat.

In fielding, George Browne and Capt. McGann of the champions were especially conspicuous, the work of the first baseman being of a perfect description. Browne's catch and throw to third base in the sixth inning, completing a double play, was one of the leading features of the game. Of the Providence team Dunn and Pollard carried off the honors, the latter making several difficult catches at left field. The score:

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 10.—Princeton was defeated to-day by the Boston Nationals, 3 to 0. The game was played through a series of intermittent showers which handicapped the teams. The contest was the first real try-out for the Tigers, and they acquitted themselves well. Doyle pitched the nine innings, and not until the sixth could Boston solve his delivery. "Young Cy" Young was in the box for Boston during the first four innings, and was succeeded by Lindaman. Both proved to be puzzles to the Tigers. Score by innings:

LYNCHBURG, Va., April 10.—The Greater New Yorks, principally the substitutes of the team, with Orth and McGuire in the points, defeated the local State League team in an interesting game this afternoon by the score of 8 to 2. Four of the runs of the visitors were due to bad throws to the bases, the home team being without previous practice, having just reported. Lynchburg is Pitcher Orth's home, and he received quite an ovation, especially when he hit for a home run in the seventh inning. Score by innings:

NEW FAST SMALL SCHOONERS.

Little Fellows After Honors Long Held by Bigger Boats.

The entry of the two new schooners building for H. A. Morss and W. S. Eaton in the schooner race from New London to Marblehead against the Corona, Elmina, and Invader, introduces two new factors in the big feature races for the season that have been rather overlooked by yachting men who have been figuring on the King's Cup and other races, to say nothing of the new Callanan schooner Eclipse, which her owner announces will be a candidate for honors in every contest for which she is eligible. The new Morss boat is not big enough to be a factor in the King's Cup race, which is limited to boats of sixty feet water line, but the Eaton boat is. It is understood that her owner built her with the King's Cup partially in mind, believing the Agatha not fast enough to make any sort of a fight.

The new Eaton schooner is called the Taorima, and is from designs by Fred D. Lawley. She will be 95 feet over all, 65 feet on the water line, 18 feet 10 inches beam, and will draw 11 feet 2 inches. She is said to be laid on lines that promise exceptional speed. The Agatha is for sale.

The Morss boat is from designs by Clinton H. Crane. She is called the Dervish, and is 80 feet over all, 55 feet on the water line, 16 feet beam, and 10 feet 8 inches draught. She is building at Jacobs's yard, and is well thought of by Mr. Jacobs. Mr. Morss has refused an offer from Richard Mansfield for his sloop Cossack.

Another new schooner of about the same class is building at Lawley's. She is for Alfred Douglass, and is called the Shiyessa. She is 74 feet 6 inches over all, measures 50 feet on the water line, has 16 feet beam, and draws 9 feet 9 inches. These three boats will be the centre of racing interest in Eastern waters this year, dividing honors with the Sonder klasse.

Vanderbilts at Philadelphia Show.

The Philadelphia Horse Show, which will be held May 28 to June 3 inclusive at St. Martin's Green, Wissahickon Heights, will attract many entries from New York exhibitors. Alfred and Reginald Vanderbilt have notified the Horse Show officials that they will make several entries this year. J. Hobart Moore and Judge William H. Moore, both of whom were among last year's biggest winners, will again be on hand to dispute the awards. Miss Bera Morris will show some new stock in addition to her prize winners of last year, and J. Campbell Thompson will be well represented. There will be upwards of 100 classes, and the aggregate value of the prize money will amount to more than $10,000. In addition there will be more than $3,000 in plate for the ribbon prize winners.

AUTO RACE CHANGES HAILED WITH APPROVAL

TO BE RUN UNDER SAME RULES

Effect of the Foreign Event Upon Vanderbilt Cup Contest—No Action Against Hemery.

The action of the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association in extending the time for the closing of entries for the Vanderbilt Cup race to July 1 this year, when May 15 was the limit last season, has been received with favor both by American and foreign manufacturers. To home manufacturers it will afford the opportunity of testing such cars as are finished sufficiently early, so as to form some idea of their probable speed qualities. To the foreigners, and especially to the French automobilists, the time is peculiarly favorable, as it will enable them to wait until the close of the Grand Prix race before making entries.

The Automobile Club of France will be guided by the results of this event in selecting the team to come to America to defend the Vanderbilt trophy. In fact, it is generally believed that William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., during his recent visit abroad, practically agreed to this mutual understanding with the French club. If the leading five cars are selected, and all compete in this country, it will mean that the best French speed machines will be seen in the road race here, and this alone will add interest to the contest.

Notwithstanding Hemery's peculiar actions at Ormond, which led to his suspension from racing there, he is likely to be seen in the next Vanderbilt Cup race. Hemery won the cup last year with his Darracq car, and he has been named as the driver of one of the three Darracqs that have lately been entered for the Grand Prix. The American Automobile Association believed that Hemery had been punished sufficiently, and therefore declined to bring the suspension officially to the notice of the French club.

The Grand Prix, which will be the big European speed contest this year, will be run June 26 and 27 over the Sarthe course, about 100 miles southwest of Paris. The rules that have been adopted for this event have been sent to the Automobile Club of America, and they will be used as the basis upon which the revision of the American Automobile Association racing rules will be made by the special committee appointed last Monday. In all important particulars the Grand Prix rules will be the rules under which the coming Vanderbilt Cup race will be run. This fact adds another element of interest in the event for American automobilists.

Entries for this big French event close with the Automobile Club of France on April 30, and the entry fee per car is $1,000. Only nine French cars have thus far been entered, but several others are being tried out for the event. No information has yet been given whether America will have an entry or not. One or two manufacturers have discussed the probability of entering, but the general indication seems to be that America will concentrate her automobile efforts this year entirely upon the Vanderbilt Cup race.

Of the French cars already entered are three Darracqs, to be driven by Hemery, Wagner, and Hanriot; three Panhards, to be driven by Heath, Teste, and Tart, and three Brasier cars, to be driven by Baras, Lebrun, and Barillier. The presence of George Heath is welcome news to Americans, because that insures his probable appearance here for the third time in the Vanderbilt Cup race. He was runner-up last year and won the cup the preceding year.

The Grand Prix course is about 375 miles in length, and this will be covered once on each of the two days, making the entire distance 750 miles. As each car finishes the first day's run it will be placed in care of an official who will guard it during the night. No work upon the car of any kind will be allowed during this interval, for all repairs must be made during the time that the race is in progress. Any car that does not finish the first day's run within four hours after the finish of the first car will be disqualified. The drivers may be changed on the second day if desired. Only two supply stations will be allotted to each competing firm on the circuit, and all necessary supplies for making repairs as well as gasoline and oil must be kept at these places and cannot be furnished from any other point on the course.

The revised racing rules of the American Automobile Association will probably be ready to present to the Racing Board next week, as Chairman Thompson has decided to call a meeting of his board early in the week.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

Secretary S. S. Gorham of the American Automobile Association will leave for Chicago to-morrow, and before returning to New York he will meet President John Farson, and discuss several items of importance in American Automobile Association matters, some of which will come up for action at the next meeting of the Board of Directors.

Sanctions have been granted by the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association for an automobile track meet near Boston on May 30, to be conducted by the Bay State Automobile Club; for the Atlantic City races on April 25, 26, and 27; for the hill-climbing contest at Wilkesbarre, Penn., on May 10, and for a track meet at Houston, Texas, to-day.

The Postmaster of Detroit has secured permission from Washington officials to install automobiles for the collection of mails. A contract has been entered into whereby Oldsmobiles will be used.

The Electric Vehicle Company has just doubled the size of its gasoline motor testing department at the Hartford factory. This course was rendered necessary by the increased business. The new testing plant will work six motors at once.

Mrs. Joan Newton Cuneo will drive her White steam car and a Maxwell speedster in the Atlantic City races this month. Other entries are C. J. Swain of Philadelphia, (40 horse power Winton;) J. S. Bunting, (30 horse power S. & M. Simplex,) and John N. Wilkins, Jr., Philadelphia, (40 horse power Winton.)

The fine weather of the past week did much to show autoists that the touring season is here. The consequence was that in many of the salesrooms along Broadway the biggest business of the year was transacted. The four-cylinder Oldsmobile touring car was one of the big sellers. One of the best demonstrations was that of K. C. Darling in an Oldsmobile on the well-known "Duffy's Hill." As a rule most automobiles take this hill on the rush, but Darling made a mistake and came through one of the side streets right on the grade. He sent the Olds up on the high speed, to the satisfaction of his passengers.

Luxury in vehicle furnishing is exemplified in the latest models of electric town carriages for private service, such as broughams, landaulets, and hansoms. The interior of the latest electric brougham is lined with a heavy dark-green broadcloth, and the furnishings are of the very highest grade, including dome, electric light, cardcase, memorandum pad, mirror, toilet set, umbrella holder, speaking tube, and electric bell, connecting with the driver's seat, and electric cigar lighter. Electric foot warmers for Winter and electric fans for Summer have been installed in a number of vehicles.

Lakewood's Horse Show and Races.

Notable on the list of this month's sports are the race meeting and horse show to be held by the Country Club of Lakewood. The races will be decided on April 27 and the horse show will be on the following day. An attractive card of these events on the flat and two steeplechases have been arranged for the race meeting, while the horse show will have varied competitions for harness horses, tandems, ponies, saddle horses, and jumpers. The entries for the races close on April 14 and for the horse show April 18.

Although the club has held an annual horse show for the past four years, it will be the initial effort to give a race meeting. The Lakewood Country Club grounds are well adapted for cross-country racing, the land being almost flat and open. The course will be a flagstone, and a steeplechase over it can be seen from start to finish.

CHASE AFTER BURGLARS THROUGH HARLEM STREET

Thieves Shot at Pursuing Crowd and Escaped.

DUEL ON A HOUSE ROOF

Persons living in houses in the rear of 607 West 146th Street, where George H. Sampson and family live, saw four men emerge from the skylight of the house at 603 West 146th Street about 7 o'clock last evening. Walking over to No. 607 the four men jumped down to the roof of Sampson's house and pried open the scuttle.

Three of them let themselves down into the house, while the fourth stood guard. The neighbors who saw the proceedings called up Police Headquarters and told about it. At the same time a boy ran down the street to Policeman Hutchinson of the West 152d Street Station and told him. He went to Sampson's house and started up to the roof. Pushing his way through the scuttle he encountered the guard.

"Come on with me," he demanded.

"I guess not," replied the thief, and he started to run. Hutchinson drew his revolver and shot at the fleeing man. The latter turned and fired back. Then Hutchinson chased him to the house at No. 615, where there is a drop of thirty feet to the next roof. The robber hesitated a moment, but, seeing Hutchinson coming, he jumped. Hutchinson fired again as he did so, and this time the fugitive let out a yell. After landing on the roof below he went down the fire escape, out of the back yard, ran for the New York Central Railroad tracks at the river, and disappeared.

Meantime the three men in the house heard the shooting and ran down stairs to the front door of the Sampson house.

A crowd of men and boys was on the pavement, awaiting them when they ran out.

"Hold 'em! Catch 'em!" cried several. But the men drew revolvers.

"Stand back or we'll kill you," they cried. The crowd pressed in and the trio began to run toward the river. As they started they fired several shots, but the crowd chased them to the railroad tracks, where they were also lost in the darkness.

By this time the reserves of the West 152d Street Station were out, but when they arrived the burglars had escaped.

Upon investigation it was found that the robbers had stolen jewelry and diamonds worth about $1,200, including eight diamond rings, one ruby ring, one gold watch, and about $75 in money. A diamond-studded fan belonging to Mrs. Emma Sampson was found in the street. The police hunted until late last night for the thieves, but believe that they escaped out of town on a freight train.

HORSES GALLOP IN THE MUD.

Racers on Long Island Tracks Took Regular Work in Soft Going.

Mud on all the Long Island training tracks hampered the work of race horses yesterday and prevented fast trials that had been intended for those engaged in the early stakes of the Eastern racing season. At Sheepshead Bay the regular course was perhaps a trifle better than the training track, but the majority of the horses that were worked went out on the smaller course, following the custom of the trainers since the regular track was redressed. Of the Keene Stable, trained by James Rowe, the stars of the day were Sysonby, champion of last season; Delhi and Wild Mint, Sysonby of the lot taking a breezing gallop of six furlongs, and going in gallant style in spite of the mud, which is supposed to be specially to his dislike. The other horses of the Keene Stable went through about the same style of exercise in several big sets. The Haggin and Paget horses, A. J. Joyner, trainer, included among those that worked, Hamburg Belle, Cairngorm, and Tradition for Mr. Haggin, and Blandy, Don Diego, and Woolwich for Mr. Belmont. The Brown horses had the first real work since their arrival in the East from Kentucky, Trainer Robert Tucker sending about all his old horses out for exercise on the training course with Jockey Jack Martin, who again will ride for the stable, mounted on the colt Glenecho.

King Henry of the Brown Stable attracted unusual attention because of the reports made concerning his progress in Kentucky and the injury he is supposed to have suffered when knocked down on the Lexington race track by a runaway two-year-old. King Henry showed absolutely no effects from the accident, and was always on the heel of Accountant in the morning gallop. Of the horses that worked on the regular track the most prominent were those trained by J. J. Hyland and Charles Littlefield.

At Gravesend the track was too deep and soft for anything but routine work, but all the stables were out.

BIG OFFER FOR RADTKE TO RIDE IN THE EAST

Trainer May Will Give $21,000 for Jockey's Contract.

AGREEMENT MAY BE REACHED

Price Is Largest Ever Offered for the Service of a Jockey—Bid for Smart Colt.

Negotiations for the purchase of the contract of the most successful of the new light-weight riders in the West and South, Herman Radtke, have been resumed, and a hurried trip, on which Trainer J. W. ("Bub") May started Monday night from Sheepshead Bay to Memphis, is expected to result in the transfer of the boy's place of activity from the West to New York.

Mr. May, who saw much of Radtke through the Winter months, and who is a firm believer in the superiority of the boy as a rider, had opened negotiations with J. O. Keene, to whom Radtke is apprenticed, before he left Memphis for New York. Radtke's failure at Washington in the one day that he rode there had no effect in weakening Mr. May's confidence, but the experience seems to have had some effect in bringing Messrs. May and Keene to an understanding, and a renewal of the offer for Radtke's contract has brought a new figure in Trainer Keene's estimate of Radtke's worth.

In the Winter months Trainer Keene was said to have fixed a value of $25,000 for Radtke's contract, but, according to statements made at Sheepshead Bay, a compromise has been all but reached between Trainers May and Keene, May having offered $21,000 for the unconditional purchase of Radtke's contract, while Trainer Keene held out for $22,000 for the boy. That an agreement will be made between the two horsemen, trainers at Sheepshead Bay are confident; and it is believed that when Mr. May returns from Memphis he will have succeeded in getting possession of Radtke, believed to be the most promising young rider that has been developed in a number of years.

The price offered by Trainer May for the boy is the largest that any jockey's contract ever has brought, and the transfer of Radtke in every way is far from the ordinary. Mr. May is said to be acting for himself in the matter, but as he has only a moderate stable of his own, it is believed that he is really acting for Paul Rainey, a comparative new-comer on the turf, whose horses Trainer May handled last season. The most noted animal of the Rainey stable, which races as the Tippah Farm, was the colt Yankee Consul, one of the stars among last season's two-year-olds. In addition to having trained Yankee Consul, Mr. May has earned fame as the developer of Highball, the star two-year-old of several seasons ago.

In connection with his trip to Memphis after Radtke, Trainer May also is a bidder for the smart two-year-old colt Horace E., owned by Barney Schrieber, and reputed to be the best two-year-old that raced on the Pacific Coast during the Winter. Horace E., chestnut colt by Bannockburn-Miss Lynah, was returned a winner in several of the most important races for young horses at San Francisco, and his owner then refused to put a price on him. Trainer May has been in correspondence with Schrieber within the last few days, and is said to have induced him to put a price on the colt, the figure named being $17,500. Trainer May has agreed to pay that sum, supposedly for Mr. Rainey, the deal being subject only to an inspection of Horace E. by a veterinary surgeon, whose approval of the colt as sound will close the trade.

VON BERNUTH CANNOT ROW.

Intercollegiate Association Rules Against Columbia on 4-Year Law.

The Intercollegiate Rowing Association has declared that R. L. Von Bernuth, the veteran Columbia oarsman, recently elected Captain to succeed H. B. Post, is ineligible to row in the Intercollegiate Regatta at Poughkeepsie in June for the reason that he has already participated in college athletics for four years. The action is consonant with the rules of the association, but at variance with the Columbia eligibility rules. These, as laid down by the Columbia Faculty Committee on Student Organizations, exclude an athlete after four years' participation in any one sport, but permit him to continue in any other branch of athletics if he so desires.

"Pop" Von Bernuth has captained the Columbia crews for two years and proved a valuable man at No. 7. His loss will leave only two veterans in the boat.

GAME COCK LED BY A NOSE.

Well Ridden by Mr. Evans, Defeated Oleroso in Benning Steeplechase.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—A fair day, both as to weather and sport, as characteristic of to-day's racing at Benning. Two features were offered, the Southern Steeplechase, a pink coat handicap for hunters, and the Amateur Cup, a highweight selling race for three-year-olds and upward. The former was the notable attraction, and proved to be the best running of the race ever witnessed.

Game Cock, with L. Evans up, was the favorite, and Oleroso, with Mr. Smith in the saddle, was a strong second choice. These two led the way, taking the last hedge nearly together. Oleroso then drew away from Game Cock, and until the last hundred yards he seemed almost certain to win, but, with a fine ride, Mr. Evans managed to get the decision for the favorite by a nose.

Castor was made a lukewarm favorite for the Amateur Cup, and, until the horses turned into the stretch, he looked like a winner, but there he was overhauled by Paeon. The weight told on the latter, however, and Paprika, coming fast, barely passed the tiring leader as they swept past the judges. The favorite was third.

Phoebus found a soft spot in the sixth race, and in a stirring drive at the finish, won it from the favorite, Grand Duchess. The first was a romp for The Clown, although Waddell II., as good as 100 to 1, gave the favorite an argument in the stretch and beat Loricate for the place. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—For three-year-olds and upward; six and a half furlongs, Columbia course. The Clown, 94 pounds, (Miller,) 7 to 10, and 2 to 7, won; Waddell II., 108, (Christian,) 100 to 1 and 30 to 1, second; Loricate, 115, (Helgersen,) 60 to 1, third. Time—1:25. Blue Coat, Belsnicker, and Warning also ran.

SECOND RACE.—For maiden two-year-olds; half a mile, old course. Woodline, 104, (Treubel,) 6 to 1 and 2½ to 1, won; Windfall, 104, (Robbins,) 20 to 1 and 8 to 1, second; Wabash Queen, 104, (Noone,) 20 to 1, third. Time —0:52. Fond du Lac, Lady Vincent, L'Orpheline, Cora Price, Merry Lassie, Eminola, Alegra, Workmaid, Mode, and Belle of Oakley also ran.

THIRD RACE.—For maiden two-year-olds; four and a half furlongs, old course. The Wrestler, 107 pounds, (Robbins,) 9 to 5 and 3 to 5, won; Tileing, 107, (C. Morris,) 8 to 5 and 3 to 5, second; Encore, 107, (Knapp,) 6 to 1, third. Time—0:59. Lord Pike, Tudor, Black Knight, and Mt. O'Donnel also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—Fourth running of the Southern Steeplechase, a pink-coat handicap for hunters qualified under the rules of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association and owned by recognized members of hunts in Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and the District of Columbia; about two miles and a half over the full course. Game Cock, 168 pounds, (Mr. L. Evans,) 7 to 10 and out, won; Oleroso, 135, (Mr. Smith,) 9 to 5 and 2 to 5, second; Ironheart, 142, (Mr. Devereaux,) 12 to 1, third. Time—5:36. My Grace, (Mr. Parrott,) fell.

FIFTH RACE.—Fifth running of the Amateur Cup, a high-weight selling race for three-year-olds and upward; six furlongs, Columbia course. Paprika, 133 pounds, (Mr. Tucker,) 6 to 1 and 2 to 1, won; Paeon, 136, (Mr. Nichols,) 2½ to 1 and even, second; Castor, 150, (Mr. Dion Kerr,) 9 to 5, third. Time—1:21 2-5. Monadnock, Thomond, Trapezist, and Sir Brinkley also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Selling, for three-year-olds and upward; one mile and a hundred yards, old course. Phoebus, 106, (Robbins,) 20 to 1 and 6 to 1, won; Grand Duchess, 101, (T. Burns,) 2 to 1 and 7 to 10, second; Setauket, 110, (Miller,) 11 to 5, third. Time—1:54 3-5. Proceeds, Zany, Watercourse, and Henry Waring also ran.

Benning Entries for To-day.

Although the card for the Washington Jockey Club's races at Benning to-day contains no stake features, the quality of the entries in the six races should insure some interesting sport. The entries follow:

Miss Sutton May Not Play Abroad.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 10.—There is much speculation as to whether or not Miss May Sutton, the tennis champion, will defend her title in England in June, when the great international championship tournament will be held. At present it would appear that Miss Sutton will be compelled to allow her title to lapse by default unless some arrangements are made whereby she can go to England without bearing the entire expense of the trip herself.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

DRY SOLE COMPANY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the Dry Sole Company of 99 Warren Street show liabilities $2,654 and assets $1,976, consisting of stock, $150; office fixtures, $150; accounts, $317, and check, $9. The largest creditor is the Ben. B. Hampton Company, $1,605, for advertising.

SIGMUND EINSTOSS.—Deputy Sheriff Murray has received an attachment for $1,926 from Kings County against Sigmund Einstoss, dealer in smoked fish on Prospect Street, Brooklyn, in favor of Frederick C. Reynolds, and served it on a bank in this city, where Mr. Einstoss had a balance of $10. He has been in business about two years.

ADOLPH HEYMAN.—Adolph Heyman, furrier, residing at 8 West 114th Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $17,070, contracted prior to July, 1901, and no assets. Among the creditors are J. J. Justice & Co., $2,000; A. M. Eisenberg, $1,500; Leopold Haas, $1,500; L. Rabinowits, $1,000, and A. Kornbluth & Brother, $1,200. He stated that on July 10, 1901, a meeting of creditors was held, and all agreed to accept 20 cents on the dollar. Afterwards a creditor, who was in Europe at the time, but who had a representative at the meeting, sued on his claim, and had the Sheriff seize all the assets on September, 1901.

FREDERICK S. ANDREWS.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed Holmes V. M. Dennis, Jr., receiver in bankruptcy of the assets of Frederick S. Andrews, who kept the Gilsey House, at Broadway and Twenty-ninth Street, during the month of October, 1905, and fixed his bond at $2,000. It was stated that when he sold the lease of the hotel to Henry S. Duncan he received eighteen notes of $500 each, payable monthly. Some of them are in possession of Frederick S. Fishel, his attorney, and it was necessary to have a receiver appointed to take charge of them.

Out of Town.

CHICAGO.—A receiver was appointed yesterday for the business of James J. Farrelly, a stock yards commission man. His liabilities are placed at $60,000 and the assets at $40,000.

I sell my cigars under the most favorable conditions possible—the benefit is yours.

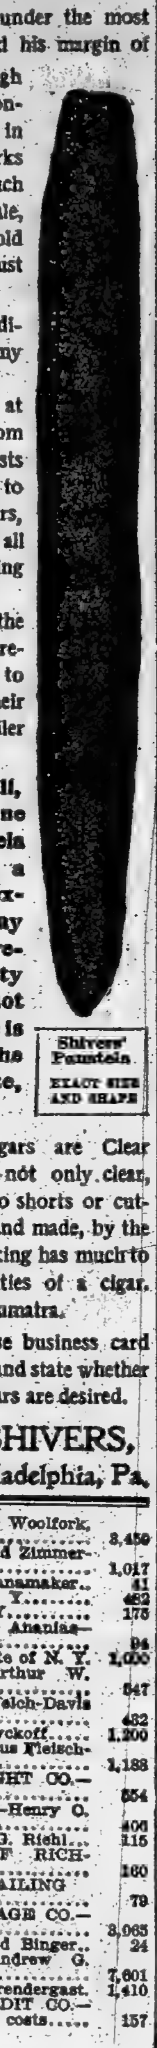
The retailer sells cigars under the most unfavorable conditions, and his margin of profit has to be wide enough to protect him under those conditions. He sells his cigars in small quantities, and his clerks must spend about so much time in making each sale, whether to a new or an old customer. Upon that plan must his prices be based.

Compare with the conditions under which I sell my cigars.

I sell always in lots of at least one hundred, and from that up to thousands. It costs me a little for advertising to sell a man his first lot of cigars, but it costs me nothing at all to sell him on succeeding orders.

You can readily see the saving of my way over the retailer's. This saving goes to my customers—they get their cigars for half what a retailer would need to charge.

MY OFFER IS: I will, upon request, send one hundred Shivers' Panatela Cigars on approval to a reader of The Times, express prepaid. He may smoke ten cigars and return the remaining ninety at my expense if he is not pleased with them; if he is pleased, and keeps them, he agrees to remit the price, $5.00, within ten days.



Shivers' Panatela
EXACT SIZE AND SHAPE

The fillers of these cigars are Clear Havana of good quality—not only clear, but long, clean Havana—no shorts or cuttings are used. They are hand made, by the best of workmen. The making has much to do with the smoking qualities of a cigar. The wrappers are genuine Sumatra.

In ordering please enclose business card or give personal references, and state whether mild, medium or strong cigars are desired.

Buy Easter Clothes At Brills'.

$35 Prince Alberts, with Waistcoats, $21.25

Coat has hand-turned edges and is lined with Mervellieux silk and faced with Grosgrain silk.

Turning edges by hand so that no stitching shows is an achievement only master tailors can accomplish. It follows that experts able to tailor such an edge must tailor the rest of the coat with equal skill.

These coats and waistcoats are as fine as any ever shown ready for service, or tailored by a to-order tailor.

$6.00 English Worsted Trousers, $3.75.

Patterns shown now for the first time. Journeyman tailored to rival the to-order tailor's best efforts. In fact these are the only ready-to-wear trousers that retain their shape and conform to every move of the body. Sizes for all from 29-inch waist to 52-inch waist. Easter extra.............. $3.75

YOU MAY HAVE A FINE looking and expensive stable, but if you have not proper drainage you make a great mistake. A well-known fact among scientific men is that brick, cement, and asphalt are porous, therefore unsanitary. Logan's Stall is the only perfect one in the world and is everlasting. It means health and economy, guaranteed to pay for itself in one year, can be adapted to new and old stables. When purchasing see that the name M. Logan is on each drain pan, for your own protection. No. 1,642 Broadway, N. Y.

THE CASH VALUE OF SERGE WITTE.

The terms which Russia offers to the financiers of the world to induce them to lend her money are little short of humiliating. In order to pay her short bonds and to meet the immediate demands on the Treasury Russia seeks to borrow somewhat less than $400,000,000, promising payment of $460,000,000 at 5 per cent. interest, and of this amount she has to depend, with what confidence one cannot say, on her own bankers taking $150,000,000, while her faithful but reluctant ally, France, is relied on to subscribe $250,000,000. The great markets of London and Frankfort subscribe to but $20,000,000 each, and Berlin, through the influence of the Kaiser, who has watched with keen and not unselfish gaze the external and internal troubles of his imperial brother, declines to subscribe at all. Practically the Government of the Czar is "shinning" for current expenses and compelled to tempt lenders with a rate of interest little less than 7 per cent. Even if it were certain that the money could be had, it would not be a flattering situation for a ruler lately so powerful and so conscious of power and prestige.

But it is not certain that the money will be got, or, if it be got, that the underwriters can dispose of their takings unless the policy of the Government be promptly and definitely determined. Broadly speaking, it may be said that the immediate future of the Treasury and the ultimate future of the Czar's Government depend on the retention of Count Witte at the head of the Ministry and on the realization of his plans for the introduction of representative institutions. Witte is undoubtedly the strongest man at the front in Russia. He is not by nature or conviction what Western peoples would regard as a liberal statesman, and his course has not been wholly consistent. But he has the rare faculty that learns by experience, and he is now in open and apparently unreserved sympathy with the progressive party in Russia. He is undoubtedly prepared to go as far in the direction of democratic organization as he thinks the true purpose of the Russian people requires. The recent amazing results of the elections show clearly enough what those requirements now are, and Witte accepts them. He is at sword's points with the narrow and inept reactionaries, and the latest report is that he has definitely given the Czar the choice between him and them. To begin with, he is worth at least $400,000,000, and, indirectly, as much more as the price the Czar puts on his crown, and the head under it.

MONEY MARKET FACTS.

The stringency in the money market accompanies another amazing addition to the supply of cash. On April 1 for the first time the country's general stock of money exceeded three billions, and the Treasury's gross gold reached the unprecedented total of $825,000,000. But so much of this "money" as is issued by National banks—$554,606,967—is not available for bank reserves, and excludes from circulation just so much real money that might be a basis of credit. Most of the gold is in circulation, but so far as it is held in the Treasury it also bears no relation to the supply and demand of currency. The redemption fund, for instance, if held and used by the banks upon banking principles, would support a larger volume of money than the $346,681,016 of greenbacks, and the bank currency would be better currency.

It must be admitted that no banker has suggested any system of money so elastic that it would expand between forenoon and afternoon, so as to meet the range in the New York money market between 6 and 30 per cent. But a moderate degree of true elasticity would obviate a 30 per cent. demand by providing a steady supply below 6 per cent. We remark that some critics, in and out of town, are attributing the flurry to Wall Street's greed. As matter of fact, New York's bank clearings lag behind the rest of the country's, precisely because of the moderate and declining speculation. In March New York's clearings increased by less than 1 per cent., against 19 per cent. increase for the rest of the country. Instead of Stock Exchange transactions increasing as the year progresses, each successive month has shown a decreasing volume, and prices are on a lower range than at New Year's. The theory that stock speculation is absorbing funds needed by trade is antagonized by the fact that New York is paying to the Sub-Treasury and sending to the interior actual reserve money. This indicates where the surplus has gone, and meanwhile banks which are depleting their credit resources to meet these demands are lending out deposits by country depositors. Last week the First National Bank lost $4,812,000 cash, and the National City Bank $3,307,500, yet the names of institutions of their class are associated rather with moderate demands upon borrowers than with excessive. Their names are mentioned because it accords with good banking traditions that a reserve is designed for use in cases of necessity. Good bankers do not lose their heads—or their money—either in "booms" or "slumps," and caution is more becoming in times of fever than of stress.

These are the bare bones of the situation with which all theories must square. Equal authority might be cited in support of the theory that there is a deficiency of credit, or that credit has been overextended and that liquidation is the only remedy. Ordinarily speculative security liquidation is forced when there is a check to mercantile liquidation. When traders are unable to sell their stocks they provide ready funds by sales of securities. That conspicuously is not the present situation. Stock market liquidation is robbed of half its terrors when it reflects merely stock market conditions rather than conditions throughout the country. If everybody outside Wall Street can go on making profits, the losses in Wall Street lose their baleful significance. Appearances are deceitful unless merchants are borrowing at 6 per cent. to make larger profits. Instead of Wall Street starving trade, trade is being enriched at Wall Street's expense. The contrary theory is prevalent, but the fact is that activity and profits are greater outside Wall Street than in Wall Street.

REOPENING MANCHURIA.

The consent gained by Secretary Hay from China to the opening of two new treaty ports in Manchuria was probably not expected by him to yield any immediate commercial results. Perhaps the chief advantage expected from it was that it enabled foreign Governments more effectually to challenge the Russian occupation of Manchuria, and to insist upon the fulfillment of the Russian pledges of evacuation. The treaty opening Antung and Mukden to foreign trade was not proclaimed by the President until January, 1904, when war between Russia and Japan was plainly imminent. American Consuls were designated to proceed to those ports, and left home for that purpose. But the next month the war broke out, both ports were within the theatre of hostilities, and the maintenance of Consuls at them became at once difficult and useless.

The reopening of the ports now is gratifying as showing the extent to which the pacification of Manchuria has proceeded, or rather the necessity for military administration. It is also gratifying, though not at all surprising, as a practical application of what the official statement of the Japanese Embassy at Washington describes as "the principles of open door and equal opportunity ever advocated by" the Japanese Government. Although, respecting the main commercial demands of Manchuria for imports, it may cost Japan little to abide by these principles, there surely should be a Manchurian market for some classes of American products. It is to be hoped and expected that our Consuls at Antung and Mukden will be diligent in finding and reporting what there are.

MORMONISM AND POLYGAMY.

It is the boast of the Mormons that "plural marriages" have been discountenanced by the Church of the Latter Day Saints ever since the issue of the "Woodruff manifesto" in 1890. The few plural marriages which have occurred since that time, they say, have taken place not only without the connivance of the Church but under its ban.

Of course this assurance has not been accepted by those Gentiles who utterly disbelieve in the good faith of the Mormons. But the evidence given of good faith by the dropping from the list of "Apostles" of two men who are said to have entered into polygamous relations since the Woodruff manifesto was issued and formally accepted is very weighty. They are the two for whom the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections has sought carefully with subpoenas, and found them not. On the contrary, they promptly absconded under such circumstances as made absconding equivalent to confession. And it is this virtual confession which the Mormon body has punished by depriving them of their office.

It is quite useless to argue that a punishment so severe as this is, not only in the ecclesiastical but in the secular department of the Mormon hierarchy, is collusive. It will convince many who have heretofore doubted that the advice of President Woodruff to his followers to obey the law of the land was given and accepted in good faith. Even without polygamy the Mormons would be a peculiar people. But with polygamy really abandoned their peculiarities are such as cannot withstand the force of the "benevolent assimilation" of the American people, an assimilation which every mile of new railroad and every new Gentile settler in Utah tend to bring nearer.

UNIVERSAL FREE TRANSFERS.

With respect to the bill for universal transfers from surface to elevated and Subway roads introduced on Monday night by Senator Quinn and advanced immediately to the third reading, The World's correspondent says:

> The fact that the bill was not opposed at the very outset gave rise to the report, which was not denied by Tammany men, that the Ryan-Belmont interests, convinced that further restriction of the transfer privilege would arouse public sentiment, had agreed to put such a system in operation. If there had not existed such an understanding the bill would have been opposed by Senators of both parties who hitherto have been conspicuous in the defense and protection of traction interests.

Mr. Quinn states that the bill has the support of the Tammany organization. If passed Tammany will undoubtedly reap great credit from a measure with which in beneficial effect the more than doubtful Elsberg bill can bear no comparison. But if it be true that its passage is acquiesced in by the Interborough interests, we see no good reason why the company should fail to recognize the public demand by a direct concession of universal free transfers. Such a frank announcement in advance would in great measure allay the hostile sentiment aroused by the merger, from which alone such benefit could be expected.

WHITHER WE ARE DRIFTING.

In an illuminating brief filed with the Senate Committee a short time ago Mr. Charles F. Beach shows clearly the relation of Government ownership to rate regulation by edict.

Mr. Beach is now lecturing upon American law in various French universities. His experience abroad is at first hands with eminent Government railway managers, many of whom he quotes verbatim over their signatures. By citations from the experience of Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Belgium, and other countries Mr. Beach draws pertinently this conclusion:

> Nothing leads so quickly and inevitably to Government ownership as to commence to prescribe railway rates. You may "regulate" the railways to almost any extent, and they will go on in private hands, but when once you interfere with the revenues of the property, when you lay violent hands on the strong box, private enterprise is paralyzed. Men will not long conduct at their own risk a business that they cannot control. If the merchant cannot fix the price of his own wares he will in no long time pull in the shingle and shut up shop. The railway cannot do that, so it will make its peace with the superior power by selling out to it. That is what the experience of railways everywhere teaches us.

The debates in the Senate begin to show the logical trend of the legislative mind from Government regulation of rates to Government ownership. Senator Newlands, for instance, the other day calmly proposed that twelve billions of bonds, more or less, be issued for existing railway capital, and the administration of all be placed with the Inter-State Commerce Commission. Mr. Beach's able researches supply a trustworthy background on which to project this latest scheme in its true perspective.

COAL STRIKE ARBITRATIONS.

The argument in the anthracite trade has now advanced so far that the operators are willing to arbitrate whether there is anything new to call for a new wage scale, or a new mode of adjusting grievances. In fact if not in form the miners have advanced something distinctly new—namely, that the prosperity of the operators justifies a resettlement of wages, in other words, that the workers have a right to a share in their employers' profits. Sliding scales are no novelty, but this demand is something different from a sliding scale, seeming more like a demand for a limited partnership.

One objection to this is that labor is a bad loser. In 1871 there was a settlement of a coal strike with a sliding scale, but labor refused to accept lower wages with a fall in the price of coal. Mere questions of price are better settled by the higgling of the market than by arbitration, but if there is to be arbitration it is a pity that both trades cannot be arbitrated together, so that there might be a check to Mr. Mitchell's scheme of playing them alternately against each other, with loss to the consumer whichever wins. Mr. Mitchell cannot object with any consistency, and the operators might also welcome an adjustment which should relieve them of troublesome competition and give them permanent peace with steadier profit. It is true that the authority of the Anthracite Commission originally was limited to that trade, but at that time there was no question of a bituminous arbitration, such as is now pending. There could be no more suitable body to settle that dispute than the Commission which gave such complete satisfaction in the rival industry. It is a rare conjunction of conditions which ends both agreements simultaneously, and the best use should be made of the fact that arbitration is at hand for both. The prospect that out of evil good may come seems excellent.

BRYAN.

Let Mr. William J. Bryan expressly recant the free-silver heresy. Let him recant the now Rooseveltian doctrine of confiscating railway profits by administrative act. Let him recant his formal declarations made within the last two years for municipal, State, and National ownership of public "utilities." Let him recant his belief in the expediency of packing the Federal Supreme Court with Justices to reverse the income tax decision.

Then one might believe the report that the New York Democratic Club is sincerely converted to Bryan as the next conservative standard bearer of the party "to stem the rising tide of Socialism."

Mr. Bryan's political activities have hitherto been shown in swelling the rising tide of Socialism. Of late he has traveled much, and, apparently, thought much. Possibly on the way to Damascus he has seen a great light. His luminous discussion of political individualism in the current Century Magazine seems to reflect it. But there is time in plenty to proclaim him the Saul of Tarsus of the Democracy.

CRITICS AND "CREATORS."

That must have been a very interesting symposium in which Mr. William A. Brady and the Rev. Thomas Dixon upheld to their own complete satisfaction the thesis "that the Criterion of a Successful Play Is Proved by the Box Office Receipts."

We do not ourselves know what this statement means, but practically it seems to mean that the dramatist and the manager can afford to ignore the critics if the box office shows satisfactory returns. Mr. Brady knows a play which had a good last act, which he declares five out of six of the critics, presumably of the morning papers, could not stay to see. The wretches, who could not wait all night, judged the play by what they were able to see of it "before going to press," and possibly consoled themselves with the Johnsonian precept, "When I find tow at one end of a rope, I don't look for silk at the other." The Rev. Mr. Dixon, proud of the production of a best seller, proudly related how he tried his book on a ten-year-old boy, apparently as the nearest available equivalent of the legendary theatrical "dog," and made the boy cry.

We should not ourselves have given the boy quite the advanced age which Mr. Dixon assigns him. But if the manager and the playwright think the critic can be ignored, the obvious question arises why they do not ignore him instead of foaming at the mouth when he is mentioned. They remind the observer of that creator who declared that when he considered how perfectly indifferent he was to the cavils of his critics he could scarcely sit still. It seems that Messrs. Brady and Dixon would do well to acquire, if possible, the wise indifference of Horace's miser,

> Criticus me sibilat at mihi plaudo
> Ipse domi simul ac nummos contemplor in arca.

"Arca," it may be necessary to explain, is Latin for box office.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Close Study of a Volcano. In sticking so long to his observatory close to the summit of Vesuvius, Prof. Matteucci gives a remarkable proof of—what? He voluntarily remains in peril probably greater than is encountered by the soldier who leads a forlorn hope, and certainly greater than that of participation in any ordinary battle. His danger, too, takes a form from which even the most courageous could be excused from shrinking, for at any moment he may be exposed to the direct action of the most powerful of terrestrial forces and the very ground under his feet may instantly crumble and drop him into a fiery abyss that is the reality of theological imaginations. Is he risking the martyrdom of science, or merely that of the scientific curiosity? In other words, is his course justified by the prospect of gaining from close inspection of the volcano new and valuable knowledge of the cataclysmic action going on within it? Nothing in the dispatches constantly telegraphed by him to Naples very clearly indicates that he is seeing anything more than is visible to those observing the eruption from a greater distance and in comparative safety, while it is certain that much visible to them is invisible to him. The picture as a whole is concealed from the man in the midst of the whirling ashes, and he has announced that his instruments for the measurement of seismic disturbances have been displaced by the constant convulsions to which they have been subjected. And yet Prof. Matteucci and his American assistant have remained coolly, or at least calmly, at their posts, and beyond any question they have utilized in some way and to some degree opportunities that never came before to scientists as well equipped as they for understanding and recording the tremendous events of a great volcanic eruption. It is from something more than idle, or even from scientific, curiosity that they are staking their lives on the outcome of successive minutes, any one of which may be their last. If they escape they will have the material for a "paper" such as has never appeared in the "transactions" of any society, and he is pessimistic indeed who does not hope that what they learn by braving the mountain's rage will prove to be worth the frightful risk involved in getting it.

Blindfold Chess and Insanity. There seems to be a general disposition on the part of the specialists in brain disease to attribute the mental collapse of Pillsbury to his practice of playing blindfold chess. The facts scarcely bear out this theory. It is true that the mental strain of "serious chess" is very great, and that many players seem to have succumbed to it. Morphy died of brain disease, and so did Zukertort, and both were great blindfold players. But Louis Paulsen, Morphy's contemporary, played more blindfold games at once than did Morphy, whom he outlived more than a generation, and he died at last, we believe, of something else than brain disease. Steinitz died of brain disease, but although Steinitz was incidentally and on a comparatively small scale a blindfold player, he was by no means distinguished or remarkable as such. But the classical instance of disproof of the theory that blindfold chess necessarily leads to insanity is Joseph Henry Blackburne, who is described in the current "Who's Who" as "British chess champion," and who, born in 1842, must have been playing blindfold chess on an extensive scale for forty years or so. He was engaged in a recent "Master's Tournament," and at the last accounts was in full possession of his mental faculties. Perhaps for the men who can play blindfold chess at all the strain is not so great as it seems to players whose brains begin to bubble at the very thought of attempting such a task. The exercise of a special talent is not to be judged by those who lack it.

Different in More Than Queues. It is amusing to note that the eminent Mr. Gompers, as an argument for excluding Japanese as well as Chinese from this country, says that if the Chinese should suddenly determine, as part of their modernization, to cut off their queues, "when it was done there would be 400,000,000 more Japanese." In other words, Mr. Gompers seems to think, or at least is willing to be thought of as thinking, that the only difference between a Chinese and a Japanese which an American Inspector of Immigrants can be expected to know is that the one wears a pigtail and the other doesn't. Well, the two races are somewhat alike to the Occidental eye untrained to discriminate between the two, but only those are likely to mistake the one for the other who have difficulty in seeing that both the Chinese and the Japanese possess as much individuality of feature as the members of other races, and that one Chinese differs as much from another Chinese, and one Japanese as much from another Japanese, as do two Englishmen, two Frenchmen, or two Germans. And then it is not quite impossible that Immigration Inspectors could learn, if not to understand the Chinese and Japanese languages, at least to hear a difference in their sounds. There are, however, other and more important dissimilarities between the two peoples, and of course Mr. Gompers, who lacks neither intelligence nor information, knows that mistakes of the kind concerning which he gives warning are not at all likely to be numerous. The Chinese probably will soon cut off the badges of servitude of which, by some mysterious twist of mind, they are so proud and to which they cling so fondly, but the ablation will not turn them into Japanese—whether fortunately or unfortunately is for the course of events to decide some years in the future. As an exclusionist of "cheap labor," Mr. Gompers finds any argument good enough and none too bad. That either Chinese or Japanese labor really is cheaper than any other is not the experience of many who have used them in this part of the country, both races seeming to have a strongly developed tendency to demand wages in full proportion to their abilities.

TO SAVE THE BOSSCHIETER GANG

A Movement Which Should Meet Prompt Condemnation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The first page of to-day's Times contains one of the most startling, one of the most shocking, items of news that has appeared in years. It is headed "To Save the Bosschieter Gang," and goes on to state that upon the plea of "poor health" application has been made to the Court of Pardons for the pardon of two of the murderers of Jennie Bosschieter.

The horrible atrocity of the Bosschieter murder in all its details would be hard to match in this country's history. A young factory girl was drugged, taken in a cab to a lonely place by these four men, where, either before or during their abuse of her, she died. They subsequently, to cover their crime, flung her body from the cab to the roadside and drove away.

These men were not negroes; nor yet were they hoodlums. Supposedly, they were well brought up—two of them had been pious members of a Sunday school class—and were rich. Three of them escaped the gallows through perjury—a fact proved at the trial of the fourth—otherwise they would ere now have paid the death penalty under New Jersey law. Had they been negroes they would probably have been lynched in the beginning.

To release any or all of these murderers now, after serving a small portion of a very light sentence, would be a public wrong and menace. M. H. C.

Would Widen Fifth Avenue Roadway.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"The Ballade of the Fifth Avenue Bus," appearing in your paper of to-day, reminds me that the attention of the authorities should be called to a most important change that could be made without much expense to the city—namely, the widening of Fifth Avenue.

Improvements recently made covering about 40 per cent. of the entire distance between Washington Square and Central Park, only occupy up to the building line, which leaves a sidewalk about thirty feet wide. If ten feet of this walk was thrown into the street on each side, enough would remain to meet the needs of the pedestrian, and at the same time would provide greater facilities for traffic. As the city owns up to the building line, it could compel the remaining 60 per cent. of property owners along the avenue to make way for the needed improvement within a given time. With a wider avenue, "islands" could be used at the crossings, which would divide traffic, furnish stands for lighting the street, and make crossing easier and safer.

Roman Relics in Vienna.

From The Pall Mall Gazette.

VIENNA, March 28.—Some interesting Roman remains, in the shape of two altars, have just been brought to light by workmen engaged in digging the foundations for a new building in the central part of the city. Twenty feet below the street level the men came upon a cylindrical cavity filled with broken bricks and stones. These were cleared out, and underneath were found two small Roman votive stones in very fair preservation. Both bore inscriptions, and one of them was perfectly legible. It runs as follows:

The inscription on the second stone was partially defaced. Local archaeologists welcome the find, particularly as regards the inscriptions, as these are not very numerous among so far recovered remains of imperial Vindobona.

Ivry Wants to be Forgotten.

From The London Globe.

PARIS, March 8.—The Mayor of Ivry, just outside the Paris fortifications, is very wroth with the Government. "Every time," he said, "that a site is wanted for an establishment for infectious diseases, or for any other community of undesirables, they think at once of Ivry." The occasion of his latest outburst of indignation is the proposal to remove the two Paris prisons of St. Lazare and La Petite Roquette to Ivry. The suggestion has aroused a good deal of hostility among the inhabitants of the latter place, and the angry Mayor says: "We shall do everything in our power to keep the prisons at a distance. All Ivry wants is to be forgotten by the Government."

Lyman's Annuity.

From The Boston Globe.

Yankeeland is conservative, even to perpetuating its traditional traits. Here is the latest example of shrewdness in Lyman Jennings of Athol, who gave the town $9,000 on condition of receiving from the town an annuity of $540. Up to date he has had $16,200, and is still hearty and with a prospect of getting considerable more.

Grammatical.

From The Saturday Evening Post.

Conjugation of the word "buss," "to kiss":
Buss—A kiss.
Rebus—To kiss again.
Pluribus—To kiss many times.
Syllabus—To kiss a homely girl.
Blunderbus—To kiss the wrong person.
Omnibus—To kiss everybody.
Erebus—To kiss in the dark.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The levees of the Mississippi River were under discussion in the House and Mr. Macon of Arkansas had the floor.

"I had a right to speak on this question," he shouted, "for I represent a constituency which is interested. The Mississippi, in its ceaseless course, rushes by Arkansas!"

"So does everybody else who gets a chance," murmured Sherman of New York, who had been reading about the Senatorial election in that State.

Senator Blackburn has a fondness for wearing clothes that can be heard for some distance. The other day he came in wearing a new suit which had apparently been made out of a handy flour sack by a fashionable tailor, and also a red tie whose glories dimmed the setting sun. Senator Bacon gave a violent start.

"What is the matter?" asked Senator Bailey.

"Oh," said Bacon, in a relieved tone, "it's all right. I thought I heard Tillman's voice, but it's only Blackburn's clothes."

It has been officially explained that the reason why Germany and Russia wanted The Hague conference held in the Summer was not from any desire to embarrass the Pan-American conference, but because in the Fall the States General of Holland will be meeting and therefore the building would not be available for the delegates. The Pan-American diplomats here seem to be impressed, but not edified, by this explanation.

"Its too bad about that," said Senhor Nabuco, the Brazilian Ambassador, "but they need not worry. We can easily solve the problem about the States General. Let us go to South America in July, then go to The Hague in October, pass around the hat among the delegates, all chip in our spare cash and hire a hall."

Washington has never had such throngs of tourists, and the Capitol guides are making fortunes. Every tourist who gets to the Capitol insists immediately on having Representative Longworth pointed out to him. The visitors take no interest in Aldrich, Spooner, Williams, or Cannon, evidently regarding those statesmen as "pikers." They cut the guide short as he is pointing Grosvenor out and ask impatiently: "But where is Alice Roosevelt's husband?"

When Longworth is not there—and he usually isn't—the tourists are indignant and look with suspicion on the guides. The latter have accordingly formed the useful habit of pointing out Ollie James, Weems, Sibley, and all other bald-headed men as Longworth. The tourists look with admiration at these bunko bridegrooms and depart in peace.

TRANSFERS.

One Point Where They Could Be Issued with Advantage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I noticed an editorial in The Times this morning entitled "The New Transfer System," and others of the same purport during the past week. Why do you not come out for a transfer at Broadway, Columbus Avenue, and Sixty-sixth Street, between the elevated and Subway roads? This is the only point between 149th Street and the Battery where the stations are together, and such a transfer would practically give the west side below Forty-second Street the benefit of immediate rapid transit. So, begin the good work and prove that The Times is "the best cent's worth in the world."

Letter Boxes in Flathouses.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Allow me to second the motion of a "Harlem Flatter," who wrote recently to The Times about the inadequate capacity of the letter boxes in flat houses. We need not only larger boxes, but also more careful postmen. Just now I went down to the vestibule in answer to the postman's ring and easily extracted a letter without unlocking the box. Any one else could have done it with equal ease. I have frequently found letters protruding from the box, and have known of letters being mailed to me which have never been received. I have cautioned the carriers, complained to the manager of the branch office, and complained to the Postmaster, and still do not feel that my mail is safe.

What the postmen say about the boxes would hardly find a place in the columns of a paper which accepts only that which is fit to print.

SECOND HARLEM FLATTER.

New York, April 9, 1906.

Weight of the Stolen Gold Bar.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A prominent article on the first page of The Sunday Times describes a bar of gold "weighing 850 ounces," which means 70 pounds and 10 ounces, as the apothecary measures his drugs, or 58 pounds and 2 ounces as the butcher chops off steak." The second statement is incorrect, for the ounce in Troy or apothecary's weight is not the same as that in avoirdupois weight, the former containing 480 grains, the latter 437.5 grains. This makes the correct weight in avoirdupois, the butcher's weight, 58 pounds and 4 4-7 ounces.

When the butcher must needs use one table of weights, the apothecary another, and the jeweler two more—since one may not weigh a diamond with the same weights as a gold bar—it is doubtless unreasonable to ask a hard-working newspaper man to keep them all straight. But one wonders if there is not reason, as well as courage, on the side of those who dare suggest that the Anglo-Saxon race, with its much-vaunted intelligence, progressive spirit, and what not, should not lag much longer behind the French and the Germans in dispensing with such absurdities.

Why They Give No Tips.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would suggest as a solution of the problem, "Why do not the clergymen and women give 'tips to waiters'?" that in most cases the salary the average clergyman receives is so small that he is obliged to deny himself the pleasure (?) of giving "tips" as well as many other luxuries.

The majority of married ladies are so dependent upon their husbands for every cent they also are obliged to economize, or the inquiry will come, "Where is the last quarter I gave you?" The young women are often receiving small salaries, and the fact that ladies are not expected, as a rule, to tip the waiters excuses them. I am sure women are not less generous in their natures than the men. READER OF THE TIMES.

When to Shoot in France.

From Le Sport of Paris.

They set out together to shoot rabbits—two Frenchmen and an Englishman. All were eager, anxious, active. Suddenly they beheld a rabbit. The Englishman elevated his gun. "No, no, do not shoot!" cried his companions. "That is Mimi. We never shoot at Mimi." The Englishman wondering, disgusted—desisted. Another rabbit. Again the gun of the Englishman was elevated, but it was not permitted of him to fire. "That is the adorable Lulu," they cried. "C'est un vrai bijou! We never shoot at Lulu." When a third rabbit appeared the Englishman was tired, but his companions cried out: "Shoot, shoot! That is Alfonse! We always shoot at Alfonse."

Quite Usual, Too.

From The Washington Star.

"I think that my speech on this question will have some effect."

"It has already had an effect," answered Senator Sorghum. "You have caused two or more questions to grow where there was but one before."

FOR A NORTH RIVER PARK.

Plans for a Made-Land Extension to Riverside Park.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to the articles in your paper regarding the Stadium for Columbia University, to be erected on land now wholly or partly under water, west of the Hudson River Railroad, between 118th and 120th Streets, I conclude that this improvement is predicated upon the City of New York either giving or selling to Columbia University these lands. This, I believe, the city will not do and cannot afford to do, as it is against its well-fixed policy not to dispose of its water front on Manhattan. It did so years ago, and is now paying dearly for the blunder.

It is not generally known, but nevertheless is a fact, that plans have been prepared, either by the city or for the city, showing a projected improvement along the Hudson River immediately west of the railroad. This improvement comprehends the construction of a sea wall 400 feet out from the railroad, the filling in of the land between, and the construction thereon of paths and roadways all along the river front from Seventy-second Street north at least to Dyckman Street, thereby giving the people of this great metropolis one of the most beautiful systems of roadways that can be conceived. It would give us Riverside Drive on the cliff, overlooking the Hudson, and another drive almost on a level with the water. This improvement is not in the immediate present, but will follow soon after the underground system is perfected, which makes such inroads into our debt limit that the authorities are constrained to postpone its river roadway improvement projected along the western shore of the Borough of Manhattan.

The lands proposed to be taken for the Stadium are a part of the long stretch of water front not long ago condemned for the city at a cost of many, many thousands of dollars. It is no doubt true that the property in question cannot readily be used for pier purposes, and especially without the construction of a broad marginal street, which would make the piers rather short, and it is doubtful if the city requires piers at these points.

To retain the beauty of our riverside as well as the Palisades is the wish of all lovers of the beautiful in this city, and their natural condition should be enhanced and made usable, all of which justifies the city in its plan to project a grand boulevard from Seventy-second Street north along the westerly side of the railroad, for the unrestricted use of its people. So it is not possible for the city to hinder its river front improvement or mar it by allowing the construction of the proposed Columbia Stadium at this point.

Columbia's improvement, as outlined, is a beautiful one, and should in some way be realized, but not to the detriment of the city's general plan of improvement as above outlined. It is to be hoped, however, that the Columbia Stadium will be built. The city might project just such an improvement as that outlined by Columbia independently, or in conjunction with the university. Discrimination Against the Blind?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few days ago I read in your columns that a blind man, who was desirous of taking the teachers' examinations for the New York City schools, was notified in Supt. Maxwell's office that his blindness disqualified him.

Does a law exist debarring blind men from competing for public school positions? Are those disadvantages which the blind man incurs as a natural consequence of his physical infirmity considered so slight, that in order to keep this class of earnest citizens from progressing and bettering their condition legislation has been found necessary?

How long will society continue its persecution of these men, refusing to them any and every form of assistance, unless they consent to play the role of beggars? NEWEL PERRY.

A Promise Not Yet Kept.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This session of our Legislature should not be allowed to pass without reminding our representatives at Albany of their ante-election promises to secure the passage of a strong and effective measure regulating the speed of automobiles and trolley cars throughout all parts of the State.

A Suggestion for Easter.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Would it be possible to urge the giving up of usual Easter floral decorations this year and send the money instead to the famine sufferers in Japan?

If churches could be prevailed upon to do this it surely would be a most fair act, and a few lines in your paper by all odds the best Easter sermon ever preached.

A Question for Episcopalians.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I inquire through the columns of your daily paper whether there are any Episcopal churches in New York City where services are held on Good Friday at 8 o'clock in the evening for the benefit of those who, like your correspondent, are employed until 6 P. M. and have no opportunity of observing the day at any other hour? EPISCOPALIAN.

MEN.

Factory whistles blow Dawn
From reverberant throats.
Hollow and mournfully drawn
Are the answering notes
Chorused from harbor and shore
Through the fog wreaths, and then
Cityward ceaselessly pour
Inundations of Men.
East from the Jerseys and West
From the sea-girded plains,
South from the hills is the quest
Of the sinuous trains;
Thronged is each wavespanning arc,
And again and again
Shuttle the ferry craft, dark
With their burthens of Men.
Men! Men! Men!
Heavy-browed, eager-eyed,
Tremulous, resolute
Men.

Torrents and billows of life
And, alas, for the spray!
Highway and housetop are rife
With the turbulent clay.
Men! in the rush and the stir
And the roar of the street.
Men! in the factory's whirr
And the furnace's heat.
Men! 'mid the forges that ring
And the shuttles that ply.
Men! on the girders that swing
In the vault of the sky.
Swift through its underground lane,
Like a snake to its den,
Burrows the glowering train
With its burthen of Men.
Men! Men! Men!
Pitiful, glorious,
Conquering, desperate
Men.

WOMEN DEBATERS FAVOR UNIFORM DIVORCE LAW

Society for Political Study Discusses Unhappy Marriages.

PREFERS PARTING TO STRIFE

Greatest Cause of Misery to Greatest Number of Women Should Be Basis, a Speaker Says.

The Society for Political Study voted yesterday afternoon after a debate that a uniform divorce law is much needed in the United States. It was not a one-sided discussion, for, before voting for the law, the club voted on the argument and decided that, as Mrs. Frederick A. Dana, who presented the subject, said, the negative "put up the best talk."

"There are 612 divorces out of every 10,000 marriages in this country," said Mrs. Dana in opening; "over 6 per cent., and that is not only bad for us, but it is a scandal to other nations. Among our divorce laws we have everything, from the State which will not allow divorces at all to others which show ten recognized causes for divorce. It sounds like a clothing house advertisement: 'We fit the hard to fit.' With ten styles of ready-made causes for divorce in the United States it would seem as though every one might be fitted."

"Of course, I believe in a uniform divorce law," said Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake, "for now a man, divorced and remarried, traveling from Maine to California, will find that while he is married in one State he is not in another; in one he is married to his first wife, in another to his second, in still another he is married to both, and in some States he is married to neither."

"I have never been divorced," said Mrs. Belle de Rivera," before she began her argument in the negative. "I never expect to be divorced, I have never had a member of my family or a friend who was divorced, so that this matter does not affect me personally.'

"There are some true marriages, but we must acknowledge that another kind exists. A marriage made other than for love is not a true marriage. 'Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder,' but there is a poet who repeats, 'Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder, but who can tell, I wonder—the uninspired may sometimes make a blunder.' If a mistake has been made which must last a lifetime, isn't it better to have a divorce?

"There are many reasons for divorce which it is not seemly for me to mention to you. There are many women who rather than tell of the reasons for which they wish to be divorced would suffer a lifetime. And for these would not it be well to have another reason—say incompatibility of temper! Incompatibility! Yes, and I do believe that that is as good a cause for divorce as could be given. If two people can only live together in constant discord it is better for them to separate.

"You remember the woman who was asked if her husband was even tempered and she answered: 'Yes, he is always cross.' A man recently asked for a divorce from his wife because she would not speak to him. Isn't it a good reason for divorce if one person will not speak to another? If you had a friend who was unhappily married wouldn't you wish for a divorce for her? And they speak of the evil effects for the children, but it is much better for a child to go with one parent or another than to be brought up in an atmosphere of discord. But it is not the divorce but the marrying again of which Mrs. Blake spoke which troubles us and that is a different question."

"The greatest cause of misery to the greatest number of women, that should be the basis of a uniform divorce law, and that can be found by statistics," said Mrs. Sally Cory. "A uniform divorce law need not be stringent, and if a bright woman ever wanted to get a divorce she would be sure to manage it."

"We must give the States a chance for evolution in divorce laws," said Mrs. Trow. "In the newer States, where everything is in a state of transition, there are more reasons for divorce and there should be more methods for obtaining it. In the older ones they abolish the reasons for divorce. But the trouble is not in the ease with which we get divorces, but the ease with which we are married. I have known twenty cases of unhappy marriages because of weakmindedness or of deformity which unfitted for the responsibilities of married life. If we are not careful we shall make things worse than they are. We are the most moral country on the face of the earth in proportion to our size, and that has been proved by statistics."

"We ought to have central divorce laws from Washington," said Mrs. Winifred Judge, the club President, "so that a woman need not wake up in the morning and find that she has been divorced overnight in some little, half-baked community—and that has been done. To have the State requirement for divorce a crime for either man or woman is a terrible thing, for it brings disgrace upon the children.

"Abandonment or drunkenness and abuse are good causes for divorce. When a society woman is divorced there is talk all over the country about it, but no one knows of the many divorces that take place among the members of the foreign element of our population. 'Wednesday matinées' they call the days in the courts where the poor people go to get their divorces, and the Judges say that the women are treated so abominably that it would be wicked not to let them get them easily."

Then the S. P. S. voted that there really should be a universal divorce law.

MUSIC HALL LIKE LONDON'S.

Lew Fields to Take Over the Herald Square Theatre for Vaudeville.

It was learned yesterday, through real estate sources, that Lew Fields had practically completed arrangements with the United Realty Company, whereby he will control the Herald Square Theatre after the expiration of the present lease at the end of this month.

It is understood that Mr. Fields will greatly remodel the house, adding to it a large promenade and in other ways making it like an English music hall. The entertainment given will also be in the line of London variety.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Francis Wilson will appear at the Criterion Theatre next Tuesday evening in "The Little Father of the Wilderness," a one-act play by Austin Strong and Lloyd Osborne. The piece will be used as a curtain raiser to "The Mountain Climber."

For the revival of "Becky Sharp" at the Academy of Music next week, Harrison Grey Fiske has augmented the Manhattan company with several players who appeared with Mrs. Fiske in the original production. Among them will be William F. Owen as Joseph Sedley, Stanley Rignold as George Osborne, and Robert Ferguson as Sir Pitt Crawley.

Elsie Janis will introduce an imitation of "The Girl in the Red Domino" into the performance of "The Vanderbilt Cup" at the Broadway Theatre on Monday evening.

Yvette Guilbert and Blanche Ring are the latest acquisitions for the benefit performance to be given at the Broadway Theatre on Thursday afternoon, April 19, in aid of the New York Home for Destitute Crippled Children.

William J. Kelly, whose stock company terminates its season at the Yorkville Theatre on Saturday night because of a disagreement between the actor and Manager Bimberg, announced last night that he would appear with his company at the Harlem Opera House for four weeks, beginning April 30.

OLIVE LOGAN DESTITUTE.

Once Well-Known Authoress Says Husband Won't Support Her.

Her handful of earthly belongings about to be put into the street for non-payment of rent, feeble from old age and from lack of care and nourishment, a gray-haired woman went to the desk of Magistrate Cornell in the Harlem Court yesterday and lifted a trembling, white hand in appeal.

Court forms were for the moment swept aside, and the Magistrate asked the woman what she wanted. She was extremely deaf, and even with a battered ear trumpet could not make out what the Magistrate was saying to her.

"I'm destitute," she quavered weakly, "and I want you to make my husband give something to my support."

A policeman was instructed to take the woman into the Magistrate's room and find out about her trouble.

"Her name's Olive Logan," the policeman informed the Magistrate when he returned before the desk. "She was once an author and playwright."

Then Magistrate Cornell remembered her as a celebrity in the seventies. She was in turn lecturer, journalist, and successful actress. She married William Wirt Sikes in 1872, and went with him when he was appointed Consul at Cardiff, Wales, by President Grant.

Her first husband died in London, where she was writing for the leading magazines and newspapers. Among the books given as by her in "Who's Who in America" are "Photographs of Paris Life," "Château Frissac," "The Mimic World," "Get Thee Behind Me, Satan," and "They Met by Chance." She dramatized Wilkie Collins's "Armadale" and made a metrical translation of François Coppée's "Le Passant," the latter being produced as a play in 1887 at the Princess Theatre, London.

Her second husband was first her office boy, then her secretary, and finally she married him, he agreeing to change his name to hers. For this a royal grant was secured. She was then 53 years old and he was twenty years her junior. They came to America.

"The first years," she said of her second marriage yesterday, "were a dream of happiness. Drink has caused all the trouble, but I love him still and he loves me. Drink has caused it all."

A court officer, sent to find James O'Neill Logan, the husband, found he was employed as a watchman on Ellis Island. It was a relief to the Magistrate to know that he had $70 in wages coming to him, and if this money is obtained for the poor old wife she may yet be saved from being turned into the street.

Mrs. Logan lives at 2,568 Seventh Avenue. She has been long too feeble to write or do any other kind of work. Her husband's wages have been eaten up by the saloons, she said.

Logan will have a hearing to-day and an effort will be made to compel him to provide for his wife.

THE KNEISEL QUARTET.

Last Concert of Their Series in Mendelssohn Hall.

The Kneisel Quartet finished their season in New York—the fourteenth of their activity in this city, and their first as musicians resident in and belonging to New York—in Mendelssohn Hall last evening. There was a large audience, though not quite so large a one as at the previous concert. The programme was made up of Brahms's first string quartet in C minor, op. 51, No. 1, Ernest Chausson's piano quartet in A, op. 30, and Grieg's string quartet. Strangely enough, Mr. Kneisel had never played this quartet of Brahms's before in New York, though he has more than once given its companion piece. This one is less obviously beautiful than that, perhaps; it is more austere, so far as regards the first and last movements. Its beauty is of the profounder sort that searches deep in the heart. It has the qualities of Brahms's strength and breadth, at his best, as in the superb sweep of the first movement, and it has his most poetic vein in the lovely allegretto, the third movement, which roused the audience to great enthusiasm last evening. The last is in his stormy mood, and it is all the work of a great master whose music overshadows the strivings of the lesser men of this day, as was amply illustrated last evening. Mr. Kneisel and his associates played it with the unerring authority and the complete understanding of its spirit that always mark their intercourse with Brahms's music.

Chausson's piano quartet they also played for the first time in New York. It is the work of one of the young men of the César Franck school, dead before his time as the result of a bicycle accident, and it shows its birthright chiefly in the uncommonly rich harmonic structure. But the Chausson of this quartet is the Chausson of the symphony that Mr. Vincent d'Indy produced here—a clever and talented workman who builds up effects, who manipulates the material of music with something more than skill, but whose specifically musical gifts are slender. For the thematic material of this work is not spontaneous nor rich in musical expressiveness, and its elaboration is on the whole more the product of the resourceful harmonist than of the inspired musician. There are pages and passages of undeniable beauty and impressiveness, but the quartet as a whole does not make a deep appeal. It was also beautifully played. Mr. Ganz's share in it was accomplished and discreet, and it was duly co-ordinated with the strings in spirit and balance.

It is one of the Kneisel Quartet's achievements that they can play Grieg's quartet so as to make it sound really musical, and minimize its harshness and its unskillful treatment of the four instruments. Nothing they can do can make it really beautiful or of sustained interest. It is full of his formulas of phrase and harmony, and it shows his weakness in dealing with the larger forms of music that has made him for the most part wisely avoid those forms. But it has its effect when played as it was played last evening.

STUDIO AN ACRE LARGE.

To be Built in Long Island for Making Hammerstein Opera Scenery.

Oscar Hammerstein purchased yesterday several acres of land at Laurel Hill, L. I., for the site of a large scenic studio, in which will be made the scenery and properties for the forthcoming season at his new Manhattan Opera House.

The studio will cover an acre of ground, and will be fitted up with modern appliances for scenic construction and painting.

MAY PRODUCE BURNETT PLAY.

Court Won't Restrain Belasco & Mayer from Using "The Little Princess."

Justice Fitzgerald of the Supreme Court denied yesterday a motion for an injunction, made on behalf of Oliver Morosco, to restrain the theatrical firm of Belasco & Mayer from producing "The Little Princess" at their theatre in Los Angeles. The firm booked the play for Alice Kauser, theatrical agent. Later Mrs. H. C. De Mille, agent for Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, leased the play to Morosco for production in Los Angeles.

Lawyer William Klein, representing Belasco & Mayer, submitted letters to the court indicating that Miss Kauser's booking had been accepted by Mrs. De Mille.

WIDOWS OF PROFESSORS TO GET PENSIONS, TOO

Carnegie Trustees Announce Conditions of Eligibility.

OFFICIALLY DEFINE COLLEGE

Foundation Will Be a Central Force in American Education, They Say—To Teach Academic Modesty.

The Trustees of the Carnegie Foundation have determined the rules under which the $10,000,000 fund for the advancement of teaching will be administered. This announcement was made yesterday by the President of the foundation, Dr. Henry S. Pritchett of the Massachusetts Instituttte of Technology.

To begin with it was determined that no pension should be awarded to a professor not in active service on April 16, 1905, the date of Mr. Carnegie's letter to the Trustees establishing the fund. It was also decided that a pension not to exceed one-half the pension of a professor might be paid to the widow of a professor, provided she was his wife for ten years while he was in active service. Such a pension ceases in the event of the remarriage of its recipient.

The list of colleges which will come within the conditions of the trust will not be compiled for several weeks. All colleges under sectarian control are barred, as are those receiving more than one-half of their income from a State.

The definition of a college, in the view of the corporation, is embodied in the following official statement adopted by the Trustees unanimously, with the legal definition applying in New York as a guide:

> An institution to be ranked as a college must have at least six professors giving their entire time to the college and university work, a course of four full years in liberal arts and sciences, and should require for admission not less than the usual four years of academic or high school preparation, or its equivalent, in addition to the pre-academic or grammar school studies.

The Trustees of the Carnegie Foundation, in this connection, adopted the following:

"This idea of the scope of the Carnegie Foundation as a centralizing and standardizing influence in American education is a new one perhaps to educators themselves, but it promises to outweigh in importance the primary purpose in its establishment.

"Here for the first time is a central agency in American education, representative of the whole country, independent of local ambitions and college politics, and dependent on no constituency for financial support. The influence of such an agency, if wisely directed, in clearing our ideas of educational administration and in bringing in right standards can scarcely be overestimated. If it does nothing other than to call attention to the value of doing thoroughly that grade of educational work in which an institution is embarked, it will have accomplished much.

"The lesson of academic modesty is one much needed in America to-day. If the Trustees of the Carnegie Foundation can make it plain that it is the duty of a high school to do well the work of the high school and not try to be a college, and the duty of a college to do the work of the college and not try to call itself a university, a good step will have been taken in academic consistency."

The following bases for the award of pensions or retiring allowances was fixed:

For an active pay greater than $1,600 an allowance equal to $800, increased by $40 for each $100 of active pay above $1,600; for each additional year of service above twenty-five the retiring allowance shall be increased by 1 per cent. of the active pay. No retiring allowance shall exceed $3,000, and no person under the age of 65, or who has served less than 25 years, shall be entitled to the retiring allowance. For active pay of $1,600 or less an allowance of $1,000 is suggested, provided no retiring allowance shall exceed 90 per cent. of the active pay.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Miss Rosalie Coe Campbell, whose marriage to Henry Slack is set for Saturday, May 5, in Calvary Church, Twentieth Street and Fourth Avenue, will have her cousin, Miss Martha Townsend, as her maid of honor, and another cousin, Miss Gladys Smith, will be among the bridesmaids. The other bridesmaids will be the Misses Dorothy Q. Roosevelt, Dorothy Edwards, Elizabeth Auchincloss, Marguerite Slack, the latter a sister of the prospective bridegroom, and Isabel Wetherill, whose wedding to Barent Lefferts will take place some time in May. Mr. Slack's best man is to be Elbert F. Wilmerding, and the ushers selected are Charles Townsend, a cousin of Miss Campbell; Henry Maury, Franklin Stetson, Eckford de Kay, William Kent, Jr., and Archibald King. A very small reception, for relatives and intimate friends only, will follow at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Herbert Parsons, 148 Madison Avenue.

⁂

Mrs. Henry E. Coe will give a dinner on Tuesday evening, May 1, for Miss Campbell, who is her niece, and for Mr. Slack and the entire bridal party. Miss Campbell intends giving a dinner for her attendants on May 1, and Mr. Slack will on the same evening give his bachelor dinner at the St. Nicholas Club.

⁂

Miss Julia Chester Wells, who recently fell and severely injured her kneecap, is now able to be about with the aid of a cane.

⁂

Miss Katharine Engs Bradford, whose marriage to Howard Angell Brockway of this city is set for next Tuesday in Washington, will have but one attendant, her younger sister, Miss Rose Mary Bradford. Albert L. Brockway of this city will be his brother's best man, and the ushers will be Dr. R. O. Brockway, a cousin of the bridegroom to be; A. G. Nash and William F. Atkinson of this city and H. Lennox Bond of Baltimore. A wedding breakfast at the residence of the bride's father, Rear Admiral Royal B. Bradford, will follow the ceremony, which will be performed in St. Margaret's Church at noon.

⁂

Mrs. Henry T. Dimock and her daughter, Mrs. Cary W. Hutchinson, are in the South for a few weeks. On their return they will sail for Europe, to be joined there later by Mr. Dimock, who will cross with Col. Oliver H. Payne on his yacht Aphrodite.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Burden, Jr., gave a dinner last evening, followed by a theatre party. This evening Mr. Burden will give a large dinner to their friends.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Wormser of 6 West Seventy-first Street have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter Carrie and Morton Henry Meinhard on Monday afternoon, April 30, at 4 o'clock at Sherry's.

Fritzi Scheff Faints on the Stage.

Fritzi Scheff, playing in "Mlle. Modiste" at the Knickerbocker Theatre, fell in a faint last night in the second scene of the last act and had to be carried from the stage. She was taken to her apartments in the Hotel Netherland in a cab. It was said later that her indisposition was only temporary, and that she would appear to-night as usual. Miss Edna Fasset finished the act for the singer.

Asylum for Peter Pan's Admirer.

Morris Gottlieb, formerly assistant electrician at the Empire Theatre, who declared that he was in love with Miss Maude Adams, who is appearing in "Peter Pan" at that theatre, will be committed to the insane asylum at Central Islip to-day. The commitment order was granted yesterday by Justice Clinch of the Supreme Court. Gottlieb waived his legal right to a trial, saying that he did so out of his regard for Miss Adams.

ELLEN TERRY'S JUBILEE.

Queen Alexandra Leads the Movement to Provide for the Actress.

A movement was started recently in London for the celebration of Miss Ellen Terry's fiftieth anniversary on the stage, when the aim is to give a jubilee banquet in her honor on April 28, and also to raise a fund that will enable her to spend the remainder of her days in comfort.

Mark Twain and Joseph H. Choate have declared themselves in full sympathy with the cause, and Daniel Frohman of the Lyceum Theatre is receiving subscriptions from American actors and actresses.

There will be a big benefit for Miss Terry in London early in June, in which all the leading managers of the British capital will co-operate. The movement was started by The Tribune of London, a new daily newspaper supporting the Liberal Government. A general committee has been appointed in England, and Queen Alexandra a few days ago made a handsome present to Miss Terry.

DEAN SHALER DEAD.

Was Dean of Harvard's Scientific School and a Famous Geologist.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 10.—Dean Nathaniel Southgate Shaler of the Lawrence Scientific School died to-day. He was born in Kentucky sixty-five years ago. In 1859 he was graduated from Harvard. During the war he served as a Captain in Shaler's battery, a Union organization. After the war he returned to Harvard, took up work as a teacher, and was rapidly advanced to a full professorship. Fifteen years ago he was made Dean of the school. It was due to his efforts that the McKay bequest of $5,000,000 was made to the institution a year ago.

Dean Shaler was one of the foremost geologists in the country. Since 1884 he had been in charge of the Atlantic Division of the United States Geological Survey, and had written many treatises and textbooks on his favorite subject.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

The Rev. R. C. Booth.

The Rev. Robert C. Booth, 68 years old, died on Monday of nephritis at the home of his nephew, Dr. Charles H. Peck, 30 West Fiftieth Street. He had been in poor health for several years. Mr. Booth was an assistant to Bishop Coadjutator Greer at St. Bartholomew's Church. He was there eleven years. He was born in Bridgeport, Conn., and was in the same class with Bishop Greer in the theological seminary at Gambier, Ohio. He was rector of the Church of Our Saviour in Brooklyn for a time.

Italian Consul Dies in Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 10.—Claude Rozwadowski, Italian Consul General in Chicago, died to-day of angina pectoris. He was born in Turin, Italy, and had been Consul General for twelve years.

Obituary Notes.

CHARLES D. BEEBE, 70, a coal dealer and former member of the Overseers of the Poor of Pittsfield, Mass., died yesterday at his home in that city.

WILLIAM B. RIDER died yesterday at his home in Cannon, near Danbury, Conn. He was 64 years old, a native of Norwalk, and had constructed over sixty waterworks plants as well as many sewer systems.

Col. ROBERT CHRISTY, formerly a member of the Ohio Legislature, but a resident of Washington, D. C., for many years, died in Washington yesterday, aged 75 years. He practiced law and devoted considerable time to literary purposes, and was the author of two volumes entitled "Proverbs, Maxims, and Phrases of All Ages."

CARL ORDEMANN, a retired merchant, died at his home, 169 West Eighty-fifth Street, yesterday after a week's illness with pneumonia. He was born in Germany 62 years ago and leaves a wife and one daughter. Mr. Ordemann was a member of the German Liederkranz, the Deutscher Verein, and Worth Lodge No. 210, F. and A. M. His funeral will take place at his late residence Friday morning.

FREDERICK T. FRAMBACH, Judge of the District Court of Hoboken, died yesterday at his home, 630 Palisade Avenue, Jersey City, of a complication of diseases. He was born in New York in 1852, but removed to Jersey City, where he was admitted to the bar in 1880. He was an active Republican and was elected to the Legislature in 1885, serving one term. He was appointed District Court Judge two years ago. He is survived by a widow, three sons, and one daughter.

JOHN VON GLAHN, who was a member of the wholesale grocery firm of Von Glahn Brothers, died yesterday at his home, 231 Washington Avenue, Brooklyn. He was born in Germany forty-seven years ago. He was President of the Citizens' Union Real Estate and Mortgage Company, a Trustee of the Manufacturers' National Bank, Brooklyn, and a member of the New York Produce Exchange and New York Mercantile Exchange. He leaves a widow, two sons, and two daughters.

HIPPODROME'S BIRTHDAY TO BE A GALA EVENT

1,000 Bathers Will Splash Merrily in the Big Tank.

MARCELINE SIGNS FOR LIFE

Then Insured for $100,000—Show and Feast for Performers After To-morrow Night's Curtain.

Quite a budget of news came from the Hippodrome last night. First of all, the first anniversary of the great playhouse is to be celebrated to-morrow night in distinctly novel fashion.

The Hippodrome was opened to the public on April 12, 1905. The attendance in the year, says the press agent, has been 3,000,000, which is believed to exceed the attendance at any playhouse in the world in the same period.

After the curtain falls to-morrow night the Hippodrome performers will enjoy the rare treat of seeing a show. They will see three of them, in fact. The 700 performers—count 'em, 700—will take the orchestra seats and the curtain will go up again with the cast of "Brown of Harvard," "The Social Whirl," and "Julie Bonbon" on the stage. Mr. Thompson has arranged for sight-seeing automobiles to convey the three companies from the theatres in which they are playing.

After that Thompson & Dundy will give their guests the best substitute they can for a dip in the surf. A thousand bathing suits have been taken to the Hippodrome from Coney Island. After the performance for the performers is at an end the big stage tank will be lowered until it holds four feet of water of a reasonable temperature, and everybody will be invited to hop in.

One high-diving young woman of the Hippodrome staff has already announced her intention of diving from the roof, while another will swing like a pendulum with a strap between her teeth, and then plunge into the pool. The tank will be lowered until it contains sixteen feet of water when these feats are performed.

A feature of the night's gayety will be a luncheon served in the stables downstairs within sight and sound of the trick animals.

But the excitement in the Hippodrome over these grand preparations last night was as nothing compared with that which followed the announcement of the engagement by Thompson & Dundy of Marceline, the clown, for life; or rather it was only in the proportion of the honking of Marceline's trained goose to the roaring of Claire Heliot's biggest and fiercest lion.

Frederic Thompson sent for the clown before the matinée yesterday afternoon and told him that he would like to have him sign a contract for the remainder of his life. Marceline was staggered. He started out backward, tripping over himself twice. He went through his stunts in a daze. Some of the variations of his usual antics led Mr. Thompson to believe that the clown was "doing a sum" with his feet. Thus:

"Fifty-two weeks multiplied by $1,000 multiplied by fifty years. Result, $2,600,000. Guess I'll take the job."

At any rate, after the matinée Marceline said he was willing. Mr. Thompson was still willing, and both signed. Marceline is 28 years old. His father died at 90, and his mother is in the eighties, so Marceline thinks he has a future that promises well.

After the contract was signed Mr. Thompson sent for the representative of an insurance company and directed him to "write" Marceline for $100,000. At this point Mr. Thompson had to beat a retreat. The news had spread, and 700 voices—count 'em, 700—were begging for contracts from twenty years to a century.

Thompson & Dundy also announced last night that their two big Hippodrome attractions, "A Yankee Circus in Mars" and "A Society Circus" would be put on the road in competition with the regular circuses. They will not show under tents, but will play the large cities from coast to coast in the biggest theatre buildings. Special cars, chariots, and all the pomp and paraphernalia of the tent shows will accompany the Hippodrome attractions. "A Society Circus" will start its tour with a Summer engagement at Atlantic City.

FIELDS VISITS WEBER.

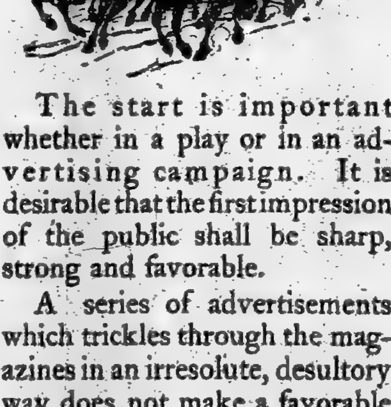
Sits in a Box, Then Talks Over the Old Days with His Old Partner.

Joe Weber and Lew Fields, the long united but now divided comedians, held a brief love feast last night in memory of old times. The scene was the stage of the late Weber & Fields's and present Weber's Music Hall, where night after night Joe and Lew used to whack each other with odds and ends of German dialect until fat Joe was "spoochless."

Last night Lew occupied a box at Joe's theatre. After the first act Lew went back into Joe's dressing room and told him how good it seemed to walk across the old boards again. Then they settled down to a chat about the stage as it was, is, and ought to be. And bygones were bygones.

To Form a Labor Legislative Bureau.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—If the action in this city last night of the Central Labor Union meets with the approval of the other central bodies throughout the country there will be established in this city a Labor Leigslative Committee to look after all matters in Congress affecting labor. The proposed body will be composed of a representative from each of the 550 central labor unions in the United States.



The start is important whether in a play or in an advertising campaign. It is desirable that the first impression of the public shall be sharp, strong and favorable.

A series of advertisements which trickles through the magazines in an irresolute, desultory way does not make a favorable impression—it makes in fact small impression of any kind. Here especially does the weekly show a marked superiority. Its action is quick—its follow-up rapid, and it imparts an impetus which the slower moving mediums cannot give.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST as an advertising campaigner is king of the weeklies; 780,000 copies each week to carry your announcement to 4,000,000 people. Shall we start your ball a-rolling?

THE SPOILERS
By Rex E. Beach

This is a story written by a strong man, of a strong man, for strong and grown up men to read. It is a tale such as is told by a man perhaps once in a lifetime—a tale of impetuous emotion, of brute strength and courage, of swift and passionate love and hate—a tale which tells itself without fine words—vigorous, forceful, mighty. There is no room for the violet conventions of society in that robust land where

"Never a law of God or Man runs north of Fifty-three."

The only law is the law of possession, of individual conscience, and of hunger—the hunger for gold digged out of the hills, and the blinding hunger of man for woman and for woman's love. It is a story of to-day, but it goes back to the root of things, and is true of all men and all real women since time began.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Lower; Call Money Rates, 15@20 Per Cent.

Demand Sterling Falls 70 Points—Good Winter Wheat Position.

After a display of considerable strength in the fore part of yesterday's Stock Exchange session, in the course of which advances of a point or more were scored by Union Pacific, Reading, and the Copper shares, to which most of the interest of the day attached, prices fell sharply in mid-afternoon, the stocks named declining some 3 points in each instance. The rest of the day was spent in a slow recovery from the low figures made at this time and at the close of the day a point or more had been regained. The movements in these three features of the day's trading exercised little influence upon the stocks in general, which in view of the continued high rates for money and the afternoon liquidation exhibited much firmness and sagged reluctantly to a fractionally lower level than that obtaining upon Monday night. The strong stocks of the trading were Chicago and Northwestern and Consolidated Gas, which, upon a volume of trading rather larger than usual, closed the day at substantial gains. The sales for the day were well over 1,000,000 shares and the liquidation of the afternoon in Union Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, and Reading suggested that banking interests were taking this means of helping the reserve position, since owing to the inadequateness of the supplies of gold now coming to the London market relief through imports was not at the moment practicable.

News developments of the day were of a uniformly favorable tenor. The Government's first report on the condition of Winter wheat set forth a condition of 89.1 for the plant, a figure 2½ points below the condition of April 1, 1905, but some 5 points above the ten-year average, and so excellent that taken in connection with the very large acreage there is promised a wholly exceptional harvest. The acreage figures are, of course, subject to such reduction as may be made owing to Winter killing. The grain market greeted this report with higher prices, but it was generally understood that this was due more to the fact that the condition was a trifle below that generally anticipated than because in itself it indicated a disappointing yield. Belief in a composition of the anthracite differences was encouraged by the action of the operators at their meeting yesterday. Their refusal to accede to the miners' proposition is by no means final, since complete willingness to submit many of the important points of issue to the anthracite strike commission of 1902 is expressed. This commission seems in all ways fully equipped to handle the questions at issue and the offer of the operators appears correspondingly fair, a fact which led Wall Street, at least, to hope that a strike would be avoided through this medium.

Demand sterling again fell abruptly, the total decline of some 70 points to 4.8350 bringing exchange to a basis where dependence upon bar gold for import purposes is very nearly removed. As a matter of fact one of the biggest international banking houses was yesterday arranging with its London agents for the selection of full weight sovereigns, so that upon a very slight additional fall in exchange it might make large importations of these coins. To the Sub-Treasury the banks have lost $2,158,000 since Friday, but through heavy pension payments the Sub-Treasury yesterday was a debtor at the Clearing House and balances more favorable to the banks are likely to occur from this time on, since pension payments will continue to run large.

PRESIDENT OF ST. PAUL ON UNION PACIFIC BOARD

TWO ROADS WON'T BE HOSTILE

Officials Expect That the St. Paul's Pacific Extension Will Not Injure Harriman Lines.

A. J. Earling, President of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul; David Willcox, President of the Delaware & Hudson Company, and Robert W. Goelet were elected Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad yesterday to fill vacancies caused by the recent resignations of Otto H. Kahn and Jacob H. Schiff and by the retirement yesterday of Thomas T. Eckert. Much interest was taken in Wall Street in the choice of Mr. Earling as a Director of the Union Pacific Railroad.

The relations between the Union Pacific and the St. Paul have been very close for the past three years, but the St. Paul recently announced that it would build a line of its own to the Pacific Coast, and it was regarded yesterday as somewhat extraordinary that the President of the St. Paul should enter the Union Pacific board just at this time.

While the election of Mr. Earling to the Union Pacific Directorate is said to be without special significance, inquiry concerning his entrance into the Union Pacific Directorate brought out interesting facts in regard to present and prospective relations between the Union Pacific and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul. The general belief since the announcement of the St. Paul's extension to the Pacific Coast has been that the new line would become a competitor of the Union Pacific as well as of the roads further north, the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific.

It appears, however, from statements made yesterday by those in a position to speak authoritatively for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, that the officials of that road expect no lessening of the friendly relations between their road and the Union Pacific as a result of the construction of the new line to the Pacific Coast. The statement was made that in all probability the interests of the Union Pacific will in no wise be adversely affected by the determination of the St. Paul to own its own line from Chicago to Tacoma and Seattle.

A man who is able to speak directly on behalf of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul interests said yesterday:

"I do not think that the business which has been exchanged between the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Union Pacific will be affected at all by the construction of the new line. That business might be affected by the entrance of the St. Paul into Portland, but there is no intention, at least at present, of extending the St. Paul's lines to that city, and I see no reason why the St. Paul and Union Pacific should do less business with each other than they have done in the past.

"The business which will be done by the new line, apart from new traffic actually developed by the opening up of the country through which the St. Paul extension will pass, will be drawn from the northern lines, the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific. Those are the lines which have been handling the Seattle and Tacoma business by way of St. Paul, and it is from them that the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul will draw traffic rather than from the Union Pacific.

"The present policy of the St. Paul and Union Pacific Roads is one of cooperation rather than of competition. And this will remain the policy of the St. Paul so long as the Union Pacific continues to show its present disposition to treat the St. Paul fairly. At the time, three years ago, when the present agreement between the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Union Pacific was entered into the Union Pacific was disinclined to give to the St. Paul all the advantages over its lines enjoyed by the Chicago & Northwestern. That situation, however, was changed very quickly when the Union Pacific discovered that the St. Paul had all its plans laid for entering into a traffic agreement with the Missouri Pacific. Since that time the two roads have co-operated satisfactorily with each other. The agreement between them may be terminated by notice from either road, but until such notice is given the agreement runs indefinitely.

"The significance of Mr. Earling's election to the Union Pacific Directorate is emphasized by the fact that the decision of George J. Gould to construct the Western Pacific, a project admittedly distasteful to the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific system, was followed by his retirement from the Union Pacific board, with Winslow S. Pierce, Mr. Gould's personal counsel.

The retirement yesterday of Thomas T. Eckert, who has long been identified with the Goulds, was said to be due entirely to his advancing years and his desire to withdraw as much as possible from business.

The Southern Pacific Directors yesterday elected Robert W. De Forest and David Willcox members of the Executive Committee to fill the vacancies caused by the retirement from the board of James Speyer and Charles H. Tweed.

In connection with the election yesterday of David Willcox as a Director of the Union Pacific it became known that James W. Alexander and James Hazen Hyde some time ago resigned as Directors of the Delaware & Hudson Company, of which Mr. Willcox is President.

NEW RAILROAD DIRECTORS.

Meeting of Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Stockholders.

PITTSBURG, Penn., April 10.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company was held here to-day and the following Directors were elected to fill vacancies on the board:

James McCrea, Pittsburg; W. H. Barnes, Philadelphia, and Samuel S. Dennis, Newark, N. J.

A meeting of the board will be held in Philadelphia at an early date for organization. The report for the year ended Dec. 31, 1905, and covering 1,427 miles of railroad was submitted and showed the following results:

Gross earnings $31,417,695.40, an increase as compared with 1904 of $2,884,620.02.

Operating expenses $23,519,385.72, an increase as compared with 1904 of $2,153,721.46.

net earnings $7,897,709.58, an increase as compared with 1904 of $730,898.56. In the course of the year $1,000,0000 was expended for extraordinary improvements and charged against profit and loss account.

There was an increase in the tonnage handled in 1905 amounting to 4,760,136 tons, or 14.29 per cent., and the freight revenue increased $3,283,528.08, or 16.73 per cent., while the passenger revenue decreased $342,786.90, or 4.98 per cent. Very material reduction in operating expenses for the year resulted in an increase in net earnings of $787,965.39.

ORDERED TO REDUCE FARES.

Rates on Two Divisions of the Michigan Central Cut.

LANSING, Mich., April 10.—The Michigan Central Railroad was ordered to-day by Railroad Commissioner Atwood to reduce fares on the Bay City division, between Detroit and Bay City, and on the division from Jackson to Bay City, from 3 cents per mile to 2¼ cents.

Fares on the Grand River Valley division, between Jackson and Grand Rapids, were ordered reduced from 2¼ to 2 cents per mile. Earnings on all three divisions increased during the past year to an amount which, under the law, compels reduction. Competing lines will necessarily be affected.

SURPLUS REPLACES DEFICIT.

Long Island Railroad Sends a Good Annual Report to Stockholders.

The pamphlet report of the Long Island Railroad Company, distributed by the company to its stockholders yesterday, shows that the road during 1905 earned a surplus of $22,529, against a deficit of $54,389 reported the previous year. The gross earnings totaled $7,824,986, an increase of $803,609. This gain in gross, however, was reflected only to a small extent in net, for the reason that operating expenses increased heavily, owing to increased train service and the additional expense incident to the installation of electric service on part of the company's lines.

In his statement to the stockholders, President Ralph Peters reviews the improvement work which has been undertaken by the company, the most important parts of which are the electrification of the company's suburban lines, the construction of the new terminal at Atlantic and Flatbush Avenues, and the Bay Ridge improvement work. The report states that for the proper development and permanent operation of the Bay Ridge line the Long Island Railroad has united with the Brooklyn Heights Railroad in a joint line from Manhattan Beach Junction to Sheepshead Bay. The two companies are also co-operating at other points. The report says that the Long Island Railroad now has in operation ninety-six miles of single track of electric lines, over which 172 trains are run daily.

President Peters notes a falling off in the number of passengers carried, which he attributes to the competition of trolley companies.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call on Stock Exchange collateral loaned at 15@25 per cent., with the last loans at 20 per cent. Most of the day's business was done at 20 per cent.

Time money, 6 per cent., plus a commission equal to a rate of 8 per cent. for thirty days, 7 per cent. for ninety days, 6 per cent. for four and five months, and 5½@5¾ per cent. for six months.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, April 10.—Supplies of money were plentiful in the market to-day. Discounts hardened. The Continental Exchanges were watched closely, in view of the forthcoming Russian and German loans.

Prices on the Stock Exchange were fairly firm, in anticipation of an improvement next week, but business was limited. Consols were steady.

Americans opened weak, rallied to somewhat above parity on New York buying, became slightly unsteady, and closed firm.

Mexicans hardened on the traffic increase.

Kaffirs were the best stocks in the market, owing to Cape buying.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101½.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15.37; Lisbon, 3.75.

FIRST MORTGAGE 6% 20 YEAR GOLD BONDS
OF
The Guanajuato Reduction & Mines Co.
GUANAJUATO, MEXICO

Denominations, $500 and $1,000.
Total Issue, $2,500,000. Dated July 1, 1904. Interest dates January 1 and July 1. Trustee, Empire Trust Co., New York

The Bonds are Accompanied by a 50% Common Stock Bonus.

Price, par and Interest

This is the unsold portion of a total issue of $2,500,000, which is secured by first mortgage on all the assets of the Company now owned or hereafter acquired.

The Company has absolute title to the principal silver and gold mines of the Guanajuato district, Mexico, the richest mining district in the world. The mines the Company owns have a recorded production of over $700,000,000.

Until recently these mines were operated by Mexicans under crude and antiquated methods, and only the higher grades of the ore mined could be treated at a profit. In the discarded ore in the dumps at the surface of the mines, and in the stopes and levels of the mines themselves, the company has ore values more than sufficient to retire its entire bond issue. Its greatest profits, however, will be received from the development of the unworked portions of the mines, which work is now being carried on vigorously with highly satisfactory results.

Plans of the underground workings show that not more than one-fifth of the Company's property has been mined.

Early in 1904 the Guanajuato Reduction and Mines Company took these properties over under a six months' option. An extensive investigation of the properties followed. In this investigation ten engineers and three hundred workmen were employed, and an experimental mill was erected at the mines. Before the six months had expired the Company took advantage of its option, as it was conclusively proven that without mining a ton of new ore the discarded ores available were more than sufficient to repay all the required capital, with interest.

The Company has recently completed the erection of modern reduction mills and cyanide equipment, and operations were begun on March 1st. The present capacity of the mills is 250 tons per day. Preparations are now under way to increase this capacity to 500 tons. It is the belief of all familiar with the Guanajuato district that this enterprise will in a short time become the most important milling and mining project in Mexico.

The Directors of the Company are: Charles L. Kurtz, President of the Company and President Columbus Public Service Co., Columbus, O.; John S. Bartlett, Treasurer The Electric Corporation, Boston, and Vice President First National Bank, Lynn, Mass.; C. A. Griscom, Jr., Capitalist and Director Empire Trust Co., New York; Leonard E. Curtis, Vice President Colorado Title and Trust Co., Colorado Springs, Col.; C. W. Van Law, M. E., General Manager, Guanajuato; Samuel M. Hamill, President Schenectady Trust Co., Schenectady, N. Y.; Leon O. Bailey, Counsel, New York; George B. Cox, President Cincinnati Trust Co., Cincinnati, O.; Henry Hine, President Guanajuato Power and Electric Co., Guanajuato.

We consider this investment offer an exceptional one. It combines the safety of a prosperous manufacturing enterprise with the great profit possibilities of a rich mining project.

Having sold these bonds to investors and institutions in various parts of the United States and Mexico, we recommend a purchase of the remaining portion as a safe and conservative investment, and we believe that the stock accompanying them will rapidly acquire a high value and pay substantial dividends.

Houston & Texas Central First Mortgage Bonds.

Notice of Bonds Drawn for Payment.

The Houston & Texas Central Railroad Company, having in its possession cash proceeds from sales of lands covered by Trust Indenture between Frederic P. Olcott, the Central Trust Company of New York, and the Southern Pacific Company, dated April 1, 1890, which are applicable to the purchase of the Houston & Texas Central Railroad Company's First Mortgage Bonds, secured by such Indenture to an amount sufficient at the price limited in said Trust Indenture to purchase and retire 350 of such bonds, and, it having been found that such bonds cannot be purchased at or below 110 per centum of the par value thereof and accrued interest thereon, there have been drawn by lot, under the provisions of such Trust Indenture Bonds secured thereby bearing the distinguishing numbers hereinafter stated, to be paid for out of such proceeds of such land sales at the said rate of 110 per centum of the par value thereof and accrued interest thereon.

Syndicate to Build Mexican Road.

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, April 10.—A syndicate, which includes B. F. Yoakum of the Rock Island and Frisco systems, is planning to build a railway from Salina Cruz, the Pacific terminus of the Tehuantepec Railroad, along the west coast northward to Manzanillo. It is probable the new line will be continued northward to the American border, there to be connected with the Rock Island system.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A year ago the Governors of the New York Stock Exchange were prevailed upon to suspend business not only on Good Friday, but also on Saturday, which made a recess of three days, counting Sunday. The stock market happened to be on a downward swing, which tended, of course, to exaggerate the uneasiness with which speculators contemplated a suspension of trading from 3 P. M. on Thursday to 10 A. M. on the following Monday. In Thursday's session call money ran up from 3 per cent. to 7 per cent., because loans made that day would stand over, and prices broke very sharply. Union Pacific went from 131 to 126½. In the light of more recent events, it is hard to realize that a 7 per cent. rate for call money should have frightened the stock market, but it did, because relatively to the rates that had obtained for many months that seemed an exorbitant price to pay for accommodations, and great was the indignation of borrowers, who alleged that lenders were in a conspiracy to advance rates on the eve of a three days' recess, and so forth. Since then there has been no great popular demand for extra holidays. Formerly they were in vogue and were granted by the Governors on very reasonable pretext. A petition for a recess this coming Saturday, following Good Friday, has already been denied. But now there is some opposition to closing even on Good Friday, which has always been a Stock Exchange holiday except at times when emergencies were likely to arise, as, for example, during the Spanish-American war.

It is argued that if the Governors vote to keep the Exchange open on Good Friday, contrary to custom, they will unduly advertise the worst possibilities of the existing money market situation. The only reason for keeping open would be the fear of an acute disturbance in the money market on Thursday in case business were to be suspended on Friday.

⁂

The existing money market ought to be a bull argument on bank and trust company stocks.

⁂

An operator who is conservatively bullish, and who hopes to see a much broader speculation as soon as money is more accessible, says: "I am apt to be distrustful of a market which exhibits artificial strength—a market, I mean, in which stocks appear to be pegged. It is much better tactics to let your market respond in a natural manner to adverse conditions, even if they be temporary. I am pleased to see prices give way under the strain of high money, as they have this week. When the market goes down on tight money it has a right to advance on easy money, but when stocks are pegged through a period of high money and do not decline there is no inducement for people to buy stocks when money is easy again. This decline in prices will lead to a much more active commission house participation ultimately than would be the case if prices had been arbitrarily held, as they were in December. Reactions, instead of hurting a market, improve it."

Information that the turning point had been reached in money was widely diffused yesterday forenoon, and the Street was fairly cheerful up to midday. Then, as money continued to rule above 20 per cent., demand increasing and supply diminishing, the uneasiness exhibited on Monday reasserted itself. Nobody seemed able to say just how the situation could be relieved. From having been willing to believe that it would be relieved in some miraculous manner, speculators went to the other extreme and made up their minds that it could not be relieved at all, unless by liquidation in the stock market. For several days misleading rumors of relief have been in constant circulation. There have been false rumors of enormous gold imports, of relief from the United States Treasury, and of a more liberal employment of bank reserves following the call of the Controller of the Currency for the condition of National banks as of April 6. None of this relief having materialized, and the tension seeming to become more acute, Wall Street at last wearied of promises, and the bull crowd involuntarily contributed relief yesterday by throwing over stocks.

⁂

Notwithstanding the Street's disappointment over the failure of the money market to show any improvement yesterday, certain eminent bankers declared late in the afternoon that in their judgment the worst had passed, and that from this point forward the condition of the money market would tend to ease.

⁂

The London prices reported before the opening showed recoveries of ¼ to 1¼ per cent. in American stocks, and, although the market did not respond satisfactorily to these advances, it seemed to have a great deal of underlying strength. The selling movement, which was in progress at the close of Monday's session had been temporarily checked. Where stocks were pressed for sale in the first half hour support was forthcoming, and presently aggressive strength was shown in a few issues, notably Amalgamated Copper, Union Pacific, and Reading.

⁂

The fresh selling movement under which prices declined so sharply in the afternoon started immediately upon the appearance of the Government's April crop report at midday. This report was good enough, but hardly so good as had been expected. The selling came at first in spurts. Shortly after 1 o'clock it began to increase rapidly in volume, and there was an hour of very pronounced weakness, at the end of which Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific showed declines of about 3 points each from the highest forenoon quotations, other stocks having suffered proportionately. The pressure was heaviest upon Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific, which, as on Monday, bore the brunt of short selling and speculators' liquidation combined. A large aggregate of stop loss orders was uncovered during the progress of this movement. Brokers who watched the selling declared that it had more the appearance of liquidation by large speculators than any which had previously occurred during this period of tight money. Some very large speculative lines must have been sacrificed. Western houses sold heavily. The bear crowd took advantage of this selling to cover its short contracts, and its buying, together with some of a much better character on a scale-down, brought about a recovery in the last hour.

⁂

The House of Twelve Partners was reported in the forenoon to be disseminating bullish information, especially about money. In the afternoon it was reported to be selling stocks all over the room, especially Union Pacific, which it followed down to almost the lowest eighth.

⁂

The transactions yesterday in Union Pacific approximated 200,000 shares, and those in Amalgamated Copper exceeded 170,000 shares. The next most active stock was Steel common, in which the transactions amounted to about 90,000 shares. It will be seen from this to what degree Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper dominated the market. The transactions in Reading approximated 100,000 shares, but Reading is a "half stock."

⁂

The buying of stocks under such conditions as prevailed yesterday, except that which may be attributed to the short interest, must necessarily be stronger than the selling. Commission houses are not buying. They probably sold on balance yesterday. The inability to procure money has led to some very beneficial liquidation in highly speculative quarters.

Wall Street's preference is for good crops rather than big crops this year.

In the last fortnight or three weeks Pennsylvania has behaved better in the market than at any previous time since the company's last issue of new stock. From this it is argued that the new stock has been pretty well digested. The bulk of it is supposed to have found its way into the hands of investors. Throughout the bull market of the last two and one-half years Pennsylvania has lagged behind all other important dividend-paying railroad securities, and while this has been discouraging to speculators, it has facilitated a distribution of the stock to investors. It is one of the few important railroad issues that are selling at a price on which the investment yield is more than 4 per cent. It appeals much more strongly to the investor at 140 than it would at 160, and, inversely, it would be more attractive as a speculation at 150 than around 140.

⁂

The number of traders who got whipsawed yesterday was uncommonly large.

⁂

At nearly ever ticker in Wall Street there is at least one man, trading on fluctuations, who can reform the currency system and reorganize the whole scheme of American banking while calling off the price changes in eighths and quarters to the board boy. He is the tape oracle. He knows everything, settles everything, disputes everything. He delivers quotations by word of mouth to the board boy and his opinions on finance to his helpless audience in one vast and oracular manner.

A NOVEL STOCK CASE.

Rights of Customers Dealing with Bankrupt Brokers Are Involved.

A case that is of importance to stock brokers and their customers, inasmuch as the question involved is a new one in the United States courts, was argued yesterday before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in this city.

The principal question at issue is whether a customer who closes a transaction with his broker, knowing the broker to be insolvent, receives a preference within the meaning of the Bankruptcy act, when he pays the broker the balance of the purchase price of the stocks and receives from the broker stocks worth more than the amount paid for them, by the customer.

The case grew out of the bankruptcy of J. Francis Brown, a Boston broker, who failed in June, 1903. John M. Shaw & Co. of this city had carried an account with Brown, the latter being the broker, and Shaw & Co. the customers. Brown carried a large amount of stocks for the New York firm, and the latter's agent, upon hearing in June, 1903, that Brown was insolvent, first withdrew $5,000 margin from Brown, and two days later closed all transactions, paying $35,000 and taking over the stocks carried for them, which were at that time worth a great deal more than the price at which they had been purchased for Shaw & Co. The withdrawal of the $5,000 margin still left in the broker's hands a margin in excess of the agreed 10 per cent.

Brown was adjudged a bankrupt, and his trustee brought suit in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York against Shaw & Co. to recover the $5,000 withdrawn, and the difference between the sum paid by Shaw & Co. on taking up the stocks and their market value on the day of the transaction.

The case was tried before Judge Holt and a jury, and a verdict was directed for the defendants on the ground that the customers were not creditors of the broker, but debtors, and that, therefore, they had received no preference through the transaction.

The Trustee sued out a writ of error and carried the case to the Court of Appeals, where it was argued by John B. Leavitt for the trustee and Maurice Untermyer for Shaw & Co. The trustee contended that the transaction was governed by the law of Massachusetts, which differs from the law of New York in that it regards the broker as the owner of the stocks purchased for the customer, while in New York the law is to the contrary, the courts holding that the customer, although he advances only a fraction of the purchase price, is the owner of the stock, the broker holding them in pledge as security for his advances.

It was argued on behalf of Shaw & Co. that the transaction was not governed by the law of Massachusetts, but by the common law as understood and applied in the Federal courts. Decision was reserved.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

The steel business, it is reported, has not so far been affected by the suspension of work by the anthracite miners and by a large proportion of the bituminous miners, but the suspension has already exerted a restraining influence upon the iron market.

Future business is naturally attended with considerable uncertainty, inasmuch as a serious shortage of coal and coke would add largely to the cost of pig-iron production, and might result in heavy losses to iron producers who might sell their output ahead on the basis of present prices.

On the other hand, the unfavorable influence of a coal strike on business generally deters consumers from contracting for their supplies very far ahead. The makers of machinery and agricultural implements are said to be among the best buyers of iron at the present time.

The orders for steel rails continue to accumulate on a large scale. Orders which are said to have been placed within the last few days exceed 50,000 tons, and negotiations are pending for heavy additional tonnage.

COPPER MARKET REPORT.

Sales of copper, according to John R. Stanton, have been made as far ahead as next September. Mr. Stanton was quoted yesterday as saying that he did not expect to see copper sell below 18 cents any time in 1906. In this position Mr. Stanton agrees with other important copper trade interests who have expressed the opinion that further substantial advances are much more probable than any material recession from the present quotations.

Closing quotations on the Metal Exchange for copper and other metals yesterday compare as follows with those of Monday:

Luttgen Drops His Chairmanship.

Walter Luttgen, who was named ten days ago as Chairman of the reorganized Finance Committee of the Illinois Central Railroad, has resigned from the Chairmanship of the committee. At the offices of August Belmont & Co., of which firm Mr. Luttgen is a partner, no explanation could be obtained of his retirement so soon after assuming the office.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

CITY OF NEW YORK.

BOARD OF ESTIMATE AND APPORTIONMENT.

Public notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, held March 30, 1906, the following petition was received:

To the Honorable, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment:

The petition of the Williams Terminal Railway Company respectfully shows:

1. That your petitioner is a street surface railway corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, having filed its certificate of incorporation in the office of the Secretary of State of New York on the 28th day of July, 1905, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating a street surface railway in the Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York.

2. That your petitioner desires to obtain from the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of The City of New York its consent to and a grant of the right, privileges, and franchise to use a portion of Bowne Street, in the Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York, for street railway purposes, and for the construction, maintenance and operation of a single track street surface railway upon and along the surface of said Bowne Street, a description of such proposed railway being as follows: Beginning at a point southeast of Imlay Street, where it will connect with the track of the New York Dock Company, and running southeasterly along Bowne Street to and into the property of J. H. Williams & Co., on the easterly side of Richards Street, the entire length of said road not to exceed nine hundred feet, together with the necessary connections, switches, sidings, turn-outs, turn-tables, cross-overs, and suitable stands necessary for the accommodation and operation of the said railroad by the overhead system of electricity, or other power lawfully employed by connecting railroads, all in the Borough of Brooklyn, City and State of New York.

3. Your petitioner further shows that there is no adequate means of transportation provided between the termini of the proposed railroad, and your petitioner believes there is a public demand for the construction and operation of this proposed railroad, and that such construction and operation will be a public convenience and benefit, the said railroad to be used for freight only.

Wherefore, your petitioner prays that the notice of the time and place when and where this application will be first considered be given, pursuant to provisions of Section 92 of the Railroad Law, and all other laws applicable thereto, and that consent or grant be given in the form of an ordinance subject to the laws and ordinances applicable thereto, and upon terms and conditions to be fixed in accordance with the provisions of the Greater New York Charter.

THE WILLIAMS TERMINAL RAILWAY COMPANY,
By JAMES H. WILLIAMS, Vice President.

Dated City of New York, Borough of Brooklyn, February 23, 1906.

State of New York, County of Kings, ss.:

James H. Williams, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the Vice President of the Williams Terminal Railway Company, the petitioner named in the foregoing petition; that he has read the foregoing petition and knows the contents thereof; that the same is true of his own knowledge, except as to the matters therein stated to be alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters he believes it to be true.

JAMES H. WILLIAMS.

Sworn to before me this 23d day of February, 1906.

A. T. BRITTON,
Notary Public, Westchester County.
Certificate filed in Kings County.

And the following resolutions were thereupon adopted:

Whereas, the foregoing petition from the Williams Terminal Railway Company, dated February 23, 1906, was presented to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment at a meeting held March 30, 1906;

Resolved, That in pursuance of law this Board sets Friday, the 27th day of April, 1906, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon, and Room 16 in the City Hall, Borough of Manhattan, as the time and place when and where such petition shall be first considered, and a public hearing be had thereon, at which citizens shall be entitled to appear and be heard; and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary is directed to cause such petition and these resolutions to be published for at least fourteen (14) days in two daily newspapers in the City of New York, to be designated by the Mayor, and for at least ten (10) days in the "City Record" immediately prior to such date of public hearing. The expense of such publication to be borne by the petitioner.

MONEY STILL TIGHT HERE, AND GOLD SCARCE ABROAD

Demand Sterling at the Lowest Point Since 1903.

MAY BRING IN SOVEREIGNS

Demand sterling declined yesterday 80 points, to 4.8325, the lowest point reached since December, 1903. The condition of the money market was still strained, call money lending as high as 25 per cent., and time loans being made at 6 per cent. plus a commission. The exchange market was at a level which would have resulted in engagements of gold had any supplies of the metal come into the market in London. No gold was to be had in London, however, except from the bank, and the price asked for it was still too high to permit of it being taken by New York bankers.

It was estimated yesterday that should demand sterling here decline to 4.8250, or a further drop equal to that which occurred yesterday, sovereigns could be taken from the Bank of England and imported to this country.

The scarcity of gold bars in Europe at this time is due to the irregularity of the arrivals of gold in London from South Africa and Australia. Three or four weeks ago the arrivals of bar gold in London were very heavy, nearly $13,000,000 having reached that city in one day. Last Monday, however, the gold which reached the open market in London, representing this week's consignment from South Africa, amounted to only $1,500,000, practically all of which was engaged by New York.

It is even more difficult to get gold in Berlin than in London. Practically the only chance to get gold there is upon the arrival of gold from Russia, which in recent months has sent many millions to Germany. Paris cannot now be drawn on for gold, for the reason that the French market is accumulating gold for itself in anticipation of the early flotation of a Russian loan.

The commissions paid yesterday on time loans in addition to the full 6 per cent. interest amounted in some cases to as much as 2 per cent. for thirty and sixty day loans. This made the rate for thirty-day loans practically 8 per cent. and for two months' loans 7 per cent. Longer time loans were quoted at 6 per cent., except six months' loans, which were obtainable at 6 per cent. or less. Call money eased off a little from the high rate of the day, but closed at 20 per cent. The range for the day was from 15 per cent. to 25 per cent.

Opinion among bankers was very uncertain as to the chances of relief for the money market within the next few days. Some were of the opinion that lessened demand for cash from the interior and larger payments by the Government on account of pensions and interest may from this time on be expected to result in improvement in the money market. On the other hand, some bankers were inclined to the view that money is likely to remain high for some time longer.

It was difficult yesterday to find buyers of exchange. The supply of bills, including a large number drawn against shipments of securities, was very large, but this exchange could be sold only at substantial concessions in rates. The high rates for money here naturally served to restrain bankers from purchasing exchange inasmuch as the money could be used to better advantage in making loans at current rates for call money.

Important sources of foreign exchange bills at present are Stock Exchange houses which have been carrying stocks here against arbitrage sales made in London. It is said that large amounts of stock have been carried in this way in New York, and that these are now being shipped to the other side owing to the difficulty of obtaining funds here with which to carry these stocks. The bills drawn against these shipments of securities cannot be sold to good advantage at present, but many houses have been practically forced into shipping the securities owing to the present position of our money market.

A number of bankers have been conducting profitable operations in the exchange market by bringing to this market Japanese bond coupons which are redeemable at the fixed rate of exchange of $4.87. As drafts on London have been procurable for some time past very much below this rate, the collection of the coupons here and their settlement in London by the purchase of demand sterling in the New York market shows a very neat profit.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 10.—Further strength and activity developed in Chicago Subway shares on the local Exchange to-day. Favorable speculative comment which has been afloat in the Street for several weeks is working to bring about some speculative purchases. New York pool interests have been wiring orders to Chicago for execution on this Exchange. During the morning the stock sold up to 54⅝.

Diamond Match was a trifle weak on minor selling, running off to 133. Illinois Brick sold at its low price of yesterday, 55½, and rallied again to 57.

Among the bonds Illinois Tunnel 5 per cents were firm at 94. Northwestern Elevated 4 per cents were weak, $47,000 of them changing hands early at 93¼, compared with recent sales at 93½.

In the afternoon Subway was offered in small amount, and the price ran off to 53. Brick was rallied to 58. West Chicago stock broke from 25 to 23 on small sales. This is low record for the stock. West Chicago consolidated bonds went at 60, a rise of 5 points.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Strong Spot Demand Aids Bull Leaders to Advance Prices.

GOVERNMENT FORECAST FOR THE COTTON STATES.

For North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama, fair Wednesday and Thursday; light to fresh westerly winds, becoming variable.

For Eastern Florida, fair Wednesday and Thursday; variable winds.

For Western Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Eastern Texas, fair Wednesday and Thursday; light to fresh southerly winds.

For Western Texas, fair Wednesday and Thursday.

For Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Arkansas, and Tennessee, fair Wednesday and Thursday.

For Kentucky, fair Wednesday; Thursday warmer and partly cloudy; probably showers in western portion.

The spot demand in Liverpool and in the South was the dominant factor in a strong cotton market yesterday. This, together with active support by the bull leaders, sustained an early advance of 9 to 12 points in the near months and 7 points in the Fall options. Liverpool sold 10,000 bales of actual cotton yesterday at a further advance of 3 points. The Continent and Egypt were heavy purchasers of options.

The opening here was at an advance of 7 to 8 points on May and July, at 11.25 and 11.19, respectively. During the first hour the forces in control bought heavily, taking 5,000 bales at a time, but around 11.30 for May and 11.20 for July there was a great deal of cotton for sale, and prices receded 2 to 3 points. Repeated efforts were made to force the market above the previous high record, which finally succeeded just before the close, when May traded at 11.33, or 15 points above the previous close and 8 points above the high record of two weeks ago. There was considerable liquidation in the old crop months on the rise, and it appeared that the clique took a good deal of May from this source toward the close. The difference between May and July again widened to 11 points. The former closed at 11.32 and the latter at 11.21.

The Government weather report showed that the rainfall for the week was below the normal in all sections except in Oklahoma and Indian Territory.

The Liverpool spot market was quoted at 6.17d., against 4.25d. last year. The sales were 10,000 bales, 9,000 American. Imports were 29,000 bales, of which 23,000 were American. New Orleans sold 2,000 bales at 1-16 advance, bringing the prices up to 11 5-16. The local spot market scored another 10-point gain, to 11.80, against 8.05 last year. The tone, however, was reported quiet. Prominent spot interests were very much in evidence at the ring yesterday, and rumor had it that they were buying the near deliveries.

The Liverpool future market opened steady at 1 point decline, and closed very steady, at 5 points higher on the old crop months, and 3 to 4 on the new. May-June closed at 6.01; July-August, 6.02; August-September, 5.97; October-November, 5.75, and December-January, 5.74.

The estimated receipts for to-day are: Houston, 3,000 to 3,500 bales, against 3,784 last week and 9,017 last year; Galveston, 2,500 to 3,500 bales, against 5,389 last week and 5,281 last year; New Orleans, 9,000 to 10,000 bales, against 5,849 last week and 11,289 last year. Port receipts were 26,905 bales, against 22,197 last week and 41,163 last year. Exports were 14,844 bales. Receipts since Sept. 1, 6,861,071 bales, against 8,115,098 last year. Exports, 5,240,565 bales, against 6,555,064 last year. Semi-weekly interior receipts, 25,391 bales, against 23,631 last week and 57,534 last year. Shipments, 38,463 bales, against 40,029 last week and 63,760 last year.

CARPENTER, BAGGOT & CO.—We favor the long side of the market and believe those who will tenaciously stick to that side will reap satisfactory benefits.

BAILY & MONTGOMERY—It looks as if the market will probably rule strong up to Thursday's closing.

JOHN MUIR & CO.—It seems to be a question whether there is a short interest of importance in the New York market, except as against actual cotton for May delivery, and as hedges against cotton bought by Southern merchants to be delivered in October, November, and December.

A. O. BROWN & CO.—It would not be at all surprising to see a further advance, due to covering before the Easter holidays.

E. F. HUTTON & C.—The South continues to sell the new crop months at every advance, and at this writing they have a loss on every bale on that side.

DICK BROTHERS & CO.—We consider the market to be in a very strong position. Values rest upon the stable foundation of an urgent spot demand.

SANGER & ETTELSON—The following statement will show pretty clearly how the statistical position may become a very strong bullish argument in the near future:

	Bales.
Supposing takings for season will be	11,890,000
Spinners' takings to April 7	8,090,000
Leaving to be taken during remaining 21 weeks	3,800,000
Supposing commercial crops will be	10,800,000

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—With cables disappointing and weather favorable for the crop the wheat market opened 3-16c lower, and was raided down to a decline of ½c. As the noon hour—the time for the Government report—drew near trading became very quiet. No sooner was the report made known, however, than business turned very active, and the upward movement of prices rapid, until a rise of 1¼c from low point of the morning was apparent. A little realizing turned prices off slightly, but the market was finally firm at a net rise of ½@⅝c. Cash wheat closed quiet and firm. We quote: No. 2 red, 89½c, elevator, and 90c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 88¼c, free on board, afloat, all nominal.

CORN.—There was a more active speculative market for corn, which started at a decline of about ¼c under poor cables and good weather; would have sold off further but for the firmness in wheat. A sympathetic rally of ¼c, followed with the market, however, finally net unchanged to ⅛c lower and barely steady. Cash corn was neglected, and closed dull and more or less nominal. We quote: No. 2, 56c, nominal, in elevator, and 54½c, nominal, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 56c, and No. 2 yellow, 55½c, nominal, free on board, afloat.

Cincinnati Gas Company Lease.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 10.—The lease of the business and plant of the Cincinnati Gas and Electric Company for ninety-nine years to A. S. White and associates of New York was ratified to-day by the Board of Directors of the local company.

The lessees are to form a holding company, with a capital of $20,000,000, and guarantee to put $2,000,000 in improvements within the next two years. A deposit of $3,000.00 in cash to guarantee the payment of dividends is also required.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Stock Exchange Weakness Affects Curb Market.

Tight Money Causes Increased Selling—United Copper Chief Sufferer—Standard Oil Declines.

The sharp decline in prices on the Stock Exchange yesterday afternoon imparted a weak tone to the outside security market, which up to that time had displayed considerable business. Business was on a larger scale than on Monday, but the increased trading was mostly in the nature of sales, induced to some extent by the continued high rates for money. The copper stocks were under most pressure, United Copper being the particular sufferer, falling from 66⅞ to 64¼, with a late rally to 65⅛. In the early firmness Chicago Subway rose from 54 to 54½, but from that point receded to 53, closing only a small fraction above the latter price. Interborough-Metropolitan common and preferred, "when issued," declined a point each, the former selling down from 53⅜ to 52¼, and the latter from 89½ to 88⅛. Standard Oil changed hands at prices ranging from 652 down to 649, closing at the latter figures. Losses in other directions were less important.

MORGAN NOT IN THE DEAL.

R. Winthrop & Co. to Float Public Service Corporation's New Stock.

J. P. Morgan & Co. will not figure in the floating of the additional stock of the Public Service Corporation. The corporation's Board of Directors at the annual meeting in Newark yesterday accepted the proposal of R. Winthrop & Co. instead. The plan of financing was fully outlined in the annual report of President Thomas N. McCarter and was approved by the Directors without dissent.

"Negotiations have been pending for some little time with Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co. and the United Gas Improvement Company," said President McCarter, "for the purchase by them of such portion of the company's convertible notes as should not be subscribed for by the stockholders. The negotiations with Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co. have been dropped by mutual consent. The trouble with the proposition from the company's standpoint was that it furnished us with an unnecessary amount of present capital and increased our interest account correspondingly. Moreover, it involved the possibility of a change in the company's control.

"In substitution for this plan it is now proposed to offer to the shareholders the 5 per cent. gold notes of the company to the amount of $6,250,000 falling due Nov. 1, 1909, convertible May 1, 1909, at the option of the holder into the stock of the company at par. Participation in such a small issue was not attractive to J. P. Morgan & Co.

"Messrs. Robert Winthrop & Co., bankers of New York City and the United Gas Improvement Company have agreed to underwrite upon exactly the same terms offered to the stockholders so much of the issue of the convertible notes as may not be subscribed for by stockholders.

"The plan provides for all of our financing for the year 1906 and 1907. The notes will be issued from time to time during the next two years, as the needs of the company require."

President McCarter concludes his report by saying that the increases in the business of the company are so large that the officers feel that it will be consistent with business prudence for the company to commence the payment of dividends in the near future.

The Board of Directors also approved the recommendation of the Executive Committee that, commencing Jan. 1, 1907, in all the suburban territory served by the company where the price of gas now exceeds $1, there shall be a reduction of 5 cents per 1,000 cubic feet per year until such net price reaches $1.

Thomas N. McCarter was re-elected President, A. B. Carlton, John J. Burleigh, and Charles A. Sterling, Vice Presidents; James P. Dusenberry, Treasurer; R. D. Miller, Assistant Treasurer; Frederick Evans, Secretary; E. W. Hine, Assistant Secretary, and P. S. Young, Controller.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 10.—The local money market is strong.

Call loans, 7@8 per cent.; time loans, collateral, 5½@6 per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 5½ per cent.; Clearing House loans, 6 per cent. New York funds, par@5c premium. Clearings, $28,463,759. Balances, $1,947,289. Sub-Treasury debit, $66,933.

The local market opened irregular with considerable profit taking in evidence, and declines were quickly recorded. After the first half hour commission houses appeared with buying orders and the market became stronger all around. This strength, however, soon petered out and the market became dull and irregular. Daly West and Quincy mining were features of strength in the early trading, both making fractional gains.

In the afternoon a large number of selling orders made their appearance. These in turn brought in stop orders, and a severe set-back was seen, Amalgamated and United Copper each losing over two points and the general list all showing considerable declines. The closing was irregular at a small advance over the low prices for the day.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—The arbitrage stocks had the call in the local market to-day, Reading, Pennsylvania, and United States Steel being the active leaders. The home stocks did not show much change. There was some pressure on Philadelphia Rapid Transit on the rumor that its alleged rival, the Philadelphia and Western, had succeeded in placing $10,000,000 of its bonds. With this exception there was little disposition to trade here, although such buying as did appear was considered good. American Railways was well taken, and it was said that new interests were taking hold of the company.

WINTER WHEAT AVERAGES.

Report of the Bureau of Statistics on the Conditions for April.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The Crop Reporting Board of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture, from the reports of the correspondents and agents of the bureau, finds the average condition of Winter wheat on April 1 of this year to have been 89.1, against 91.6 on April 1, 1905, 76.5 at the corresponding date in 1904, and 84.1 the mean of the April averages of the last ten years. The following table shows for the principal Winter wheat States the averages of conditions on April 1, the corresponding averages one year and two years ago, and the mean of the corresponding averages of the last ten years:

State.	Apr. 1, 1906.	Apr. 1, 1905.	Apr. 1, 1904.	10-Yr. Av'ge.
Kansas	85	92	78	88
Missouri	85	91	81	84
Nebraska	91	95	81	88
California	91	100	92	92
Indiana	92	92	66	78
Illinois	91	90	83	81
Ohio	93	89	60	76
Pennsylvania	91	92	74	85
Oklahoma	90	88	66	87
Texas	91	92	68	84
Michigan	82	94	78	81

The average condition of Winter rye on April 1 was 90.0, against 92.1 on April 1, 1905, 82.3 at the corresponding date in 1904, and 88.4 the mean of the April averages of the last ten years.

On the basis of the condition of 89.1, issued yesterday by the Department of Agriculture, the statistician of the New York Produce Exchange estimated that the indication for this year's Winter wheat crop is a yield of 473,249,000 bushels. This compares with an estimated yield of 479,787,000 gushels at this time a year ago and with a final crop last year of 428,462,834 bushels. The deterioration, therefore, between the present time and the final harvesting of the crop may be as great this year as it was last year without reducing this year's crop materially below the actual yield in 1905.

The indicated crop this year is larger than the actual yield of Winter wheat in any year in the past. Allowance, of course, must be made for the usual falling off from the April indication, but a reduction even much larger than that which occurred last year would still leave this year's yield considerably above the actual crop in any year except last year and 1902. The margin between the present indicated crop and the actual crop of 1904 is over 140,000,0000 bushels.

The April acreage and yield of the Winter wheat crop for a number of years is tabulated below. The yield is the actual crop for all years except this year, in which the figures represent, of course, the estimate based on the April condition.

	Acreage.	Yield. Bushels.
1906	31,340,887	473,249,000
1905	29,864,855	428,462,834
1904	26,865,855	332,935,348
1903	32,510,510	399,867,250
1902	28,581,428	411,788,666
1901	21,145,051	318,785,000
1900	25,605,714	330,890,712
1899	25,820,737	296,679,580
1898	25,730,089	379,818,281
1897	24,232,442	232,701,105
1896	22,612,686	264,339,099
1895	22,477,063	257,709,377

HAAS AGAIN ARRESTED.

Broker Was Indicted in Connection with Cotton Report Leak.

Moses Haas, the cotton broker, was arrested yesterday on a warrant issued several months ago by United States District Court Judge Holt in connection with indictments found against Haas and others for conspiring with Edward S. Holmes, Jr., a former employe of the Agricultural Department, to get advance information of the Government's cotton reports. Haas was released in $1,500 bail. It developed yesterday that Frederick A. Peckham, who is accused with Haas, was arrested in Saratoga some time ago on a similar charge and held in $12,500 bail. Both men had previously been arrested and discharged.

The warrants on which Peckham and Haas were rearrested were obtained from Judge Holt by Assistant United States District Attorney Clarence S. Houghton. Peckham was easily found and arraigned under the new warrant, but it took the Federal authorities a long time to serve the warrant on Haas.

It was charged that Haas and Peckham, with Louis Van Riper, formed a plan to get advance information of the cotton reports from Holmes and to use this information for speculation in the cotton market. Assistant District Attorney Houghton, it was said yesterday, has found evidence that large operators were parties to the plan to profit by Holmes's revelations of the Government's figures in advance of their publication.

J. J. HILL DUE TO-DAY.

Street Hoping for Light on Ore Land Negotiations.

James J. Hill, according to advices received in Wall Street yesterday, left St. Paul on Monday, and will arrive in this city to-day. Wall Street is interested in Mr. Hill's return to this city, believing that his arrival may possibly be followed by a resumption of the negotiations for a lease of the Great Northern's ore lands. Wall Street also expects that Mr. Hill will enlighten it further in regard to his Canadian railway projects.

New York, Jan. 2nd, 1906.

THE WALTERS PIANO CO.,
Manufacturers of
HIGH-GRADE PIANOS,
226 & 228 East 63d St.

Messrs. Bloomingdale Bros.

Gentlemen: These Belford pianos are the finest that skilled labor can build. The design of the cases is original, beautiful and attractive.

Masterpieces of Piano Building

We do not know of a piano (and we are acquainted with almost every piano that is manufactured) at double the price you are offering these pianos for that will equal them in tone, durability, beauty of design and workmanship. It is an opportunity rarely heard of where one can become the possessor of the highest grade piano at ONE-HALF ITS WORTH, on such liberal terms as you offer.

NEW YORK, April 7, 1906.

THE NEW YORK TIMES:

I advertised a property for sale in THE NEW YORK TIMES, under date of Sunday, March 25th, 1906, and it is a pleasure to inform you that, in all my experience as an advertiser, I have never obtained such quick and satisfactory results—not only receiving inquiries by the score, but effecting a sale within a week, which was directly due to this advertisement.

I am so impressed with the circumstance that I wish to place myself on record as a firm believer in THE NEW YORK TIMES as an advertising medium which reaches the people with means to purchase real estate.

Wishing you continued success, I am

S. COWEN.

BANKRUPTCY SALES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, SOUTHern District of New York.—In the matter of SCHICKERLING BROS. & CO., a Corporation, Bankrupt.—No. 8,813.
To the creditors of the above-named bankrupt, and to whom it may concern:
Take notice that, pursuant to an order of this Court, the property and assets of the above-named bankrupt, consisting of a large and valuable stock of precious stones and jewelry, dies, machinery, office fixtures, and safes, will be sold as follows:
Sealed bids may be submitted for said property to Robert C. Morris, Esq., Receiver, at his office, 135 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City, on or before the 23d day of April, 1906, at twelve o'clock noon, at which time and place they will be opened by him.
A single bid will be received for the entire stock of goods, fixtures, machinery, &c., or separate bids will be received for the following parts, to wit: 1—Machinery; 2—Dies; 3—Office furniture, fixtures, and safes; 4—Lot A of the jewelry and precious stones; 5—Lot B of the jewelry and precious stones; 6—Lot C of the jewelry and precious stones; and 7, balance of the stock of jewelry.
Creditors may attend and pass upon the acceptance of any bids submitted. Each bid must be accompanied by a deposit of at least ten per cent. (10%) thereof in cash or by certified check; balance before delivery.
The said property may be inspected and examined at the premises formerly occupied by Schickerling Bros. & Co. at 28 East 22d Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on April 18th, 1906, between the hours of 9 A. M. and 4 P. M.
The receiver reserves the right to reject any and all bids, and in case of the rejection of all bids, then the entire assets above named, or such part thereof as is not sold at private sale, will be sold at public auction at 28 East 22d Street, New York City, by Charles Shongood, United States Auctioneer, commencing Monday, April 30th, 1906, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon; sale to continue until the entire property is sold.
In the event of such auction sale, property may be inspected and catalogues thereof may be obtained at the place of sale on the 27th day of April, 1906, between the hours of 9 A. M. and 4 P. M.
The receiver reserves the right to withdraw any of the property from the sale.
Dated New York City, April 10th, 1906.
ROBERT C. MORRIS, Receiver,
135 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.
EPH. A. KARELSEN, Attorney for Receiver,
198 Broadway, New York City.

FLORAL PARK.

20 Minutes From Broadway.
Lot $300. $10 Down & $5 Monthly

With improvements, running water, etc.; no interest or taxes for one year. Title guaranteed. This is without a doubt the most beautiful and attractive piece of property and investment that was ever placed on the market before. Everybody knows John L. Childs, the seed and flower raiser; this property adjoins his handsome estate; it is also right at the depot and trolley. Floral Park has the best railroad service on Long Island, owing to four branch roads running through it. These lots are as good as 100 per cent. investment and could not be bought for less than that in a year from now, and a beautiful home site for any one wishing to build. All the new Penn. R. R. tunnels and improvements go straight to this property. For free tickets, booklets, etc., apply to

HAVE YOU EVER HEARD OF THE

and of how many happy and independent HOME OWNERS it has made throughout the UNITED KINGDOM?

We are operating the same safe and conservative system here in OUR COUNTRY, and it has proven very successful, because the money you have paid heretofore in rent each month through our system is a payment towards a HOME, and you pay no more than you now pay in rent, and in a few years you will have YOUR HOME all paid for.

You have to pay only $5.00 down on each thousand you wish to invest in a home; $2.50 per month on each thousand (for three months), receiving credit for $2.00 of the $2.50. After the home has been purchased for you, you then pay us $7.00 per month per thousand, receiving credit for $5.00 of the $7.00 each month on the principal.

State Board Wants the Interborough to Make Changes.

LIVES IN PERIL THERE NOW

Commission Also Wants to Know Why Elevated Trains Can't Use the Subway Viaduct.

The State Railroad Commissioners at their meeting in the Whitehall Building yesterday made recommendations which, if followed by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, will bring a long-desired relief to Subway passengers and to those patrons of the elevated railway who depend on transfers between the elevated and the Subway to get to and from home and work speedily. The recommendations have practically the force of orders.

The Commissioners carefully investigated conditions existing at the 149th Street Station of the elevated, where transfers are given between the Subway and the elevated. They found that in the rush hours there was a heavy congestion of people at the elevated station, the congestion being so great that in their opinion human life was endangered at times, there being no guard rails on the platform.

The elevated station is an island station with a temporary unloading platform on the uptown side. There is no covering to this platform, and none to the stairs leading to the street. The stairs do not connect directly with the Subway, and the passengers are without weather protection. About the same conditions exist on the downtown side, except that the downtown side is without the temporary unloading platform.

The system of giving transfers to those leaving the elevated station and then having the transfers exchanged for Subway tickets is declared to be a great inconvenience to the public and another cause for congestion.

"Prior to the opening of the subways," say the Commissioners in making their recommendations and giving the results of their investigations, "Second Avenue trains were operated to and from West Farms. Between West Farms and 149th Street these trains were run over the elevated structure of the Subway. At present Second Avenue trains are operated to 129th Street only. If a portion of the Second and Third Avenue elevated trains were operated through to West Farms and a transfer between these trains established at some point south of 149th Street, the congestion at the latter station would be materially relieved."

The Commissioners, to relieve these conditions, recommend that the Interborough put up railings on either side of the island station and on the track side of the east unloading station within two weeks. They also recommend that stations be built, one on the east side of the Third Avenue elevated tracks in 149th Street, one on the west side of 149th Street and Melrose Avenue, and that both be equipped with proper stairways sufficient in capacity to accommodate local and transfer travel, and that they be built so that patrons will be protected from the weather in going between elevated and Subway.

The Commissioners ask that the plans from the company for these changes be ready within thirty days, giving an estimate on the time necessary to make the changes. They also request an Interborough representative to appear before them on May 8 to show cause why a part of the Second and Third Avenue elevated trains should not be operated through to West Farms over the Subway viaduct structure.

Disclaiming any desire to assume supervision of the Subway, they suggest to the Interborough Rapid Transit Company that the transfer tickets be accepted directly instead of requiring a change for a ticket as now.

Complaints from those living near 130th Street on the west side elevated that they are compelled to go to either the 125th Street or the 135th Street station to board uptown elevated trains were investigated. The Manhattan maintains a downtown station at 130th Street, but no uptown station there. The Commissioners recommend the building of an uptown station.

The commission also gave a hearing to the Hudson River and Eastern Traction Company, which has applied to build new tracks in Westchester County. The opposition was heard yesterday, the company's side having been heard on March 27. The application was opposed by the Westchester Traction Company, which held that it had applied for a right of way in 1902 for a road to be built between Ossining and White Plains, that its petition was granted, and that the granting of the Hudson River and Eastern petition would interfere with its plans. The routes run together at many points.

In the afternoon officers of the Staten Island Rapid Transit Company objected to running cars to meet the 2:15 A. M. ferryboats. Commuters want these cars run. No decision was reached.

ASKS NEW BRIDGE BIDS.

Commissioner Advertises Anew Specifications for Manhattan Structure.

Commissioner Stevenson has advertised the specifications for the new contract for the construction of the Manhattan Bridge. The work has been pending more than two years.

About six months ago Commissioner George Best awarded the contract to the Pennsylvania Steel Company. An injunction was obtained by the next lowest bidder, and, to save litigation, Commissioner Stevenson has modified the specifications and advertised them anew.

The Manhattan Bridge is to be a cable bridge, the Commissioner judging that, with the tower foundations finished, it would be a waste of time to take up for consideration again the merits of the eyebar system. The contractor must give a bond of $1,500,000, must begin work within ten days after the award of the contract, and must finish the work within three and a half years.

FOR DISCHARGED PRISONERS.

Commander Booth Asks the City to Give Work to the Unfortunates.

Miss Eva Booth, Commander of the Salvation Army in the United States, submitted a petition to the Board of Aldermen at yesterday's regular meeting, asking that some provision be made so that unfortunate men liberated from the city penitentiaries and the workhouse on Blackwell's Island could be employed as unskilled help in some of the city departments.

In her communication, which is addressed also to the Mayor, Commander Booth says that the Prisoners' Aid Department of the organization meets these misdemeanants as they are liberated and ascertains who of them are without employment or friends. As many as possible are cared for and put to work so as to prevent them from being forced to return to their old methods of life. Employment, however, is hard to find for them, and Commander Booth suggests that a clause might be inserted in building, and like contracts specifying that an opportunity be given to a limited number of worthy ex-prisoners to work. The communication was referred to the Committee on Charities.

Alderman Richter offered a resolution requesting the various Borough Presidents, and especially President Ahearn of Manhattan, to investigate the recent explosions under the streets, "said to have been caused by gases generated from the refuse of automobile garages and the natural gases of the sewers into which said refuse is dumped."

The board voted $14,000 in special revenue bonds to the Charities Department, and authorized Bridge Commissioner Stevenson to purchase two automobiles without public letting. An appropriation of $10,000 was voted for the County Clerk in Brooklyn to preserve his records and $220,000 was granted to the Topographical Bureau in Queens. The Bronx got $50,000 for the same purpose, and Richmond $130,000.

MR. JUILLIARD REPORTS.

Choate Tells Mutual Policy Holders in England They Will Be Considered.

President Peabody of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, Joseph H. Choate, counsel for the Truesdale Investigating Committee; Chairman Truesdale of that committee, Vice President McClintock of the Mutual, and Augustus D. Juilliard held a long conference yesterday to consider what Mr. Juilliard had to say of his observations of the state of mind of the British policy holders. It was arranged that Mr. Choate should send a telegram to counsel for the English policy holders' organization to the effect that their demands were being considered.

About these demands a good deal of mystery is thrown by the officers of the Mutual. President Peabody declined to say yesterday what they were specifically on the ground that he could not discuss important negotiations while they were pending. It was learned, however, that one scheme that has been urged by the Englishmen is that assets of the American companies representing the reserves and surplus accumulations against British policies should be transmitted to England, there to be held by trustees. Out of this has come the idea of an independent English company. The British insurance papers have been suggesting D. C. Haldeman, the former manager of the Mutual Life in London, for the head of it. This scheme was discussed at yesterday's conference, and, although it is not entertained seriously by the officers of the Mutual Life, so far as the 80,000 English policy holders of that company are concerned, it is understood that Mr. Choate's cablegram will inform the Englishmen that the legal questions involved require some consideration, and that the policy holders will be more fully advised later on.

There will be other conferences of Mutual officers on this subject in the near future.

BINGHAM'S RESIGNATION.

May 1 Now Fixed by the Guessers as Police Evacuation Day.

The rumor that Police Commissioner Bingham has handed in his resignation to Mayor McClellan, or will soon do it, was alive again yesterday. It has appeared in various forms in the last two or three weeks. Yesterday's resurrected rumor named May 1 as resignation day.

It is well known that Gen. Bingham refuses to be trammeled by politics. Big politicians who at times have been able to obtain favors for themselves or their powerful constituents from the head man at 300 Mulberry Street are known to have been calmly "turned down."

It is also well known, on the other hand, that Mayor McClellan is personally satisfied with Gen. Bingham. Whether the politicians adverse to Bingham's administration will ultimately bring about his separation from the Commissionership, no one seems to be able to tell.

Commissioner Bingham did not return to Police Headquarters in the afternoon to meet the reporters at 5 o'clock, as is his custom. There was a rumor that he had seen the Mayor in the course of the day, but it went unconfirmed. Gen. Bingham's secretary said the General was ill. His wife said he wasn't.

ROUND-UP OF NOBILITY.

Count Sakey's Friends to Testify on Saturday—Dennis Inquest To-day.

Baron L. Bavastro de Cartazzi, Count Aribert Sakey, now in the Tombs; the Baron de Martino, called by the more familiar name of Martini by other occupants of the apartment house at 237 West 109th Street; Albert de Belmont, and perhaps other romantically named persons will gather on Saturday in the West Side Court. Miss Claire Page of 244 West Fifty-sixth Street will then make inquiry through her attorneys into financial schemes of Sakey, which, she says, cost her about $16,000.

The Baron de Cartazzi will also appear as a witness this morning before Coroner Shrady in the inquest to be held over the late Mrs. Blanche Turner Dennis, a widow who died suddenly in the Hotel Marseilles last month. The widow was once engaged to Sakey.

Incidentally it was learned that at the address in West 109th Street there had lived a colony of Counts, Barons, Captains, and other persons of title, and that some of the other tenants had suggested to the landlord that he ask the nobility to move.

The police took Sakey, the Baron de Cartazzi left the flat, and now only the Baron de Martino remains.

SAID SHE'D END HER LIFE.

Mrs. Lopard Said Her Heart Was Broken—Then She Disappeared.

Declaring that she was going to end her life rather than suffer further from a broken heart, Mrs. Mary Lopard disappeared from the home of her brother, William J. Nobotny, 1,184 Washington Avenue, late Monday night and has not been heard of since. Her brother says he has little hope of ever seeing her alive again.

According to Nobotny, Mr. and Mrs. Lopard lived happily at 1,444 Boston Road until trouble arose over Lopard's friendship with another woman. Soon after that he disappeared, and his wife traced him to Newburg. A warrant was obtained for his arrest, and last week Policeman Drescher of the Westchester Court went to Newburg and arrested him. When Lopard was arraigned in court his wife relented and said she could not press the charge of abandonment against him. He returned to Newburg, and since then Mrs. Lopard has brooded over her troubles.

JEROME'S QUESTIONS ASTOUND STANBERRY

He Seems to Know All About the Patrick Witness.

SOLDIER'S DIARY ORDERED

He Testifies That Jones Told Him He Couldn't Keep Track of All the Lies He'd Told.

"I hardly know where I am at, the way you people get hold of a fellow and cross-question him and contradict him and make him out a liar and all sorts of things," wailed Corporal Alexander B. Stanberry, on the stand yesterday, when the hearing on Albert T. Patrick's motion for a new trial had been continued for a while before Recorder Goff in General Sessions. The discomfort of the witness was evident from the moment he appeared, dressed this time in the blue garrison uniform of the infantry.

What caused him more concern than anything else was the knowledge of his slightest movements as well as of things in his possession displayed by the District Attorney. Thus Mr. Jerome staggered him with a question about a diary he had kept in 1901, when he came to this city to offer information to the lawyers representing the Eastern heirs of William Marsh Rice, for murdering whom Patrick stands convicted.

Point by point Mr. Jerome elicited from the recalcitrant soldier first an admission that he had kept such a diary, then that he still had it, and at last that he had brought it with him from the Philippines to Governors Island. He had shown it to members of the Thirteenth Infantry at Manila and soldiers here, and it was evident that the District Attorney knew of this. When Stanberry left court for the day it was with an admoniton from the Recorder to produce letters from lawyers connected with the Rice will and the diary in court to-day.

"Object!" Says Stanberry.

"I object to that," said Stanberry, turning to the court.

"Well, I'll have to overrule the objection," smiled the Recorder.

Stanberry admitted that he had had interviews with Capt. Baker, the executor of the Rice estate under the will of 1896, and with Judge Holt, the Texas representative of the contesting heirs. But no piece of information, however slight, could be dragged out of him except by searching examination. He did not answer a single question directly in the two hours he was on the stand, and repeatedly he balked outright.

"I tell you, Mr. Jerome," he burst out on one occasion, "I am not afraid of having my whole past life laid bare."

"All right," rejoined the District Attorney. "Were you ever convicted of crime?"

As on Monday, the question had an almost magic effect on the witness, and he turned to the court for help.

"I object," he began. Then he changed his tone and asked: "Do I have to answer all questions?"

"Unless they tend to incriminate or degrade you, yes," explained the Recorder.

"Then I object on that ground," said the witness. "This one tends to disgrace me."

He said that he didn't think Jones a murderer, and that his reason was his knowledge of the former life of Jones. Nor, he said, had he ever believed a single word of what Jones testified on the stand.

"But you knew that he had sworn away another man's life," said Mr. Jerome. "And yet you continued to live with him down there in Texas?"

"I believed he was not quite right in his mind at the time he testified," Stanberry answered.

Asked about the explanations given by Jones of his testimony in New York, the witness used the expression:

Says Jones Admitted Lying.

"Jones said he had lied and re-lied up here until he didn't know what he had said or not said."

When Mr. Jerome dropped him Stanberry was asked by Mr. Olcott, counsel for Patrick, if he had any letter from Jones in his possession. Again the Corporal "objected," but when prodded he drew a letter signed "Carlos" from his pocketbook.

"You had that letter very handy," remarked Mr. Jerome sarcastically.

"I tell you why I had it," rejoined Stanberry. "I was afraid of thieves." On another occasion he remarked that he would like to know how the District Attorney had got hold of the letters which he, Stanberry, had written to Pete Weasch at Houston.

"It's very simple," explained Mr. Jerome. "I asked Weasch for them, and he, being an honest man, gave them up."

The letter said to be written by Jones proved to contain nothing but commonplace gossip. It was dated some time in 1903. The court refused to admit it as evidence, partly because there was nothing to prove it was written by the valet, and also because it was wholly irrelevant.

Among the letters which Stanberry was ordered to bring to court to-day were some from Judge Holt, William P. Dewey, De Lancey Nicoll, Lawyer Ganot, and Patrick's brother-in-law, Louis T. Milliken.

The hearing will be continued this afternoon, when it is expected that the lay witnesses will be disposed of. Another effort will probably be made by Mr. Olcott to get some new witnesses of the same kind admitted, but the Recorder has already declared that he will not yield on this point. An adjournment will then be taken for two weeks for the District Attorney to prepare the expert medical testimony which he is to offer in reply to that filed by Mr. Olcott.

Italian Secret Service Man a Thief.

Emanuel Brodisi, who until he emigrated to this country a year ago was a member of the Italian secret service, was convicted yesterday before Judge Cowing in General Sessions of stealing $8,000 worth of silverware from the firm of Schumann's Sons, jewelers, at 967 Broadway. When arrested in Boston, Brodisi had about a hundred pawntickets and half as many skeleton keys.

COURT HOLDS TEWKSBURY.

Promoter's Bail Fixed at $7,500—He's Still in the Tombs.

Lewis G. Tewksbury, the financial adventurer, who gave himself up to the District Attorney on Monday, was arraigned before Recorder Goff, in General Sessions, yesterday, on the charge of grand larceny, made against him by his former wife, Mrs. Mary Mills Grunhut. He had spent the night in a cell at Police Headquarters, but appeared in court as fresh and cheerful as if he had just issued from one of the palaces which at sundry times he has reared for himself in various parts of the globe, only to lose them as soon as they were ready.

When he left Police Headquarters to walk down to the Criminal Courts Building with Detective Sergeant Farley a score of men armed with cameras were waiting for him at the Mulberry Street entrance. As soon as he appeared every instrument was leveled at his face. For a moment he hung his head, but in another instant raised it proudly, lifted his hat, and remained posing in that attitude until the last camera man had done his work.

In court Tewksbury was represented by Lawyers B. Gerson Oppenheim and William R. Weeks, who contended that the ten United States thousand-dollar bonds alleged to have been stolen from Mrs. Grunhut were Tewksbury's own property, and were left with her only for safekeeping.

Assistant District Attorney Garvan asked that the bail be fixed at $10,000 at least, because the total value of the property involved exceeded $150,000. The Recorder fixed bail at $7,500. At a late hour last night the promoter was still in the Tombs. Mrs. Grunhut did not appear in court yesterday.

CROTON WATER'S COST.

Aqueduct Board Has Spent $55,000,000 Since It Started in 1884.

The Aqueduct Commission published in The City Record yesterday a complete statement of its expenditures since it was organized in 1884 to take charge of the development of the Croton watershed for the city. This shows that the commission spent $55,307,771 up to Dec. 31, and still had a balance of cash on hand of $97,527.

The expenditures include $36,791,822 on contracts and agreements for construction work, $7,319,730 for vouchers and payrolls, $8,799,180 for awards of Commissioners of Appraisal, together with $2,233,716 for the fees of counsel and Commissioners, and $172,861 for land and land damages.

MOTHER DEFENDS HAWKINS.

Says the Accused Blackmailer Intended No Wrong.

When arraigned in the Tombs Court yesterday Homer Hawkins, the young timekeeper at the Mott Haven railroad yards, who was arrested Monday on the charge of trying to blackmail Louis R. Fuller, found himself confronted with two charges. On the charge of attempted blackmail he was held in $2,500 bail for further examination. On the charge of carrying concealed weapons he was held in $500 for trial in Special Sessions. As he could furnish no bail he was locked up in the Tombs.

Hawkins kept his courage until his mother, Mrs. Frank Faxon of San Francisco, appeared in court. Then he broke down and sobbed. When the arraignment took place Mrs. Faxon appealed to the Magistrate on behalf of her son, but he was unable to do anything for her. Later Mrs. Faxon made a statement on behalf of her son.

From what she said it appears that Louis R. Fuller is an adopted son of her father, Dr. Frank Fuller, the health-food man, who at one time served as Territorial Secretary of Utah.

"My present husband is an invalid," she said, "and lives at Los Angeles. Since my boy was 10 years old I have had to work as a seamstress to support him and myself, and sometimes my husband. My father is a very rich man, probably a millionaire.

"Homer always said it was a shame for me to slave away my life with a needle while my father and his adopted son had every luxury that wealth could supply. They lived in Fifth Avenue, while we lived miserably in three small rooms. My son was always jealous of Louis. At times this feeling drove him almost frantic. He knew that my father was rich, and he felt that he, as his grandson, was entitled to a share. His attempt was not blackmail; he simply set about in the wrong way to get the money. And anything wrong he may have done he did for me." Said Hawkins:

"I did not care for my own privations, but I hated to see mother, a rich man's daughter, toiling as a seamstress."

Man Killed in Elevator Shaft.

William Doossawire of 203 West Twenty-first Street, and two other steamfitters were working on the ninth floor of the new apartment house at Eighty-third Street and Park Avenue yesterday, when Doossawire accidentally backed into the open elevator shaft of the building and fell to the ground floor. He was killed instantly.

STEINWAY TUNNEL TEST.

Validity of the Belmont Franchise Will Soon Come Up in Court.

Corporation Counsel Delany said yesterday that the city was ready to proceed at once with the trial of the main issue in the Steinway tunnel case when it comes up in the Supreme Court. Probably that will be the first of next week.

This action will try for the first time the legal questions in the matter and will bring about a court decision as to the validity of the franchise under which the Belmont company is pushing the work of construction under the East River to connect Forty-second Street with Long Island City. Pending the trial of the action the city sought to restrain the company from pushing its work, but the company got an injunction from Justice Blanchard preventing the interference of the city.

CASTRO RESIGNS, CONSUL REPORTS

Venezuelan Executive Says His Retirement Is Temporary.

BUT MAY CHANGE HIS MIND

Would Stay Out If It Would Help His Country—Vice President Gomez Succeeds.

Consulado General de Venezuela,
New York, April 11, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Dear Sir: I have just received a cable from Caracas in which I am advised that on Monday, the 9th inst., Juan Vincente Gomez, Vice President of Venezuela, took charge of the Presidency. Gen. Castro, President of the Republic, has resigned his position temporarily, and desires to retire to restful private life for some time, owing to the strenuous work his position exacts, and which he has so successfully carried on for the past years.

The ceremony took place at 4 P. M. in the parlor of the Secretary General, in the presence of the executive Ministers, President, and members of the Supreme and higher courts.

The proclamation made by Gen. Castro during the ceremony can be briefly summarized as follows:

"Peace is assured in the entire republic. The international situation of the Government is clear, and all pending questions will be either amicably arranged or settled by arbitration. Gen. Castro urges all Venezuelans to support the Government presided over by Gen. Gomez, and adds that should his temporary separation bring harmony and good-will to the country he would willingly make his retirement permanent."

The Ministers and Governor have presented their resignations, as is usual, so as to leave the new President the liberty to select his collaborators.

I hasten to communicate this important news to you that you may use it as you see fit. I remain yours respectfully,

CARLOS B. FIGUEREDO,
Consul-General of Venezuela.

THE TIMES received last night by mail the foregoing letter from President Castro's representative in New York.

The Venezuelan Consul General last night declined to give further information concerning President Castro's resignation.

Norbert B. Kates of the Wall Street firm of Kates & Bok, the commercial representatives of the Government of Venezuela in this country, was astonished when informed last night at the Ansonia that President Castro had resigned. Mr. Kates is a personal friend of the former Venezuelan President, and has been in cable communication with the capital of the republic within the last few days.

"Did the cable giving the news come through Trinidad?" he asked eagerly.

When told that this was not known save to Consul General Figueredo, he said that in Trinidad there were many revolutionists, and that as cable messages were transferred there it might have been the work of a revolutionist.

"But with Gomez succeeding Castro," he declared, "there would be no reason for a fake message on such an important matter. Gomez has been a friend of Castro all the time. He was an old business associate, and they had the same curriculum in business and government."

"Do you believe that President Castro resigned as the result of the strained relations with France following the recall of M. Taigny?" he was asked.

"I cannot conceive of it," he answered. "Castro is a strong man. He is firm in everything, and when he believes he is right he will stick in his position and show his teeth against opposition. This is the most surprising news, and I can only believe that he has resigned because I know that at one time he was anxious to leave his office, but was compelled by public sentiment to remain."

Gen. Castro has been in the habit of making trips into the interior of Venezuela, on which occasions the Vice President, Gen. Gomez, has managed affairs of State, but without being empowered to act fully in Castro's place.

It was said last night that if the cablegram to Señor Fifuerodo was a fraud and aimed to disturb the value of the republic's securities it would have no material effect. If it was a forgery by revolutionists in Trinidad it would be a meaningless forgery.

Cipriano Castro was reported in 1903 as having handed his resignation to the President of the Venezuelan Congress. Hitherto his moves in that direction have merely been a ruse to obtain something which he invariably got. If on this occasion he has, indeed, resigned, the luck which has been his ever since the beginning of his career has not deserted him in the end. Of his predecessors, Guzman Blanco died in Paris, Crespo was shot in battle, and his immediate predecessor, Andrade, escaped through the back door of the Presidential palace, and is now working for a living in Trinidad.

Cipriano Castro sprang into prominence in 1890, when, with a handful of soldiers, himself a tattered cowherd, he engaged and defeated the soldiers supporting the Governor of his native province. Then the tattered cowherd marched out of the Andes, gathering more men as he traveled, and by the time he arrived at the outskirts of the capital, Caracas, the people were so anxious to see him and so romantically disposed in his favor that President Andrade left Caracas by a rear entrance and crossed the hills to the coast with a handful of friends. Castro mounted the plazza of the Presidential palace and, doffing his battered hat to the populace, announced himself President of the United States of Venezuela.

Two years later he was elected constitutional President. The original Presidential term of Venezuela was two years, but Castro made it four. He was re-elected last year. His re-election consisted of a reannouncement practically, for the polling booth was occupied by Castro's friends, so Castro's enemies kept away.

Since Castro assumed the dictatorship of Venezuela he and his republic have been mixed up in imbroglio after imbroglio, all due to the President's method of administration.

In the matter of the Bermudes Asphalt Company Castro considered it his prerogative to turn over that concession, owned by one American concern, to another American company. When Minister Loomis attempted to lay down the law to the fiery little Venezuelan President he succeeded only in getting transferred himself, Mr. Bowen taking his place. Mr. Bowen has since been summoned home in connection with the same matter.

BROADWAY HOTEL SET AFIRE.

Flames Discovered in Four Places—Guests Alarmed This Morning.

Four puzzling fires, each extinguished before they had got far, were discovered in the Broadway Central Hotel between 8:30 and 10:30 o'clock last night in different parts of the house. The damage was small, and the hotel management tried to keep the news from the guests. Not until after 12 o'clock did House Detective Armstrong notify the police. By that time the 500 guests, especially the women, had become alarmed, and were restrained with difficulty from leaving their rooms.

The first fire started in the laundry.

At 9:30 o'clock two bellboys saw a curtain on the second floor blazing over a gas jet, as if it had been thrown against the fixture purposely. The boys pulled the curtain down. At 10:30 o'clock one of the members of the Providence, R. I., baseball club, who was in an anteroom, discovered a large bundle of clothes blazing in a corner and already igniting the woodwork. This was quickly extinguished, but the guests learned of the previous blazes and began to show signs of uneasiness.

Then it was found that the wires connecting the automatic alarms had been tampered with. Soon after that Mrs. O'Neill, the housekeeper, saw that a curtain on the seventh floor was blazing against a gasjet. She promptly fainted. The noise of her fall was heard by the guests, and Mrs. Tucker, the hotel seamstress, became hysterical.

The automatic box had started alarms, which were rung throughout the building. Quiet was restored with difficulty.

Many of the guests think that a well-planned attempt was made by some one familiar with the hotel to cause a rush of guests from their rooms, and thus make possible wholesale pilfering of apartments.

When the automatic alarm went off it rang every firebell in the hotel and awoke every sleeper. Many of the women rushed out into the street in their night clothing. The stairs and halls were filled quickly with women and men and some children. There was no sign of fire from the outside, and policemen who had run up did not know what was causing the panic. The women and men stood outside the hotel for several minutes, while the excited persons inside was being quieted.

There are 800 rooms in the hotel, and most of them were occupied last night. Their inmates quickly poured out into the halls. Most of those who did not go out into the street remained in the cold lobby on the main floor, only a few remaining in the carpeted apartments and parlors of the second floor.

An engine, No. 33, from Great Jones Street, had been rushed to the hotel; but the firemen had nothing to do.

The Fire Marshal was notified, and he sent Marshal McGough to the hotel. He referred every inquiry to the hotel people, who in turn referred every one to the Fire Marshal.

ALL FOR A SUBWAY FARE.

Ticket Chopper Follows a Woman Far, Then Has Her Arrested.

Because Mrs. James McVine of 148 East 127th Street insisted that her little girl Olive was only 7 years old and ought not to be compelled to pay a fare, Thomas L. Dunn, ticket chopper in the Subway at Twenty-third Street, went to much trouble last evening. He followed her in a train to the station at 125th Street and Manhattan Avenue, then across town to Lexington Avenue, and at last to the East 126th Street Police Station.

There, despite the arguments of the police, he insisted on having her held on a charge of disorderly conduct. While Dunn was away following the woman over the northern part of Manhattan, the negro porter employed at the Twenty-third Street Station quit his regular work and did the ticket chopping for the company.

Mrs. McVine told the police she had never been required to pay any fare for Olive, who is appearing on the stage of an upper east side theatre. After the matinée she went downtown with her mother. When they started home Mrs. McVine and Olive went into the Twenty-third Street Subway Station.

Mrs. McVine bought one ticket. Then, holding her little daughter by the hand, she passed through the gate. Dunn shouted at her, and asked where the ticket for the child was.

A train had just come into the station. Mrs. McVine, without answering, boarded a car. She was followed immediately by Dunn. All the way to the Manhattan Street station Mrs. McVine says Dunn kept talking to her, varying his remarks now and then by pointing her out as the woman "who is trying to cheat the company."

When she left the train Dunn followed, and continued his talk on a crosstown car. When she alighted at Lexington Avenue he, too, got off, and, seeing a policeman, demanded that she be arrested.

Roundsman Austin heard Dunn's talk, went up and told him that he was perfectly willing to pay an extra nickel for Mrs. McVine. He advised Dunn to go back to his job. Dunn was persistent, however, and at last Mrs. McVine and Olive were escorted to the station. There Sergt. Lake offered advice to Dunn similar to that given by Austin.

Dunn, however, said: "I am doing my duty, especially after spending my car-fare following her." So a charge of disorderly conduct was entered against Mrs. McVine. She was soon afterward bailed out.

JAMES A. BAILEY, KING OF CIRCUS MEN, IS DEAD

News Kept from Performers Till the Show Was Over.

WIDOW GETS CIRCUS STOCK

Showman Died of Erysipelas at His Country Home Near Mount Vernon After a Week's Illness.

While the band blared and the clowns made fun and the elephants walked around at the circus last night for the thousands in Madison Square Garden, there were few among the spectators who knew that James A. Bailey, the backbone of the "greatest show on earth," lay dead in his home, The Knolls, near Mount Vernon. The death of the "king of circus men," who was in his sixtieth year, was due to acute erysipelas.

"That's the worst of the show business," said Tody Hamilton, who for once forgot superlatives. "There's maybe eyes wet and hearts breaking, but the people must laugh and the band must play."

James A. Bailey died at 5:15 o'clock yesterday. By his side were his wife, several of her relatives, and Drs. Delafield, Janeway, Harper, and Henson. There was no blood relation of the circus man there, for the last but one of the Baileys died last January in Michigan.

Mr. Bailey became ill last Thursday after having attended a performance of his show at the Garden. He had supper with a few of his friends at the Hotel Victoria, and complained of not feeling well. He was advised to go home, but little alarm was felt, it being the opinion that he had caught cold while attending the rehearsals of the circus before its opening. Mr. Bailey had worked with the men in his shirt sleeves, superintending the laying of the snow-sodden earth in the arena.

On Friday Mrs. Bailey telephoned to Madison Square Garden that her husband was too ill to come to the city. At the same time Dr. Harper and Dr. H. B. Henson of this city were called to Mount Vernon. They diagnosed the case as acute erysipelas. No alarm was felt until Sunday, however. Then Drs. Delafield and Janeway were called in consultation. On Monday the circus man rallied and said he was going to town to see the show, but later he had a relapse and on Tuesday his condition became critical.

On that day Dr. Delafield said there was only a fighting chance for Mr. Bailey's life, and only then in case he rallied within twenty-four hours. Yesterday morning his condition was much worse, but he insisted that he was only suffering from a cold. So impatient was he to return to the circus that he actually got out of bed yesterday, dressed himself, and started to leave the house.

Again he suffered a relapse, and when carried back to his bed admitted that he thought the time had come when the show would have to go on without him. He was conscious to the last, and expressed his satisfaction that the circus was so well organized that it could go on without him now.

Only one thing seemed to worry him, and that was that he could not live until April 17, when, following his annual custom, he meant to give a circus performance for the benefit of cripples and orphans. His heart had always been with the children, particularly the helpless ones. This dying regret of his was told at Madison Square Garden last night. Mrs. White, the Superintendent of the wardrobe, burst into tears and said:

"It seems only yesterday that he stood out in that lobby on orphans' day, and in his own arms carried the poor little cripples to special places where they wouldn't be in the crush."

The few old circus men who were told the news in whispers before last night's performance, (for the news was kept from most of the performers,) showed a great deal of feeling. One of the old clowns broke down completely, and only stopped sobbing when the bell rang and he had to run into the ring to make the people laugh.

Outside "Bill" Hyatt, "Tody" Hamilton, and a few who had been Mr. Bailey's daily companions for fifteen or twenty years did their best to conceal what they felt, but it was a dismal failure. A remark would be made and a story of James A. Bailey straightway recalled.

"I remember once he went to bid for tiger," said Hamilton, "and there were a lot of other circus men, all bidding, too. But one little man outbid them all. He wasn't a showman. He wasn't going to make a present to any one of that tiger. He wasn't going to start a menagerie. Mr. Bailey was puzzled. He wanted that tiger himself, so he asked the little man if he would sell it back for what he paid for it. He wouldn't. Mr. Bailey asked him why, if he wasn't a showman or anything in that line, he was so anxious to keep that tiger.

"'My wife died last month,' said the little man, 'and I'm lonely.'

"That was Mr. Bailey's pet story," continued Hamilton, "and you should have heard him tell it."

"Which reminds me," said Mr. Hyatt, "of the way he bought things. A German dealer came over the sea to tell him about a big elephant he wanted to sell.

"'How big is it?' asked Mr. Bailey.

"The German got on the table and made a mark on the wall with his walking stick.

"'If it's as big as that,' said Mr. Bailey, 'I'll give you $9,000 for it. And I'll take $100 off for every inch it's short of it, and put $100 on for every inch it exceeds that height.'

"It was always Mr. Bailey's joke on himself that he had to pay $50 over the $9,000 for that elephant."

At the Garden it was said last night that the show would go on as usual, except that it would close on the day of Mr. Bailey's funeral, which has not yet been fixed.

BAILEY'S VARIED CAREER.

How the Caesar of the Circus Won an International Fame.

James Anthony Bailey was the Caesar of the circus. As such, by energy, enterprise, application, and perseverance, while having withal a retiring, unostentatious nature, he made for himself a conspicuous niche in the world's history of entertainment.

DOWIE HAS SURRENDERED.

Prophet Will Give Up All in Zion for a Living Only.

CHICAGO, April 11.—John Alexander Dowie to-night relinquished his fight for control of Zion. His attorney, Emil C. Wetten, at a conference with John Wilbur Voliva and other leaders of the revolt against Dowie, announced that instead of demanding full authority over the ecclesiastical and financial affairs of Zion, the old leader, broken in health and spirits, is willing to accept the show instead of the substance of leadership, and to relinquish his claims on the exchequer of the city for a bare "living" remote from his people.

"Dr. Dowie does not seek for the management of the financial affairs or of complete supervision of Zion's religious life," said the attorney. "His health will not permit him to endure such burdens, nor can he remain in the North. The climate would kill him."

"What settlement does he ask in a financial way?" was asked.

"A living," replied the attorney.

It is conceded generally that Dowie's terms will meet with acceptance. Otherwise, according to Attorney Wetten, a bill may be filed in Chancery to prove Dowie's right to all the property that Voliva transferred to Deacon Granger by power of attorney.

Overseer Mason, whom Dowie put in charge of his New York converts, arrived in Chicago to-day, but did not call upon Dowie. Instead he addressed a letter to the First Apostle, in which he declared that he had been deceived concerning the real nature of the man whom he had acknowledged as his leader, and now repudiated him and his "shameful advocacy of polygamous practices." He ended by expressing the hope that Dowie would come to realize his sinfulness and repent.

Dowie and Voliva each were accused to-day by followers of the other of being allied with outside interests in an attempt to deliver Zion into the hands of its most hated enemies. Among the outside interests mentioned were the Masons and the Mormons.

WARRANT FOR AN ALDERMAN

Obtained by Dr. Woodbury and to be Served To-day—Bribery Charged.

Street Cleaning Commissioner Woodbury, accompanied by former Deputy Police Commissioner Piper and Assistant District Attorney Corrigan, called on Magistrate Whitman in the Tombs Court yesterday. After a long conference the Magistrate issued a warrant which was left in the hands of Detective Flood of the District Attorney's staff. When the time to close court arrived it was learned that Flood had been unable to serve the warrant, and that no arrest would be made until this morning.

It was said that the warrant was for a Brooklyn member of the Board of Aldermen and that the charge made against him by Dr. Woodbury was attempted bribery.

Not long ago Dr. Woodbury accused Alderman George Markert of Brooklyn of having written an objectionable letter to him, asking for the reinstatement of an Italian laborer whom the Commissioner had discharged, and suggesting that if the Commissioner would accommodate the writer to this extent, he, the Alderman who wrote the letter, would "look after" the Commissioner so far as the Board of Aldermen was concerned.

Alderman George Markert represents the Sixtieth District. He is a shoe dealer at 609 Grand Avenue, Williamsburg, and lives at 142 Meserole Street. He is a member of the committee appointed by the board, with William M. Ivins as counsel, to investigate Dr. Woodbury's conduct of the Street Cleaning Department.

H. H. ROGERS HOLDS REUNION.

Swaps Memories with Schoolmates of Fifty Years Ago.

Special to The New York Times.

FAIRHAVEN, Mass., April 11.—Although disappointed to-day at the incompleteness of the structure, which caused a postponement of any dedication exercises in the new $350,000 Fairhaven High School presented by him to the town, Henry H. Rogers had a reunion with his classmates of fifty years ago.

With kindly smile and friendly handshake, Mr. Rogers went among his old friends talking over the little incidents of school life.

Job C. Tripp, who presented the diploma to Mr. Rogers on graduation day, was the first to shake the Standard Oil man's hand. He had reminded young Rogers on that occasion of his lack of excellent marks in deportment, and said:

"I hope you will make more X's in the school of life."

Miss Sarah Wilcox asked:

"Does it really seem so long since we were at school, Mr. Rogers?"

"I wonder if Miss Stoddard has forgiven me that spitball incident," said Mr. Rogers. "I really aimed at a humble bee."

Mr. Rogers recalled his cure for a stiff neck when in school. He dropped his penknife down Miss Delano's back and then asked the master for another one.

"And he told you your desk would be better off without a knife in your possession," ejaculated Miss Annie Tripp, another classmate.

The much-whittled desk of Mr. Rogers is preserved in the town hall.

"I suppose the standing of old Uncle Potter on his head in a posthole and the stealing of Mrs. Hawes's duck are still mysteries," inquired Mr. Rogers.

"Yes," said Miss Howard, "but you're still suspected of having put the green snake under the teacher's bed," and Mr. Rogers laughed.

HAGUE MEETING POSTPONED.

LONDON, Thursday, April 12.—The Standard learns that The Hague Conference will be postponed to a date not earlier than October.

Good Friday Not a City Holiday.

Although the Aldermen, for the first time in many years, failed to pass a resolution yesterday making Good Friday a legal holiday in the city departments, Mayor McClellan will take a vacation from Thursday night to Monday morning. He intends to stay in his Princeton home.

Bill to Force Transfers.

ALBANY, April 11.—Another hearing was given to-day by the Assembly Railroads Committee on the Krulewitch bill compelling conductors of the New York City Railway Company to offer transfers to passengers without a demand being made. Henry A. Robinson, representing the company, spoke against the measure. Assemblyman Krulewitch argued for it.

MRS. J. P. THOMAS RISES 5,000 FEET IN BALLOON

Accompanies Her Husband and Aeronaut on 60-Mile Voyage.

LANDING MADE VERY GENTLY

Balloon Set Free at Pittsfield Comes Down Near Springfield—Was Once in Peril.

Special to The New York Times.

HAZARDVILLE, Conn., April 11.—Dr. Julian P. Thomas, his wife, and Charles Levee, a professional aeronaut, who made a balloon ascension at Pittsfield, Mass., at 3:22 o'clock this afternoon, made their descent without mishap in a meadow four miles from this town about 6:30 o'clock this evening.

Dr. Thomas, his wife, and Levee were leaning over the edge of the basket when the balloon struck a tree fifty feet high. It lazily rebounded, carroming off to another tree twenty feet away, and then sleepily sank to the ground.

When the basket struck the earth its impact was so soft and easy that it could hardly be felt. The instant it landed the three occupants jumped out, shook hands with each other in congratulation over an exciting journey covering about sixty miles, and then Dr. Thomas produced his camera and began snapshooting the scene.

For half an hour the balloonists had trouble in breathing. Their highest altitude during the trip had been 5,000 feet, and their lungs were put through an extraordinary ordeal. But all three were delighted.

Mrs. Thomas said the experience had furnished her an exhilaration the tensity of which she hadn't calculated beforehand.

"There's nothing on earth like it," she remarked jocularly. "I'm sure of that."

Dr. Thomas Tells of Trip.

Dr. Thomas then told about his trip.

"Everything went off all right at Pittsfield," he said, "and in a few moments we were 1,000 feet in the air. We entered a dense cloud and suddenly we could see nothing below. We were cut off completely from the earth. Suddenly we heard a swishing sound. I asked Levee what it was and he didn't know. We thought at first we were over the falls of the river near Pittsfield. Then we concluded that we were in a heavy wind. Then we looked over and discovered that we were barely skirting the tops of some particularly high trees.

"'Up! Up!' yelled Levee.

"All three of us got to work and dumped some of our ballast over into the woods and the balloon immediately began to rise. This time we went to a height of about 3,500 feet. We could feel the wonderful movement of the balloon and the sensation was delightful.

"We passed through a series of clouds. It was the most beautiful garden of nothing I had ever seen. Suddenly we emerged from the clouds and came out into the sunshine. We were between clouds, over clouds, and under clouds. A break below us showed us the earth.

Taking Chances in the Air.

"Just then we noticed that some of the ropes above our basket had become tangled.

"'I'll fix 'em in a minute,' offered Levee.

"'Isn't it dangerous?' suggested Mrs. Thomas.

"'It's nothing,' replied Levee. 'If you only understand it, well, it's the same as being on earth.'

"Then he climbed to the edge of the basket, held on by some of the ropes, and reached over and swung around by others until he had unfastened the tangle. It was a hazardous feat, but Levee accomplished it with charming nonchalance.

"After that we descended until we were about 1,500 feet from land. We tried to locate ourselves, but could not.

"'Off with more ballast,' cried Levee, and we threw everything over that we could spare. This time we went to the height of 5,000 feet. It was magnificent. We tried to go higher, but couldn't. The atmosphere was rare, and our breathing must have been difficult, but we didn't notice it at all. We were too much absorbed in the view below us and in the grandeur of our distance from everything alive. We could see Springfield, miniature in size and shape.

"As we passed over the city we started to drop. When we saw that the landing was about to be made we relieved the balloon of everything, including our life preservers, in the hope that she would rise again, but she refused. Then we slowly and sleepily sank to the tree tops.

"To describe the sensations we had would be impossible. All I can say is that what we experienced had one of the most beautiful effects upon the nervous system a person could imagine. It acted like some powerful narcotic or some sort of stimulant that plunges the body into an exhilarating sense of tension without the effects of a collapse in reacting."

Deflating the balloon and leaving it for the night where it fell, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas, with Levee, boarded a trolley car bound for Springfiled, from which place they took the first train for New York.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., April 11.—Dr. Julian P. Thomas of New York and his wife ascended from here in the Count de la Vaulx's balloon L'Orient this afternoon. Charles Levee, the young French aeronaut, was with them. The ascent from the meadow adjoining the Pittsfield Gas Works was made at 3:22 o'clock in perfect style. Three thousand people watched the big gas bag lift its human burden into the air, and catching the breeze from the northwest in the upper current, hurdle over Mount Washington, some four miles to the south.

The Thomases, with their friends, Dr. and Mrs. W. R. C. Latson of New York, reached Pittsfield this morning shortly after 1 o'clock. In their party was Leo Stevens, the New York aeronaut, who came to supervise the arrangements for the flight, and J. W. Tygard, an inventor. Levee had arrived yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Thomas was deeply interested in the preparations. Ever since their marriage, eight years ago, she has studied aeronautics with the doctor. She showed not the slightest sign of nervousness, and chatted about the prospects of a suc-

CARNEGIE DIDN'T KISS.

But Was Kissed—Happened Twice Before He Knew It.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., April 11.—Andrew Carnegie is incensed at the report which has come from Atlanta, Ga., about his kissing two women at a reception.

In defense of himself and to set the world right on the matter, Mr. Carnegie has had a friend write this letter:

"Mr. Carnegie was holding a reception in the Carnegie library at Atlanta, and a great crowd of people was filing past him, shaking hands and offering their felicitations. At a certain stage of the reception two well-dressed women stopped, and, after exchanging some bantering compliments, one of them put her hands on his shoulder and kissed him. This act was rapidly followed by the next woman in the line, who seemed to be her friend.

"Mr. Carnegie laughed, and then raising his hands in good-natured but firm protest, instantly checked any further attempts which might have been made by others. The sensational reports of the incident which were sent out from Atlanta are wholly untrue, and no one has been more disgusted by the story than Mr. Carnegie himself."

LOSE BY 2-CENT FARE LAW.

Ohio Railroad Men Say It Fails to Produce Paying Revenue.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, April 11.—The two-cent-a-mile law in Ohio is said to be a failure as a revenue producer. After a month of trial this is the statement by all of the passenger railroad men in this territory.

While the law has been in effect only thirty days, the railroad men say they are giving the law an honest and thorough test, without any curtailment of service or any other changes which might cut down operating expenses, but they say now that any further tests are useless. They say later returns will be identical with those of the first month, and this means a heavy loss to the railroads.

RADOLIN IN DISGRACE.

Kaiser Greatly Dissatisfied with His Ambassador in Paris.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 11.—When Emperor William distributed the decorations to the officials engaged in the Morocco affair it was considered surprising in diplomatic circles that Prince von Radolin, the Ambassador at Paris, was not rewarded. I learn that the Emperor and the Government are greatly dissatisfied with the Ambassador, and hold him largely responsible for the trouble with M. Delcassé.

Prince von Radolin has never been considered a strong diplomat. Bismarck said of him that he made the mistake of exposing his cards too early in the game.

In all probability Prince von Radolin will be succeeded by Herr von Radowitz. Count von Tattenbach will go either to Madrid or Constantinople.

AHOY! AUTOMOBILE SWAMPED

Atlantic City Hotel Man's Machine Abandoned to the Tide.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., April 11.—Caught by the rising tide, while returning with a party of friends from an auto trip to Longport late last night, Charles R. Myers, proprietor of the Hotel Rudolf, was compelled to abandon his machine near Ventnor, and wade through water two feet deep to the sand dunes.

Seas were breaking over the stranded machine when the party left it, and this morning the car was almost buried in the sand when the tide went out.

HEAD BACHELOR GIRL TO WED.

Miss Belle Metz of Mt. Vernon Founded a "Don't Marry" Club.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Miss Belle Ada Metz, originator and first President of the Bachelor Girls' Club of Mount Vernon. Miss Metz is the daughter of Henry James Metz, a retired New York florist, who lives at 3 Willow Place, Chester Hill.

Several years ago Miss Metz and some friends organized the Bachelor Girls' Club. "Don't Marry" was their motto. This society differed from others of its kind, it being agreed to elect twelve honorary members of the male sex. The Bachelor Girls' Club is still in existence, but several of its members have married. Miss Metz is to marry Dr. Thomas C. Swift at the Church of the Ascension on April 30.

HAS HYDROPHOBIA IN A CAR.

New Yorker Seized While on His Way to Get Treatment.

Special to The New York Times.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 11.—While on his way to Charleston, S. C., where he hoped to receive treatment that would ward off impending hydrophobia, James Howard, a railway lineman of New York City, late to-night became mad on a trolley car between Aiken, S. C., and Augusta, and attacked the passengers and street car men.

He was finally overpowered, but only after he had badly damaged the car, thrown several women passengers into hysteria, and injured the conductor.

Howard came to Augusta to-day from Midville, Ga., where he has been working. He was accompanied by his friend, John Hayes, who stated that Howard was bitten by a dog suffering from hydrophobia near Midville ten days ago. At a late hour to-night it was stated that he was so violent as to be almost beyond control.

Police Captain Badly Hurt.

Capt. Charles C. Wendell of the Highbridge Police Station was badly hurt yesterday by a fall from his horse at 175th Street and Aqueduct Avenue. While riding down a steep grade at a lively gallop a stone rolled under the horse's forefoot, and he fell. Capt. Wendell was thrown headlong, and before he could regain his feet the animal rolled on him. Two of his ribs were fractured and his head was cut.

VESUVIUS DISTRICT IS A VAST DESERT

Even Capri Covered with Ashes—More Towns Abandoned.

VOLCANO'S FURY DECREASING

King Victor Again in Naples, Where the Factories, Shops, Theatres and Cafes Are Closed

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

NAPLES, April 11.—The rain of ashes, hot sand, and gravel from Vesuvius still continues, and threatens further destruction.

Ottajano and San Giuseppe are the towns which up to now have suffered the most severely. San Giuseppe has been deserted by its inhabitants, and is almost buried in places by mounds of ashes and gravel. Many of the houses are in ruins under fallen roofs. At Ottajano the municipal buildings have fallen.

The appearance of both places is indescribably wretched. Everything seems buried under a smothering weight of gray dust, and the air is ful of ashes that are still falling, so imperceptibly fine that they can hardly be distinguished by the eye, and yet so dense that one cannot see 100 yards ahead, and even breathing is sometimes difficult.

On the coast line, in spite of the cessation of the lava flow, matters are not much improved. Torre dell' Annunziata still lies abandoned under its gray shroud, and the resources of Castelammare are taxed to the utmost to provide for the refugees from Torre dell' Annunziata and the neighboring districts, who are said to number over 20,000.

Torre del Greco is almost deserted, and great difficulty is experienced in feeding the scanty remnants of the population, who are left without bread or the possibility of obtaining it.

Naples is more deeply smothered in ashes than ever. Last evening they began once more to fall upon the city, and continued until midday to-day. In view of possible disasters to roofs the municipality has issued orders for removal of the ashes, but the work will be enormous.

I can only compare the effect to a heavy snowstorm in London. There is the same difficulty in progression and the same muffling of all sound save the occasional scraping of shovels. Even voices seem muffled, but that may be due to the utter depression which now lies upon what is generally the noisiest of cities.

The roads in Naples are horrible, but those toward Ottajano and Torre del Greco are almost impassable, foot deep in heavy dust, and still incumbered with the carts of the unhappy refugees.

It is impossible even to guess at the extent of the damage done, and one cannot exaggerate the suffering inflicted.

The dense mass of smoke and ashes issuing from Vesuvius makes it difficult to see the summit clearly, even when the wind carries the cloud away, but it seemed to me during a clear interval yesterday that the actual shape of the mountain had changed visibly, and that the old cone, so familiar in pictures, was almost gone, leaving a flattened ridge. Prof. Matteucci estimates that the cone has sunk nearly 250 meters.

By The Associated Press.

NAPLES, April 11.—The whole of the Vesuvius district as far as Naples, Caserta, and Castellamare is one vast Saharan desert.

Reports to-night from all sides, however, state that the fall of ashes is not so heavy as it has been for the last few days, and that the ashes are much finer. From this it is argued that the prospects are brighter, and scientists express the opinion that the volcano has spent itself. All the papers to-night advise the public to be calm, pointing out the improved condition of affairs.

Though it is hoped that conditions are now improving, each hour brings further news of the appalling destruction that has already been wrought.

Capri has been covered with ashes from Vesuvius, and has been abandoned by its foreign population, which included several Americans.

The Mattino asserted this morning that Sarno, a town with 20,000 inhabitants in the Province of Salerno, had been destroyed. This report was happily without foundation. Five thousand persons from nearby villages and farms have taken refuge in Sarno.

It is now officially admitted that Ottajano has been buried. The villages in its neighborhood are nothing but ruins. The number of killed at Ottajano and in the surrounding villages is not known, but 300, it is believed, would be a low estimate.

Torre del Greco and San Gennaro have been evacuated, and Portici, Ciricello, Poggio, and Morino are practically uninhabitable.

At Torre del Greco the fall of ashes and sand continues. The inhabitants are awaiting steamers to escape from the danger zone. Three persons were found dead from suffocation in a road at Torre del Greco.

At San Gennaro several houses collapsed, three persons were killed, and more than twenty were wounded.

At San Giuseppe the ashes and sand are over four feet deep.

According to the Mattino fifty houses, three churches, and the municipal buil-

APRIL 1906

ings at Somma have collapsed, the sand and cinders are six feet deep there, and all the inhabitants have sought safety in flight.

The people who remain at Torre dell'Annunziata are in danger of perishing from starvation, all the shops having been closed. Rations for 200 persons have been sent thither.

From all quarters come reports of the accumulation of ashes, the flight of the terror-stricken inhabitants of towns and villages, the collapse of buildings, the insufficiency of the relief measures, hunger, and discouragement. It is no longer possible to reach the points which have suffered most severely.

The magnitude of the disaster is almost indescribable. The loss to property is estimated at $20,000,000, and it is announced that 50,000 persons have been rendered homeless.

There is, however, great difficulty in ascertaining the actual condition of affairs in that part of the stricken district nearest the volcano. The tram and railway tracks are deep under sand and ashes, the roads are obliterated, and even the fishermen who ply their calling on the Bay of Naples are afraid to venture out on the water anywhere in the vicinity of Vesuvius.

It is estimated that it will require an organized body of 100,000 men and the expenditure of many millions of dollars to raze houses made unsafe for habitation by the accumulation of ashes and cinders on the roofs, erect temporary huts of refuge for the people who have been obliged to flee from their homes, clear the roofs of buildings that may yet be saved, and extricate and bury the dead.

The papers unite in urging the Government to send here Gen. Baldissera, who saved the situation after the crushing defeat of the Italians by the Abyssinians at Adowa, and to instruct him to organize and control the work of relief.

The distress among the fugitives is terrible. The Government has forwarded supplies of food and money, several Italian cities have done the same, and private citizens are contributing money for the assistance of the sufferers, but more help is needed.

Everywhere in Naples and Castelammare and in the lesser towns near by are beggared refugees, who but a few days ago were prosperous and happy. For these people, whose homes and crops have been destroyed, there is little consolation in the statement of scientists that ultimately the valleys and hillsides will become as fertile as ever.

Royal Palaces for the Injured.

King Victor Emmanuel has placed the royal palaces of San Fernandino and Capodimonti at the disposal of the injured refugees, and early to-day announced his intention of returning to Naples from Rome in order personally to direct the relief work. The news caused much satisfaction, and when the King and Queen reached Naples this evening they received a most enthusiastic greeting. Later the King and Queen visited the sufferers in the hospitals. One poor woman exclaimed, "I would consent to be wounded for the sake of being kissed by the Queen."

The Duke and Duchess of Aosta are praised on all sides. The Duke is pronounced to be a worthy descendant of the late King Humbert, who in 1884 went to the assistance of the sufferers from the cholera epidemic, visiting the patients in the hospitals, and in some cases remaining by the bedsides of the dying until the end.

All the papers eulogize Director Matteucci for his courage in returning to the ruined observatory on Vesuvius, and sending thence messages of encouragement and expressions of confidence that Vesuvius will soon quiet down. Prof. Matteucci telegraphed this morning as follows:

"The situation of myself and the carbineers in the observatory was very grave throughout the night. Up to 8 o'clock this morning the observatory was enveloped in dense showers of sand, but the volcano is now calmer. The seismic instruments show quieter records than yesterday. I shall remain here as long as possible.

"If my words could influence the population they would be words of encouragement and sympathy, for I am most confident that Vesuvius will soon return to its normal conditions."

Premier Sonnino arrived here to-day by train from Rome, his journey having been much impeded. Immediately after his arrival he had a conference with King Victor Emmanuel, with whom the Premier discussed the measures to be adopted to restore public confidence, maintain order, aid the refugees, and repair the damage caused by the eruption.

The warships have been doing effective service in the removal of refugees. Firemen and ambulance corps from Rome have been sent here to aid in caring for sufferers. Troops are encamped in the public squares here in readiness to move quickly to the assistance of endangered places, and patrols, with military doctors, are giving assistance to the fugitives.

Gratitude to the Troops.

The military forces have earned the gratitude and admiration of the people by their devotion to duty and their bravery. Not only are they credited with many acts of heroism, but they have displayed untiring perseverance in searching for the living and the dead among tottering walls, assisting fugitives to reach places of safety, giving aid to the wounded, and burying the dead. All this was done while they were partly suffocated by the ash and cinder laden wind blowing from the volcano. No danger has been too great for the troops to encounter, and no fatigue too severe for them.

All railroad service out of Naples was suspended this morning, when the engineers refused to take out their trains because of the darkness caused by the ashes. The blockade of local traffic continues, but service on the main lines has been re-established, although it is greatly disarranged by the indescribable confusion in the stations.

Some idea of the difficulties encountered by the authorities in obtaining accurate knowledge of the situation may be gained from the fact that Minister of Finance Salandra and Under Secretary of State Denava were blockaded at Torre Dell-Annunziata by ash heaps, and were compelled to go to Castelammare in an automobile, reaching that place with great difficulty. They hoped to get a boat at Castelammare to bring them from there to this city, but even the fishermen refused to take the risk of crossing the Bay of Naples, as they would have had to pass Vesuvius, which is situated about half way between Castelammare and Naples.

Mutiny in Naples Jail.

The panic here increase early to-day. The prisoners in the city jail mutinied owing to fright, and succeeded in breaking open some of the doors inside the building, but were subdued by the guards. The prisoners remain in a state of great excitement, requiring doubled guards.

The people have deserted their shops, and the factories are nearly all closed. The crowds are in the temper for any excess. It would only require a spark to start a conflagration.

All the theatres, cafés, and places of amusement have been closed. Before all the sacred images in the streets many candles are kept burning, while smaller images are carried in the streets, and in many cases set down in the open air surrounded by candles.

The employes of a tobacco factory, thinking the roof was about to fall this morning, fled in panic from the building and communicated their fears to so many people outside that the police were compelled to interfere and restore order. Many persons were injured in the panic.

Wherever it has been possible to do so the street car service has been re-established. The wheels, in their friction with the tracks, generate flames, showing the great amount of sulphur in the ashes.

Troops are being employed to clear roofs of the accumulation of sand and ashes upon them, which endangers the structures. The large glass-covered galleries throughout the city, which are much frequented, have been closed in the fear that the weight upon the roofs will cause them to collapse.

Two American girls who had heedlessly ventured into the Vesuvius district, where the abandonment of the train by which they were travelling caused them much discomfort and no little peril, were brought here to-day by the steamer St. Bon. They are delighted that their adventure had no more serious ending.

ROME, April 11.—The Vita to-day published a dispatch from Castelammare, timed 3:30 this morning, saying that during the night trains arrived there with thousands of fugitives from Torre del Greco. These persons were in a pitiable state, covered with ashes and panic-stricken. They said that Torre del Greco was visited by a terrible storm, accompanied by the fall of boiling water and stones the size of eggs. The houses began falling down and the population fled.

When the dispatch was filed at Castelammare the volcanic tempest had recommenced at Torre dell' Annunziata.

R. U. JOHNSON'S PLIGHT.

Editor Had a Hard Time Getting Away from Torre del Greco.

NAPLES, April 11.—Robert Underwood Johnson, associate editor of The Century Magazine, who has been a witness of the events in this locality in the last few days, said to-day:

"Each day it becomes more impossible to visit the afflicted districts. The ashes have reached preposterous proportions. They filter into everything and block the trains, trams, automobiles, carriages, and horses.

"Before the interruption I took a train for Torre dell' Annunziata. On arriving at Torre del Greco the heavens seemed to open, and we were soon half buried in ashes and hot cinders. The train drew up in total darkness, relieved only by lightning flashes. Thus we waited events. Soon the darkness took purple and yellow tinges, the detonations became louder than the loudest thunderclap, and the ashes burned our eyes. It was a perfect picture of Dante's Inferno. The train could not proceed, the ashes were so thick on the track.

"Presently the train divided, but I was left behind. Poor women fugitives, thinking they were on the point of losing their lives, began to chant litanies for the dead, giving a last weird touch to the infernal scene. Carbineers came to our rescue, proposing to take us to the sea. We then found we were on a bridge with the sea on one side and Torre del Greco on the other, thirty feet below. In the blinding darkness we descended hand in hand, a human rope, a false step meaning death.

"Our troubles were not over. The port was full of ashes also. Small boats could not put in or put out. Wearily we trudged back to the station, to find there was no prospect of a train.

"We had been five hours in that plight when, seeing that heroic measures were necessary, with a companion, I trudged miles in two or three feet of ashes to Portici, where finally we found a cab, which brought us to Naples."

EMPEROR WILLIAM BUYS A
WEBER PIANOLA PIANO

LAST month the Aeolian Company received a Royal Command from Emperor William, through the Head Court Marshal, His Excellency Count A. zu Eulenburg, to send a Weber Pianola Piano to the Royal Palace.

The instrument, when delivered, was installed in the Pfeiler Saal, or family quarters. After an interval of four days, during which it was in almost constant use, a request was received to send a bill, as the Emperor was greatly delighted with the piano and wished to retain it permanently. A cablegram to the New York Staats-Zeitung has since been printed:

"PRAISE FROM THE IMPERIAL FAMILY.

"On recommendations recently received from America, Emperor William purchased from the Aeolian Company one of their Pianola Pianos.

"The Empress and Prince August William played on it, and spoke enthusiastically of the purity and rich tone of the instrument."

The Staats-Zeitung cabled back to learn the source of the above information and in reply received word from its correspondent that the item was furnished directly by a member of the Imperial Household.

It is most significant that, having decided to buy an instrument of this type, His Majesty, the Emperor of Germany, the foremost musical nation in the world, should have selected the Weber Pianola Piano, thereby endorsing in the most emphatic manner possible the opinion of the world's greatest musical authorities.

Royalty has been a most consistent patron of the Aeolian Company's instruments. Not one, but every member of the English Royal Family has purchased a Pianola. Other patrons include the Tsar of Russia, the King of Spain, the King of Portugal, His Holiness, the Pope, Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria, the Sultan of Turkey, the Khedive of Egypt, the Shah of Persia, the King of Siam, etc.

The world over, from New York to St. Petersburg, from Cairo to Melbourne, the Pianola and other instruments of the Aeolian Company's manufacture are invariably given preference over all others by the most distinguished and discriminating class of purchasers.

Bailey Circus, with whom Mr. Bailey was associated for ten years, once said:

"The public likes to be humbugged."

Mr. Bailey never subscribed to this sentiment. His motto was:

"Give the people the best—spare no expense in doing it—and they'll reward you."

It was the principle on which Bailey managed his business, and the principle which accumulated a fortune of $8,000,000 for him.

Mr. Bailey was a showman, and his name appeared before the public in newspaper and poster print probably more than that of any other man in the world. But that was not of his own choice, for as a man he was modest. He avoided the public view, he hated personal exploitation, and was satisfied with the simple things of life. The Prince of Wales, now King of England, once summoned him to appear for congratulations on the show which he had furnished to England. He declined to appear. Mr. Bailey chose Tody Hamilton, his press representative, as his delegate.

"See the Prince," he said. "I want none of the publicity. Express my thanks and tell him that the credit for the entertainment belongs to all; not alone to me."

Mr. Bailey was born in Detroit in 1847. He was one of four brothers who were left orphans as children. His father left an estate of $20,000, but the youngster had to go to work. He hired out to a farmer for $3.25 a month. The farmer beat him every time he paid him off, so he got a job as bellboy in a hotel at Pontiac.

Joined the Circus as a Lad.

One Summer day a little one-ring circus owned by Robinson & Lake came to Pontiac. The lad went to see it. Like all boys, he was captivated by the glamour of the thing. He saw the red and gilt wagon, the elephant, the clown, and what not, and decided then and there that his future would be in the circus. He went to see Fred Bailey, general manager of the show, who took a liking to the boy and employed him. Shortly afterward Robinson died. James Cooper, another circus man, who had heard of Bailey, sent for him. It wasn't long before Bailey, then 21 years old, had an interest in the Cooper show, and was its practical manager. One day he said to Cooper:

"Let's take the show to Australia."

"Why, man, you're crazy," answered Cooper, with a laugh.

"No such thing," was the reply; "they never saw anything like it in Australia, and we can make money."

Cooper thought it over, and finally consented. Bailey superintended the trip and cleared more than $1,000,000 for Cooper and himself. That was his first great circus coup.

Soon after that, the great London circus, owned by Park, Davis & Dockrill, was stranded in the South, owing Dr. Reilley, a Spruce Street printer, about $60,000. The show was offered to Bailey, and assuming its $60,000 debt, he combined it with the Cooper concern and went into the business on his own hook. He soon had the show out of debt, and in his various manipulations toward the higher-goal circus entertainment never missed a step.

About this time he ran afoul of the Barnum circus. Bailey, with characteristic enterprise, had started a two-ring show and a spectacular finish for his entertainment, and was fighting Barnum at every point. Barnum felt his foe. Bailey would go into Bridgeport, Barnum's home town, and take in $2 where Barnum had taken in $1. Barnum wisely concluded that Bailey had better be sought, so he made a proposal to have the two shows combined under the name of Barnum & Bailey. This was done, and Barnum and Bailey became equal owners. And when Adam Forepaugh died soon afterward, Bailey bought an interest in his show, too.

One day Bailey selected Joseph Lee Warner, a former Mayor of Lansing, to go abroad and see what sort of attractions he could find. He came back practically empty-handed.

When He Bought Jumbo.

"What was the biggest thing you saw over on the other side?" asked Bailey.

"Well," answered Warner, after long thought, "I think the greatest thing I saw was an elephant in the London Zoo."

"Go back and buy him," said Bailey. Warner went over and came back with the elephant, which was thereafter known all over the country as "Jumbo." Bailey advertised Jumbo. It was Jumbo this and Jumbo that until every man, woman, and child in the country had heard of him. His removal from London was made an international incident. Jumbo had become one of the sights of the British capital, and they made a big fuss when he departed. Bailey paid $10,000 for him. The day in 1882 that Jumbo walked up Broadway and then across the Brooklyn Bridge and back, thousands of people turned out to see him. Everybody talked about Barnum's Jumbo. He was in reality Bailey's Jumbo, for Bailey had superintended the purchase. But he preferred to remain in the background.

Five years ago Mr. Bailey failed in health. He built for himself and his wife a handsome home in St. Nicholas Avenue overlooking the river. He filled it with treasures from the four corners of the earth, and bought a handsome stable. He lived a life of leisure for a while, but the circus life called him back, and he plunged into it again. In 1889 Bailey conceived the idea of taking his show to England.

"It can't be done," said old circus men. "The task is too big."

"Yes," replied Bailey, "even the military authorities say that it is impossible, but I'm going to show them something."

Bailey arranged for travel. The work of putting the show on a steamer was a spectacle. Freight cars and elephants were lifted by cranes and lowered into the holds of vessels. Every conceivable bit of circus paraphernalia was loaded between decks, and the show sailed. Bailey toured England for a year, and the English flocked to his entertainment. When he left them they told him to come back again.

Making an English Hit.

He promised that he would, for he loved England, and had incorporated his circus under the English laws. That incorporation showed some of Bailey's quality of finesse, for in incorporating the circus in England he paved the way for clear transportation from point to point, and arranged the agreement in such a way that no other circus could compete with him there.

After the year of the English tour Bailey returned to America and remained for nine years. Then he went over again, this time showing in all the countries of Europe, excepting Spain, Russia, and Italy. In Russia the railroads were of different gauge from the show cars, and transportation was therefore impossible. In Spain and Italy the language was so difficult to master that it was thought that presentation there would be unsuccessful.

In Germany, France, Norway, and Sweden and the other countries visited by the circus the verdict was one of approval. In Germany the circus had hard sledding for a time, however. The people of the various provinces would turn out to see the parade in the morning and then go home.

Parade Enough for Germans.

"Are you going to the performance this evening?" some one would ask.

"Performance?" would be the reply, "why we saw it all in the street this morning."

They couldn't realize that there could be anything else to see after the parade. The parades were abolished thereafter. Europe also had never seen anything like the posters, with their glaring portrayals of midair acts of ahtletics or "freak" features, and marveled thereat.

After a five-year tour the circus returned under the direction of Mr. Bailey, and has been in America ever since, wintering at Bridgeport.

For a brief interval Bailey quit the show business when the civil war started, and was employed as a clerk for A. H. Green, a sutler with Gen. Sherman's army.

Mr. Bailey was loved for his kindness to employes. His hand was always open for them and his pocketbook always at their disposal when they were really in need.

In December, 1868, Bailey was married to Ruth Louisa McCaddon, daughter of a resident of Zanesville, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey had no children, and Mrs. Bailey will inherit his circus stock, which is a majority of the shares of the company, as well as his shares in the Buffalo Bill Show, now in Europe.

MRS. J. P. THOMAS RISES 5,000 FEET IN BALLOON

cessful flight with all the nonchalance of an old-timer.

"My father," she said, "fought above the clouds in the civil war. Why should I be afraid to sail above them in a balloon which is the best that can be made and in charge of a safe and experienced man."

While the Thomas party was at lunch inflation of the balloon from the gas works was begun. When their luncheon was finished the bag was two-thirds full.

On the 2 o'clock train arrived Odin Thomas, the seven-year-old son of Dr. Thomas. The lad was just as eager as were his parents for the start to be made.

"Let me go up too, Papa?" he asked.

"Next time, my son," the doctor replied.

It was very cloudy and the air was chilly. Neither Dr. Thomas nor his wife had worn their furs, as they desired to enter the car as lightly clad as possible. It was so cold, however, that Mrs. Thomas was compelled to borrow a fur coat.

Crowd Watches the Ascension.

Residents of Pittsfield and the vicinity began to gather at the meadow at 1 o'clock. Special cars were run to accommodate the crowds. Two inches of snow fell here yesterday, and it was trampled into a slush. There was not much pleasure for anybody in the wait, but Dr. and Mrs. Thomas were seemingly oblivious of discomfort.

At 3 o'clock, with L'Orient tugging at her ropes, a pilot balloon was sent up. It shot into the air perhaps 1,500 feet and started southeast. At 3:18 o'clock everything was in readiness for the ascent. Dr. Thomas lifted his wife into the car, and as he did so a cheer went up. When he had stepped in beside her the sand bags which held the car to earth were slipped off, seven weighing 300 pounds having been taken for ballast, and, pending the final order to cast off, a dozen men swung to the edge. As filled, the L'Orient had a lifting capacity of 1,474 pounds.

There were four minutes of jockeying, under the direction of Stevens and Levee, and then came the order to let go. With a bound the balloon leaped a hundred feet. As it did so Mrs. Thomas opened a box and showered violets upon the upturned faces below her. At the same time Dr. Thomas took an American flag from his overcoat pocket and shook its silken folds in the breeze.

The first hundred feet had been a jump straight up. Then the balloon shot off at an upward tangent, a great inverted swoop that made the crowd catch its breath. Mrs. Thomas, her hands emptied of flowers, waved her handkerchief in final farewell. The doctor still had his flag.

Half way to Mount Washington the balloon, then at a height of about 1,000 feet, ran into the first bank of cloud. For an appreciable space, although it had loomed large the instant before, it was invisible. Then it reappeared to disappear again. As the mountain was hurdled it was in plain sight, but distance had dwindled the bellying bag until it looked like a pilot balloon itself, and the car was lost sight of altogether.

Only one other member of the Aero Club was present to-day, although Dr. Thomas is one of the oldest members of that organization. He was Mr. Sampson, a local manufacturer. Friends of Dr. Thomas commented sharply on the aloofness of club members. There were hints of jealousy.

Mayor Bagg of Pittsfield witnessed the ascension. He told Mr. Sampson that if bad weather conditions prevented the two ascents planned for Saturday under the auspices of that organization there would be no obstacles in the way of Sunday ascensions.

"Pittsfield is an up-to-date town," he said. "We're not mossbacks and we will allow no blue laws to interfere with us."

Leo Stevens said he would be unable to return for Saturday's ascensions. On that day Levee has contracted to make an ascent with Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt Field Bishop as passengers. Mr. Bishop is President of the Aero Club. Count de la Vaulx will make an ascension with Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Edgar.

WOMAN SHRIEKS AT NEGRO.

Mrs. Oliver, Whom He Struck, Much Excited in Court.

Mrs. Isabel Oliver of 292 West 142d Street, who was struck by a negro on Tuesday night on an elevated train near Columbus Avenue and Seventy-second Street, appeared in the West Side Court early yesterday morning, and told many times over how they would have hanged the offender in Alabama. She came originally from Alabama. Her husband, a cigar stand keeper in a Broadway hotel, tried to keep her quiet but could not.

Mrs. Oliver was so wrought up when the negro, Albert Trout of 217 West Sixty-second Street, obtained an adjournment until to-day on the charge of simple assault, that she waved her arms, shrieking:

"I want that nigger put away now. If I don't get justice I'll kill him myself. How dare the black wretch lay a hand on a white woman! He would never leave this court alive if this were Alabama."

She had to be led out of the courtroom. In the hallway she continued her hysterical talk. A policeman helped her husband to get her out of the building.

Quite a crowd had been attracted to the court by the report that a negro had struck a white woman in the face, and had been nearly lynched for it by angry passengers. They were disappointed with the case. Magistrate Barlow adjourned the hearing to allow counsel for Trout to obtain more witnesses.

REFUSES TO LET WITTE GO.

Czar Declines to Accept His Resignation—Democrats Quarreling.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 11.—The Strana, a Conservative-Liberal newspaper, says it has learned from a high authority that the Emperor has declined to accept Premier Wite's resignation.

A caucus of Constitutional Democratic members of Parliament-elect has been called for May 4 to formulate a line of action for the party. Dissensions, however, have appeared already and a split is quite probable. The most radical members favor a plan according to which they will decline to take the prescribed oath until the Emperor has sworn fidelity to a Constitution.

ASSAILS NEW RUSSIAN LOAN.

Probable Leader in Parliament Openly Threatens Its Repudiation.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 11.—A remarkable article assailing the new national loan, emanating from M. Petrunkevitch, the probable leader of the majority in the National Parliament, is published here to-day. It openly threatens unfavorable action if the Parliament is not consulted.

M. Petrunkevitch declares that the conclusion of a loan, which means the yearly addition of $1.23 to the tax burden of each family at a time of such stress and on the eve of the convocation of the National Parliament, can only be regarded as a new attempt on the part of the dying bureaucratic régime to strengthen itself for the struggle with the people.

Emperor to Receive Storer To-day.

VIENNA, April 11.—Bellamy Storer, the American Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, will be received in audience by Emperor Francis Joseph to-morrow.

Police Shake-Up Scheduled.

Police Commissioner Bingham said yesterday that he would shake up the officers of his department to-morrow or Friday. This is partly due to the reinstatement to the force of two Inspectors, four Captains, and seventeen Sergeants, retired for physical disability by ex-Commissioner McAdoo.

TRAMP THIEF HAD FUN IN THE LOVEJOY FLAT

Bathed, Put on New Clothes, Ate and Smoked a Bit.

THEN TOOK THE ELEVATOR

Tipped the Elevator Boy, Too—Seen Later with Two Baby Carriages, Which He Gives Up.

An unobserving elevator boy and a clever thief brought dismay last night to Warren Lovejoy, buyer for a dry goods house, who lives at the Mott Haven Apartment House, 680 to 690 East 138th Street.

At 4 P. M. yesterday a man who was described as looking like a tramp went into the Mott Haven and asked the elevator boy, John Meyers, if Mr. Lovejoy was at home. The boy did not know, but took the man up to the seventh floor, where the Lovejoys live, and left him there.

The elevator did not return to that floor for more than an hour. When it did it was to take a well-dressed, smooth-shaven man down. The man carried a bundle under his arm. After the man left the building the boy found a soiled collar and necktie on the seat in the car.

Mr. and Mrs. Lovejoy, with their child, were all downtown in the afternoon, and did not return until after 6 o'clock. When they entered their flat they saw the bath tub had been used recently. The remains of a sideboard luncheon displayed the fact that some one had been dining and had finished with a cigar; in fact, an entire box of cigars had disappeared.

Underclothing, a suit of clothes, an overcoat, silk hat, cane, new shoes, with spats, were also missing. The dresser drawers had been cleaned out. Besides, a lot of small trinkets and jewelry, pieces of bric-à-brac, gloves, linen, mirrors, and perfumery were gone.

The well-dressed man who left the Lovejoy flat tipped the elevator boy as he went out, and was thanked in turn by the accommodating youth. That came out when Mr. Lovejoy made an inquiry.

Mr. Lovejoy went at once to the Alexander Avenue Station and was able to give the police a good description of the man's clothing, as he knew exactly what his caller now wears. He knew also what the man did wear, as the visitor's clothes were all found in the kitchen behind a table.

The police say that two boys who were at 137th Street and Brown Place saw a well-dressed man with a bundle walking alone near them about 7:30 o'clock. The man was wheeling two baby carriages, and asked the boys to take care of them for a minute. He said he would be "right back."

The boys waited an hour and then took the carriages to the police station. Two young women who had been in front of the house at 730 East 138th Street were approached just before 7:30 o'clock by a man with two baby carriages, a bundle, and a cane. He asked them to take the carriages, as he did not want them. They refused, and the man went up the street. Where the carriages were taken from and what reason the man had to give them away puzzles the police.

The visitor to the Lovejoy flat and the man with the baby carriages seem to be one and the same.

POPULAR
PIANOS

YOUR piano is different from any other article in your home. There is a certain sentiment about its purchase that is lacking from that of any other article. If a man is judged by the company he keeps, why shouldn't his musical taste be judged by the piano he buys?

Then, after all, the name means everything. It tells the value and grade of a piano. The PEASE name stands for durability, fixed value, known worth and 62 years of experience in piano building.

We give three years to pay for a piano, if desired.

Used pianos of many makes from $125 up. Renting, exchanging. Write for catalog.

EASTER NEWS from the Simpson Crawford Co.

SIXTH AVENUE, 19th TO 20th ST., NEW YORK CITY.

Stocks kept complete right up to Easter

THOUSANDS of people in New York are just waking up to the realization of the fact that many things intended for the Easter wardrobe remain unbought. Only a few days for these tardy ones, but here's a comforting thought: Simpson Crawford Co. carry complete lines right up to Easter.

We doubt if there's a thing you'd like for Easter wear that we cannot furnish ready to put on—wearing apparel, millinery, gloves, neckwear, handkerchiefs, hosiery, etc., in a wider range of styles than at any other time of the year.

Another thing, we do not put prices up just because it's a busy time. We want your continued patronage, and we consider it poor policy to take advantage of the exigencies of the season. On the contrary, we always offer the best values at the time they're most needed.

Kayser lisle gloves.

SEVERAL hundred dozen of these famous gloves at 29c per pair. Of course there will be plenty of buyers. Main Floor.

They're genuine Kayser gloves—blacks and whites—2 clasp lisles— 29c

Stamped hats, waists, etc.

LOWEST prices and largest assortments in New York. If you'd like to know just how these fascinating, yet simply made, embroideries are done, an expert instructor is ready to show the whys and wherefores of the art in a way anybody can understand.

Fur storage.

WE protect furs, rugs, hangings, etc., from moths, fire or theft in our carefully guarded cold storage vaults. Third Floor.

Our fur department is fully organized under expert manager and skilled furriers. Repairs and alterations made now at our regular low Summer prices.

Send postal or phone 2100 Chelsea for our representative.

WE select our models from the foremost creators of continental Europe — men and women who give as much thought to the planning of women's apparel as a great artist would in conceiving and creating his masterpiece. Third Floor.

With these models for a basis we plan our own adaptations—Americanize an objectionable here, and there soften a line or accentuate a commendable style point, then with our specifications in hand, materials and trimmings prescribed, we have our garments made.

We don't let the manufacturer do the planning; if we did, we'd have to show shoppy creations.

That's why there's an exclusive character in every garment we show—a deft style touch that appeals to women who know how to dress and how to appreciate well-fashioned and perfectly fitting garments.

The superiority of the Simpson Crawford Co.'s apparel is more pronounced during our Easter showing than ever, and that you may know and realize the style difference of our garments we invite you to come and make a tour of the entire section. You'll not be importuned to buy. That is something we do not allow.

Doing as we do, one of the largest Suit and Coat businesses in America, we are able to get our prices down as low if not lower than asked elsewhere for the commonplace creations that possess these "shoppy" features that often warrant the dressy woman in going to the exclusive modiste.

SIMPSON CRAWFORD CO.

Favors and novelties for Easter parties.

AS you look over the corner of our candy department where the Easter Favors are sold you see scores of ingenious and pretty conceits. First the egg—chief symbol of Eastertide—white eggs of sugar—and brown chocolate eggs. Almost every color of the rainbow lends a tint to these and other favors. Sixth Floor.

Little tots on the tiptoe of expectation, with wide eyes of wonderment, press tiny noses against the glass showcases, eager for a sight of these pretty Easter toys.

The tender sentiment and playful humor of the season appear in a multitude of these favors. You wonder where and how all these ideas were come by. For instance, here is a stork on one of the tall chimneys of Strasburg, carrying a baby chick; there a pair of "peeps" perched on a table, playing dice, etc., etc., etc., etc.

5,000 pots Easter Lilies.

GORKY AND MARK TWAIN PLEAD FOR REVOLUTION

Committee Formed to Raise Funds for Russian Freedom.

TO ARM REVOLUTIONISTS

"I Come to You a Beggar That Russia May Be Free," Says Gorky at A Club Dinner.

The American auxiliary movement to aid the cause of freedom in Russia was launched last night at a dinner given at the Club A house, 3 Fifth Avenue, with Mark Twain and Maxim Gorky as the principal spokesmen.

"If we can build a Russian republic to give to the persecuted people of the Czar's domain the same measure of freedom that we enjoy, let us go ahead and do it," said Mark Twain. "We need not discuss the methods by which that purpose is to be attained. Let us hope that fighting will be postponed or averted for a while, but if it must come—" Mr. Clemens's hiatus was significant.

"I am most emphatically in sympathy with the movement now on foot in Russia to make that country free," he went on. "I am certain that it will be successful, as it deserves to be. Anybody whose ancestors were in this country when we were trying to free ourselves from oppression must sympathize with those who now are trying to do the same thing in Russia.

"The parallel I have just drawn only goes to show that it makes no difference whether the oppression is bitter or not; men with red, warm blood in their veins will not endure it, but will seek to cast it off. If we keep our hearts in this matter Russia will be free."

The dinner was given by Ivan Narodny, the representative in this country of the Russian military revolutionists, in honor of Maxim Gorky. The list of guests included Dr. Nicholas Tchaykoffsky, Robert Collier, Nikolay Zavolsky Pieshkoff, the adopted son of Gorky; Nikolas Burenin, his friend and private secretary; Arthur Brisbane, David Graham Phillips, Robert Hunter, Ernest Poole, Dr. Walter Weyl, Leroy M. Scott, and Howard Bruebaker. W. D. Howells and Peter Finley Dunne had been invited but were unable to attend.

Mark Twain's speech followed the reading by Robert Hunter of a manifesto formally inaugurating the American movement to help make Russia free. This movement will involve the appointment of a large committee of men of National reputation to aid in the collection of funds throughout the United States for the purchase of arms for the Russian revolutionists.

Mr. Clemens, Mr. Collier, Mr. Howells, Mr. Dunne, Mr. Hunter, Mr. Phillips, Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago, and others have already accepted places on the committee, and it was said by Mr. Hunter that invitations have been sent to a great number of others who are expected to join the movement.

Funds for Russian Freedom.

"The object of the committee," said Mr. Hunter, in his after-dinner speech, "is to collect funds to help the movement for Russian freedom. An appeal will be issued to the American public within a couple of days, and there is no doubt that there will be a generous response when we ask Americans to help the oppressed people of Russia to gain the same freedom that our fathers fought for, and which we have enjoyed these hundred years and more.

"In other words, we will ask the American people to aid the Russians in gaining freedom of the press, freedom of speech and of assembly, freedom of ballot, and of conscience. All these things we have in America, and to them we owe our well-being, our happiness, our peace, and our prosperity."

Mr. Hunter said after the dinner that the friends of the Russian cause gathered at 3 Fifth Avenue had so far scrupulously refrained from discussing the means by which the purpose of the Russian revolutionists is to be accomplished. They prefer to leave that to the revolutionists themselves. Among the latter there is practical unanimity at this moment that Russia's freedom can be gained only by an armed uprising.

The money raised here, it was said, will in all probability be handed over to a general committee composed of delegates from all the various organizations now at work to make Russia free. This, however, has not been definitely determined, and the final disposition of the funds remains at present in a large measure optional with the committee on this side.

Mark Twain sat on the right of M. Naorodny. Maxim Gorky sat on the right of Mr. Clemens. On the other side of the Russian writer sat his adopted son, who acted as interpreter during the animated conversation which was carried on between the American author and the writer who has depicted so vividly the tragic depths of the life of the lower classes in Russia.

Mr. Clemens, in beginning his speech, paid a warm tribute to Gorky, and this was returned by the Russian when his turn came to speak.

Gorky Praises Mark Twain.

"I am very glad to meet Mark Twain," he said. "I knew him through his writings almost before I knew any other writer. I was little more than a boy when I began to wait and hope for the meeting which has been realised to-night. It is a happy day—a day happy beyond all expectation to me.

"Mark Twain's fame is so well established all the world over that I could not add anything to it by any words of mine. He is a man of force. He has always impressed me as a blacksmith who stands at his anvil with the fire burning and strikes hard and hits the mark every time. He has done much to beat away the dross and bring out the true steel of character in his writings.

"I come to America expecting to find true and warm sympathizers among the American people for my suffering countrymen, who are fighting so hard and bearing so bravely their martyrdom for freedom. Now is the time for the revolution. Now is the time for the overthrow of Czardom. Now! Now! Now! But we need the sinews of war, the blood we will give ourselves. We need money, money, money. I come to you as a beggar that Russia may be free."

The remarks of the Russian writer were translated to the little company at the table by his adopted son, and were loudly applauded. Gorky did not appear in evening dress, but in the blue blouse, buttoned high up at the neck, which is familiar from the pictures of him which have appeared in print. Young Nikolay, in attire, was an exact replica of his father by adoption.

The Aldine Association will entertain Gorky next Wednesday at a luncheon at their rooms, 111 Fifth Avenue. The Socialists on the east side are planning a dinner for the Russian writer at some date yet to be fixed to suit his convenience. Another dinner is being planned at which he is to meet a number of literary men.

Gorky Feels at Home.

Looking out from his window high up in the Hotel Belleclaire Gorky saw the Hudson River yesterday afternoon and exclaimed:

"What, is this my native Nishni-Novgorod, and is this the Volga? Then I am at home, indeed."

A Russian friend, who was at his elbow at the time, said that Nishni-Novgorod and New York were words almost identical in their meaning. Gorky interrupted him and said:

"Oh, what does it matter after all? I feel at home, though the language of New York is not my own, and I do not understand a word of it. I never visited a place so kindling to my imagination. I had not been here one hour before I felt that this was the biggest city and the United States the greatest country on the face of the earth. This is the country of all countries to which the social revolutionists can look with hope. In this will be worked out the salvation of humanity."

Maxim Gorky was still the recipient yesterday of the devoted homage of his countrymen in New York and of the friends in this city of the cause of freedom for Russia. He received in the course of the day about 100 visitors, and he had hardly a breathing moment. But when the night came he was as happy as a boy who had found a new toy.

One of the first callers yesterday was Oscar S. Straus, formerly United States Minister to Turkey. Mr. Straus was a long time in explaining that he wished to see Mr. Gorky, and a protracted comedy of errors was enacted on the ninth floor while Mr. Straus was kept waiting in the lobby of the hotel.

Mr. Straus said that he had merely paid a social visit, but that he probably would see Gorky again, and that he might have something to say then.

Among the callers on the Russian novelist were Abraham Cahan, editor of The Jewish Forward, and himself a writer of some distinction as well as a Russian by birth.

Revolutionists Call.

Two members of the Russian Bund in this city paid their respects to the Russian and conferred with him upon the plans now pending to make Russia free. One of these was Dr. Maxim Romm. The other was Moses Gulevitch. Mr. Gulevitch escaped from a Russian prison eighteen months ago. He is a member of the Central Committee of the Nihilist organization, and was sent to this country by his political friends to be out of harm's way for the present.

That, as a matter of fact, is the reason for so many of the Russian revolutionists seeking a refuge here for the next few months. The first call to arms will see the procession starting back again.

Gorky was asked yesterday whether he was a subject of the Czar.

"Subject? No," replied the Russian writer. "I am not. I am a citizen of underground Russia. We are all citizens there just as you are in this great free country, and there are several millions of us. Politically, I'm an outlaw."

The Russian novelist told the reporters again and again that this city had made an almost overwhelming impression upon him.

"It is not quite as grand as the ocean, but almost," he said.

Marvels at The Times Building.

One of the skyscrapers of which Gorky got a close range view was the Times Building.

"Wonderful! wonderful!" he exclaimed, looking through his carriage window. "I mean to know how it is possible to erect such structures before I leave this country."

Gorky said that plans for his stay here had not been completed. His stay in New York will in all probability be more protracted than he at first had expected.

"There is so much to see, and I haven't seen anything as yet," he said, his wife acting as interpreter. "I have been a prisoner all day long in my apartments, but it wasn't unpleasant when compared with my prison experience in Russia. The first opportunity I get I shall take a drive through Central Park, of which I caught a glimpse on my way up from the steamer."

Gorky said that among English authors he admired Byron most, and among the French Gustave Flaubert and the elder Dumas. Among the Germans he registered his preference for Heine and Goethe among the poets, and Nietzsche and Schopenhauer among the philosophers.

Gorky was asked what he thought of Kipling as a writer.

"Kipling," he said, "is a man of bone and blood. He is a great poet and a greater novelist. But he should not lend his pen to the support of an ephemeral imperialism, even though the imperialism of Great Britain is humane and the word there means something different from what it means with us. Kipling should sing the songs of the people."

Regarding his own mode of writing, he said:

"I am not aiming at producing literature or art. I am striving to paint life as I find it and to tell the truth always."

"What have you read in American literature?" Gorky was asked.

"I have read Mark Twain. The reading proved an inspiration to me. It is part of the liberal education of Russia to read Mark Twain's works. They have all been translated and sold in hundreds of editions.

"And you would be surprised to know what the prestige of Edgar Allen Poe is among the Russian people. We love him better than his own countrymen do."

"I think that it is the women who prevent you from loving him as well as you should," broke in the writer's wife.

Mme. Gorky, who was an actress, was asked whether she had acted in her husband's plays. She said she had, but that it was long ago.

"At present I am just my husband's wife, nothing else, and I don't wish to be before the public in any other capacity," she said.

FOOD.

BETWEEN

The Devil and the Deep Sea.

When coffee gets a person well within its grip and the drug habit is fixed, then comes twisting and turning to get free.

With many people, if the coffee is left off at breakfast, a headache sets in, and if coffee is taken the old stomach and nervous disorders are simply added to and made more fixed and harder to escape from. Still there is a very easy way to freedom and health.

A woman in Mo. says:

"I never thought of attributing my ailments to coffee till, several months ago, I saw a Postum Food Coffee advertisement which stated that the old kind of coffee was frequently injurious to people, so I thought I would try Postum, anyway, for I was in a most wretched condition, a nervous wreck, with weak heart, which fluttered and threatened to stop.

"The first time I made Postum Coffee, I boiled it well and was delighted with the flavor. My husband, who did not know that it was not the old kind of coffee, relished it very much, saying: 'What good coffee that is!' But after breakfast I was taken with a headache and drowsiness caused by the lack of the customary drug. I was resolute, however, and drank it for dinner and supper. The next day the headache was not so bad, and by the third day it was gone. Day by day I felt better and better, and soon noticed that I did not tire so easily as I used to. In two weeks my friends began to compliment me on my improved condition. I rapidly gained in flesh and strength, and in three months was a new being, with strong, steady nerves and easy, comfortable, healthy heart action. I feel like thanking you so much for Postum Food Coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Headache, when coffee is left off, is rare, but is a sure, infallible sign of a poisoned, drugged nervous system, calling more and more for the drug that caused the trouble. To yield to the fierce demand of the drug habit is most humiliating and sinks the victim deeper, with certainty of fixed organic disease if persisted in. It is easy to change from coffee, if Postum Food Coffee is used in its place, for Postum well made—that is, boiled long enough—has the deep seal brown of Mocha and the soft, smooth (not strong) flavor much like old Gov't Java, the taste being distinct, however, and belonging only to genuine Postum. Leaving off the coffee that breaks down the nerve centres and taking a food drink that supplies the needed elements to rebuild them makes rapid change for the good.

DEFENDS JEWS IN CONGRESS.

McDermott, Facing Death, Speaks on the Crucifixion.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Knowing that he must face death in a few days, and that the speech might be his last, Representative Allan L. McDermott of New Jersey to-day surpriced the House with an Easter speech on the Crucifixion of Christ.

In form it was a defense of the Jews against the charge of having killed the Messiah. Mr. McDermott declared his opinion that the Gospel of Matthew had been tinkered with. He discredited all the evangelistic reports of Pilate's behavior at the trial of Jesus, and pointed out discrepancies in the accounts by Matthew and Luke of the infancy of Christ.

A dramatic interest was given to the speech by the condition of its author. Mr. McDermott has been a very sick man for a year, unable of late to give any attention to his Congressional duties, and in a few days he is to go on the operating table in a last effort to save his life. He spoke under the latitude allowed on the Post Office Appropriation bill, and said in part:

"With the approach of Easter come the stories of the threatened massacres in Russia. Men and boys, women and girls, babes in mothers' arms, are to be slaughtered by savage bigots, in whose brains the Russian Greek Church seems to have left no trace of mercy.

"In the name of Christ and the Cross men called Christians have tortured and slaughtered men, women, and children during 1800 years. Around the stake, in the torture chamber, and on the field of battle 'Christian soldiers' have been transformed into wild beasts, sparing none.

"Persecution of the Jews because they are Jews is to-day tolerated in but few parts of the Christian world, so far as the statute books go, but the spirit that is breathed in the words 'Christ killer' is found in the eyes and on the tongues of Christians in the New World as well as in the Old.

"The statement that Jesus Christ was crucified by the Jewish Nation is the wickedest falsehood that ever fell from human lips. If Christ was a mortal, if he was the son of Joseph and Mary, he was crucified by the Romans. If he was the Son of God, he was crucified by the direction of his Father. Under neither proposition can the Jews be held accountable."

"Christ was put to death not for assailing the Mosaic law, but because he was accused of treason to Tiberius. He was not stoned to death under the Mosaic law. He was crucified under the Roman law."

Coming to his plea for the Jews in Russia to-day he said:

"If it is reprehensible for the Jews not to believe, is not their punishment prescribed? Are they not to suffer in hell everlasting? Are they not to be boiled and baked and burned through countless trillions of years? This will, as I understand it, be sufficient to satisfy an offended God. Why, then, should the prospect not be sufficient to satisfy those who believe in peace on earth, good-will to man, and hell hereafter?

RUSSIAN ENOCH ARDENS.

Many Soldiers, Wrongly Reported Dead, Find Their Wives Remarried.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 11.—Among the Russian prisoners arriving from Japan there are many who had been reported dead by the General Staff and whose wives and other relatives had been so informed.

The unexpected reappearance of these men is causing all sorts of strange family complications, as many wives, under the impression that they were widows, have remarried.

The newspapers contain an account of a case in the Province of Perm, where a returning soldier found his wife already the mother of a child by a new husband. He took the matter to the village priest for settlement. The first husband offered to acquiesce in the new conjugal arrangement if he received $25, but the second husband was unable to pay the money and it was finally arranged that the wife should return to her first husband.

However, as the second marriage was considered to be legal and as official documents were at hand to prove the apparent death of the living husband, it was decided that the child born while the first husband was away must legally be registered as belonging to the second husband and that it must be cared for by him.

COSTLY DWELLING SOLD.

Finest House Ever Built on Speculation Bought by G. C. Clark.

The finest dwelling house ever erected in this city, on speculation or for sale in the open market, was bought yesterday by George C. Clark of Clark, Dodge & Co., bankers. The house, 1,027 Fifth Avenue, was sold to Mr. Clark by Benjamin A. Williams, the builder, for $540,000. Douglas Robinson of Charles S. Brown & Co. negotiated the deal.

The dwelling is of six stories and has a frontage of forty feet between Eighty-third and Eighty-fourth Streets. The front of the building is of white marble, built in the modern French style of architecture. Its interior is finished on a magnificent scale. It is one of two houses built by Mr. Williams at that point.

The other house, No. 1,026, of similar design, but a little smaller, was sold a few weeks ago to Mrs. Mary J. Kingsland, wife of William M. Kingsland, for $510,000.

B. & O. COLLECTOR VANISHES.

George J. Eberle's Accounts Short—Wife Ill at Her Home in Bayonne.

Detectives for the United State Fidelity & Guaranty Company are looking for George J. Eberle, for whom they furnished bond in his capacity as collector for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at Bayonne, and who is said to have absconded with funds of the road variously estimated at from $600 to $10,000.

The Bayonne police searched Eberle's home at 39 Willow Place yesterday in the hope of finding some of the money which he might have left when he disappeared recently, but they were unsuccessful. Eberle had been in the employ of the railroad for several years. Recently he was credited in Bayonne with having inherited a fortune from a relative.

His wife is ill at her home.

BIMBERG TO BUILD ANOTHER.

His Newest Theatre Will Have a Stage Like the Hippodrome's.

Meyer R. Bimberg, who has just sold the Yorkville Theatre to Hurtig & Seamon for $285,000, said yesterday that he intends to build a new theatre at 116th Street and Third Avenue, to be known as the Auditorium.

The stage of this newest theatre will have the unusual depth of 48 feet, and the proscenium will be 42 feet in depth, which will allow the production of spectacular melodramas on a large scale. Even spectacles like "The Society Circus," now at the Hippodrome, may be given on the Auditorium stage without any changes whatever.

The Auditorium will accommodate 3,000 persons, 1,000 on the first floor and 2,000 in the balcony and gallery. Mr. Bimberg says that the Auditorium will be the last theatre he will build.

DINNER MARKS UNION OF ART ORGANIZATIONS

American Artists' Society Dines in Vanderbilt Gallery.

CELEBRATED PAINTERS THERE

Signatures Now Obtained for the Merger with the National Academy of Design.

More than one hundred artists assembled in the Vanderbilt Gallery of the American Fine Arts Building last night at a farewell dinner given by the Society of American Artists.

The dinner was arranged to mark the closing days of the society as an organization of artists prior to its merger with the National Academy of Design.

While the union of the two art organizations was voted some time ago, the last steps toward consummating the union were taken only yesterday when the final signatures to the merger were obtained from members of both societies. By this union the Academy of Design absorbs the younger art society, and on May 9, when the annual meeting of the Academy is held, the society as an art body will cease to exist.

John La Farge, President of the society, presided at the dinner, and the artists gathered in the Vanderbilt Gallery, where many of their own pictures are now hung.

Following the dinner Mr. La Farge made an address, in which he described the formation of the Society of American Artists and its growth, and sketched its history to the present time.

Other speakers were Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke, Frederick Dielman, and Kenyon Cox. Edward Robinson, Assistant Director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and John W. Beatty, Art Director of the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburg, were among the guests present.

Others present included Prof. Brander Matthews of Columbia University, John Harsen Rhoades, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Watson Gilder, Robert W. De Forest, Thomas B. Clarke, Henry G. Dearth, Dr. Alexander C. Humphreys, H. Bolton Jones, Charles A. Lopez, Walter Nettleton, Sir William Van Horne, J. Scott Hartley, Mr. and Mrs. Will H. Low, Walter Shirlaw, C. Y. Turner, E. H. Blashfield, Mrs. Kenyon Cox, Charles C. Curran, John W. Alexander, Herbert Adams, J. C. Nicoll, George W. Maynard, Leonard Ochtman, Walter Launt Palmer, Harry W. Watrous, J. Francis Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Vannoie, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Poor, Henry B. Snell, Carlton T. Chapman, Robert W. Van Boskerck, Alphonse Jongers, Emil Carlsen, F. Louis Mora, Ben Foster, Louis Loeb, William H. Howe, Edward H. Potthast, W. Glackens, and Frederick Crowninshield.

The artists are much interested in obtaining a new site for an enlarged building for art exhibitions, and now that the union of the two societies is accomplished, a definite announcement in this direction is looked for shortly.

RAPID TRANSIT TO NEWARK.

Agreement Between Pennsylvania Railroad and Tunnel Company.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—The Directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to-day authorized President Cassatt to enter into an agreement with the Hudson River Tunnel Company for the joint use of the railroad company's right of way between Jersey City and Newark. It is the initial step toward an extensive rapid transit system between the two cities.

Improvements involving the expenditure of $500,000 were also authorized by the board.

Under the terms of the contract to be entered into by the two corporations, the Hudson River Company is to build an electric railway between Newark and Jersey City. The tracks will parallel the Pennsylvania's tracks into Jersey City. They will then descend into the McAdoo tunnels to New York.

MORTGAGE TAX REPEAL GOES THROUGH SENATE

Recording Tax Substituted, but Governor May Veto It.

A LIVELY NINE-HOUR DEBATE

Republican Leaders Fought It All Through—A Corporation Measure, Says Armstrong.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 11.—After more than nine hours of debate and useless filibustering on the part of a hopeless minority, the Senate to-night passed the Dowling-Page bill for the repeal of the mortgage tax law passed at the last session, and substituting therefor a recording tax of one-half of 1 per cent.

The bill was passed with the aid of Republican votes.

There seems to be no doubt that the Governor will either veto the bill outright or he will send it back to the Senate with suggested changes. This was admitted on the floor by both Senators Page and Grady. They said that the bill might be faulty in various regards, but that they did not purpose to have it held in the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment until such time as it would go to the Governor as a thirty-day bill. Under the jamming-through process which was invoked to-day, the bill will go to the Executive, will probably come back for amendment, and then will go again to the Governor as a thirty-day bill. Whatever of censure may attach to the failure to have the measure finally become statute law will by this means rest on the Governor.

Senator Lewis, Chairman of the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment, said that he considered the bill in its present form the most gigantic conspiracy to deprive and defraud the people of the State of their funds that had ever been conceived. He said he did not believe that there was an honest motive behind the measure, and that its passage was being brought about by methods thoroughly disreputable and dishonest.

Senator Page started the ball rolling by moving the suspension of all the Senate rules so that the committee might be discharged, the bill be brought out on the floor, advanced to third reading, and finally passed. That brought out the first test vote and showed the Page following solidly intrenched. The motion prevailed, 30 to 19.

Then followed a heated passage between Raines and Page, in which the Canandaiguan accused the New Yorker of being the representative of corporate interests, which would be benefited by the passage of the bill, and amended the statement when Page defied him to prove his assertion by saying that while Page was not actually retained by the corporations yet he was doing yeoman service for them by the present bill.

Senator Armstrong allied himself with the opposition to the bill. He said that at the hearing on it the men who attended bore none of the evidence of being poor borrowers who wanted relief. He asserted that during the insurance investigation he had come upon a list which showed that the contributors to a $22,000 fund to beat the mortgage had been the big insurance companies and banks and trust companies, all lenders of money, and that not one borrower was on the list.

"The capitalist is using the borrower to pull his chestnuts out of the fire," said Armstrong. "It is well known that the tax this year from mortgages would be $800,000, next year $3,000,000, and after that about $10,000,000 a year. They knew, these corporate interests, that if they did not get the law repealed this year they never could repeal it when it had been shown what a revenue producer it was. It reminds me of a verse I heard not long ago:

The tarantula sat on the scorpion's back
And laughed with ghoulish glee.
Said he, If I don't do this son of a gun
He certainly will do me."

Grady made the situation of the proponents clear, which includes the expectation that the Legislature will adjourn April 28. He said the first consideration was to get the bill to the Governor. He said he wanted the Governor to point out any imperfections, and that then the Senate would amend the bill to meet his wishes before again sending it back as a thirty-day bill.

Then began the six long hours of filibustering. Lewis introduced twenty separate and distinct amendments, and on each of them Raines, Lewis, Coggeshall, Malby, and Cassidy spoke.

This was the vote on final passage:

Railroad Company Fined Heavily.

ALBANY, April 11.—Justice Fitts of the Supreme Court to-day rendered a judgment for $5,802 in favor of the State against the City Island Railroad Company, which operates a railroad from Marshall's Corners to Belden Point, Westchester County. The judgment is a penalty of $250 and $25 per day from September 1 last to April 10 for the neglect to file its report for the year ended June 30, 1905, in accordance with the railroad law.

NIAGARA FALLS MONOPOLY.

Assembly Passes Bills Repealing Charters of Four Companies.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 11.—The Assembly to-day passed the four L'Hommedieu bills repealing the charters of certain Niagara power companies. If the bills should become laws only two charters would be left.

The four bills practically create a monopoly for the Niagara, Lockport and Lake Ontario Power Company.

Barbers' Law Repeal.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 11.—The Barber Board of Examiners is now but one stage removed from extinction. Only the Governor's approval of the Brackett bill legislating the commission out of office is needed. The measure passed the House to-day—104 to 8.

CLUB FOR INSURANCE TRUST.

Now Bill, Aimed at Combination in Fire Rates, Reported.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 11.—Assemblyman Alfred E. Smith of the Second New York District to-day succeeded in getting out of committee a fire insurance bill that has been introduced regularly for the past four or five years, but which has never got any further than the committee.

The bill is aimed primarily at the so-called fire insurance trust. Among other things it does is to interfere with the so-called tariffing of districts, whereby agents get together, block out a district, and put a minimum figure for insurance on every piece of property within its boundaries. It is said to be the rule to submit all risks to the "combination." For an agent to do otherwise is to submit him generally to blacklisting and his being driven from the combination. In no case can he place the risk elsewhere, unless the agents have determined it is not worth their while.

The Smith bill makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $250 to $1,000 for fire insurance companies or their agents to "enter into or maintain pools, trusts, conspiracies, or agreements to control rates of insurance."

This year, the Insurance Committee, with Rogers at its head, and Cox, Smith, and Steffens upon it, has reported out bills pretty much on their merits, and lobbyists have found the committee absolutely unmanageable.

DIVIDING THE JUDGESHIPS.

Bill Said to be Backed by McCarren and Ward Reported.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 11.—The Judiciary Committee of the Assembly to-day reported out the Carpenter bill creating the Ninth Judicial District out of the Counties of Westchester, Orange, Rockland, Dutchess, and Putnam, and leaving Kings, Queens, Richmond, and Suffolk as the Second District. Together they shall constitute the Second Department.

This bill has been charged to be the result of an understanding between McCarren and Ward, bosses of Kings and Westchester, respectively, whereby Republican nominations in the Ninth would be practically equivalent to an election, with a corresponding situation in the Second relative to Democratic Supreme Court nominees.

RECONCILES THE LOGANS.

Probation Officer Is to Look After Them and James Will Stop Drinking.

Through the efforts of Probation Officer Van Keuren of the Harlem Court Olive Logan, the lecturer, authoress, and stage beauty of thirty years ago, has become reconciled to her gray-haired husband, James O'Neill Logan, whose arrest she caused on Tuesday on a charge of non-support and intoxication. Her husband has promised to brace up and stop drinking, and he willingly consented to be put in custody of Van Keuren, who brought about the reconciliation.

The probation officer will collect the old man's salary and provide for the wife as well as for the husband. Logan, who has a job at Ellis Island, declared yesterday that $70 was owed to him there, and consented to let Van Keuren draw the money for him.

The non-support case has been set down for hearing on April 22, but if all goes well it will be dismissed on that date.

SMOKE MAKERS IN COURT.

One Prisoner Out of Four Held—More Arrests Last Night.

John Schott, manager of the cigar box factory of Nicholas Althaus at 637-641 East Seventeenth Street was in Yorkville Court yesterday, charged with causing a smoke nuisance. Policeman Kennedy said he saw heavy black smoke issuing from the factory chimney yesterday afternoon and found soft coal in the boiler room. Lawyer Spielberg, counsel for the manager, asked Kennedy:

"Are you an expert on coal, and can you swear it was soft coal you saw?"

"No, I'm not an expert," replied Kennedy.

"Your Honor," said Spielberg, "since Commissioner Darlington issued his edict against soft coal users my clients have not used any. They were burning rubbish in the fires yesterday, and the rain made it look like soft coal smoke."

Magistrate Mayo adjourned the case till to-morrow.

Magistrate Barlow held in $500 bail Bradley Hanahan, a fireman in the Hotel Regent, at Seventieth Street and Broadway.

Last night Richard Cumberland, fireman at the Hotel Wellington, Fifty-fifth Street and Seventh Avenue, and John Tooher, fireman at the Hotel St. Hubert, West Fifty-seventh Street, were arrested for alleged violations of the smoke ordinance.

GOULD'S RAILROAD LETTER.

He Wrote It to Prove He Hadn't Bought Heavily of Reading.

The cross-examination of George J. Gould in the trial of the milion-dollar suit of Morris C. Menges against Gen. Louis Fizgerald was continued yesterday before Justice Sutherland and a jury in Part II. of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn.

Mr. Gould reiterated his statement that he had subscribed $1,000,000 to the Western Maryland syndicate merely out of friendship for one of the members of the syndicate.

He added that false reports had been circulated to the effect that he had been a heavy investor in Reading stock, and that these statements were made to lead others to believe that the syndicate was seeking possession of the Western Maryland Railroad to consolidate it with the Reading Railroad.

The people of Baltimore were hostile to the Reading Road and he believed he should deny this. Therefore he wrote a letter to the Mayor of Baltimore denying these reports. The letter was produced.

The rest of the day was taken up by the reading of a deposition of Mayor Hayes of Baltimore.

THE NEW EXCISE LAW GENERALLY APPROVED

Commissioner Healy Says It Is the Best Ever Given This City.

FAKE HOTEL MEN WORRIED

Offices of Brewers' Representative Crowded with Raines Law Proprietors Seeking Renewal Applications.

Edward H. Healy, the Special Deputy Commissioner of Excise for Manhattan and the Bronx, said yesterday that he considered the Prentice bill signed on Tuesday by the Governor the best excise law ever provided for this city.

The Commissioner said the statement printed in THE TIMES yesterday that hotel keepers who failed to file their applications for liquor tax certificates before April 15 would have to shut down on May 1 was practically true. While the law did not specify April 15 as the day for filing, he said, it did provide that no special permits to keep open should be issued by the Commissioner unless the applicant for a liquor tax certificate had filed his application fifteen days before the day on which he intended to do business. As renewals of liquor tax certificates are due May 1, it naturally followed that applications for them would have to be made at least fifteen days before that date.

One of the snags which the hotel keeper may run up against is this: The bonding companies, having formed a syndicate for the handling of excise business, may refuse at the last minute to accept the risk of furnishing the required bond. It was said yesterday that many hotel men would have to pay as much as $500 to obtain real estate sureties. The reason for this lies in the fact that last year many of the bonding companies lost money in taking risks in excise cases. At their meeting Tuesday the surety men decided to take twenty-four hours to consider an application for a bond.

Mr. Newstead, who is the brewers' excise representative, remained on duty in his office all night Tuesday night. He was overwhelmed with excise business on account of the delay caused by the bonding companies in refusing to agree on the premium rate while the Prentice bill was pending before the Legislature. At daylight hotel keepers began to arrive at Newstead's office. They called to get him to prepare their applications for liquor tax certificates. He put fifty clerks to work on the papers as soon as he got word from the brewers that the hotel men would have to pay the new $40 fee or close their places.

The work of stamping out the vicious Raines law hotels of New York was begun a few years ago by the late William H. Baldwin, Jr., who called the attention of the public to the fact that these places fostered traffic in vice. At that time Mr. Baldwin, who was Chairman of the Committee of Fifteen, which took an active part in the crusade against vice in New York, recommended that a law be enacted such as passed the Legislature Tuesday. Other committees of public-spirited citizens took up the matter after Mr. Baldwin's death.

In speaking of the new law yesterday the Rev. Dr. John P. Peters said that his committee was greatly pleased by its enactment.

"While we are not a society of vice crusaders," said Dr. Peters, "we have a definite object in view, and we believe that we are going to accomplish our purpose and wipe out the Raines law hotels with the aid of the new law. The Prentice law will protect the legitimate hotel keepers while driving out the fakes and dive keepers."

GETS BACK TROUSSEAU MONEY

Miss Arns Testifies She Was Jilted After Naming the Day.

A jury before Justice Fitzgerald in the Supreme Court brought in a verdict for $1,000 in favor of Miss Maria A. Arns yesterday in her breach of promise suit against August D. Reimer for $15,000. In her testimony Miss Arns asserted that she had spent $1,500 for a trousseau, but when it was ready Reimer declined to marry her because she was a Roman Catholic and he was a Lutheran.

This was the second trial of the action. On the first trial the plaintiff received a verdict of $9,000.

Brilliant Bargains in Millinery.

The first of these is a sale of the popular "Johnny Jones" Sailors, one of the best and best-selling of the season's novelties in hats.

These are selling everywhere else, as most women know, at $5 to $6, when trimmed with the skill and beauty that are displayed in those we shall show you.

We have a lot of 500 of the highest grade made, in a choice offering, any shade you wish and black and white, which we can offer to-day at 2.65

$5.00

Receives New Additions Daily.

Although Famous for Years As a Feature of Our Millinery Display It is Larger and Better This Week Than Ever in Its History.

The other feature is the greatest Flower Sale that has been held for years. This began on Monday with 1,000 boxes of the finest French millinery flowers, and is freshened for to-day by the addition of several hundred more boxes—probably the last we can secure at these prices.

Rose Montures,
Large Daisy Sprays,
June Roses, Wild Flowers, and every other blossom known to Spring and Summer, at one-third the regular prices, 45c and 25c

One of Our Princess Suits.

We never guess at values. When we say "This is a $25 Suit" there is just one of two reasons for the statement. One is that our own price has formerly been, or would be under ordinary conditions, $25. The other is that a similar suit is at the time we write actually marked $25 in another good store.

Now this Princess Suit, illustrated here, is a $25 suit on both grounds. You could not have bought it even at this store yesterday except at $25, and you cannot buy a suit as good as it anywhere else to-day or to-morrow under that price.

Our price to-day will be

It's a one day special—one day because the number we have won't ~~last any~~ longer.

And it's a bargain to jump at, not only because you save the cost of a good hat on the price, but also because you will get as pretty, as stylish and as tasteful a suit as the season has shown.

Choice of two styles, one in black and white checked worsted, the other in the popular mixture of light and dark gray tweed.

The trimming is simple, but very effective—taffeta braid and lace. Skirt is made as a Princess skirt should be—extra carefully, and boned with whalebone.

Values just as good in two other styles, one an Eton, the other a box coat suit, at the same price,

This Superb Silk Coat, $21.50.

This is a frank and faithful copy of a $40 coat, made up in silks almost identically the same in quality, and made quite as well.

Only—we got the silk cheaper than the $40 man did, and made up a larger quantity. And we haven't charged you for the style.

It's a beautiful garment—not even a newspaper picture can disguise that fact. Made 45 inches long in your choice of a rich and heavy black taffeta; a soft and lustrous peau de soie or a shining "cloth of gold." Box plaited front, back and sleeves, with elaborate hand-made collar and cuffs of taffeta bands and silk braid.

A garment as serviceable as it is stylish. An effective finish to the finest costume, and with just enough warmth to guard against the milder chills of Spring.

Another Bargain.

Women's Strapped Coats of double and twist covert cloth or black broadcloth, 22 inches long and taffeta lined. Coat is formed of 33 straps and has strap-trimmed sleeves. A popular style usually sold for $12.50 at least $9.75

Still Another Bargain.

Women's "Vanity Coats" of dependable black taffeta; prettily pleated front, back and sleeves; tastefully trimmed with wide, black silk braid, crocheted ornaments and buttons. A very handsome coat for a moderate price..... $6.75

MINERS MAY PROPOSE A KIND OF ARMISTICE

To Resubmit First Proposal, Pending Commission's Inquiry.

TO MEET OPERATORS TO-DAY

Men May Resume Work If the Armistice Is Ordered—Steamships Short of Coal.

While none of the anthracite operators would talk yesterday of the negotiations with President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers and his Committee of Seven, it was learned unofficially that they are willing to keep them up as long as Mitchell wishes. They will give Mitchell all the time he wants to make up his mind and will not attempt to break the suspension of work until Mitchell chooses to declare that all negotiations are off.

The representatives of individual operating companies who signed the protest against the union and its methods were of the opinion that some kind of settlement would be reached, but the operators would make no prediction as a body.

The miners' Scale Committee of thirty-six met yesterday at the Ashland House and prepared an answer to the new proposal of the operators which will be submitted at the joint meeting of the two committees to-day. The answer of the miners, it was said, will be as follows:

"We again hereby respectfully submit to you our original propositions, subject to the investigation by the Coal Strike Commission which you have proposed."

The argument of Mitchell's committee is expected to be that, as the operators have always expressed confidence in the Coal Strike Commission and were willing to submit to that body the question whether any new arbitrable points had arisen, they ought not to be afraid to submit all the proposals of the miners to the commission.

When the Scale Committee heard Mitchell's report to the conference with the operators on Tuesday, the members were at first doubtful what to do. Some of the members were highly incensed at the giving out for publication by the operators of the protest signed by the independent operators denouncing the union. They declared that in the face of negotiations for peace it was an insult to the miners. At first some of them wanted to make it an issue in the case, but cooled down later as the protest had been overruled by the Operators' Committee of Seven.

Mitchell, when asked if this protest would have any effect in determining the course of the miners, said:

"Not the slightest. It will not have any effect whatever. I did not think it worth considering."

The miners at the Ashland House said last night that at the conferences with the operators the question of wages was fully considered.

District Presidents Nicholls and Dettrey of the miners said that at one of the conferences Dettrey made a plea for higher wages for the men who got the poorest wages. He was supported by Nicholls, who said to President Thomas of the Lehigh Valley Railroad:

"Do you expect any decent American workingman to try to support himself and those dependent on him on $1.29 a day?"

"I wouldn't care at this time to go into the question of how we can expect men to work around the collieries for $1.29 a day," replied Mr. Thomas, "but I will say that I myself have worked in the mines for less than that and was glad to get the chance to do so."

The meeting of the committees of the operators and miners is scheduled to begin to-day at 1:30 P. M. in the Jersey Central Building. Soft coal operators who have interests in the Clearfield District of Pennsylvania, which supplies New York and Philadelphia, said that the joint convention between the Clearfield soft coal operators and the miners, which was postponed once before, has again been postponed until Tuesday. The Clearfield operators do not want to take final action regarding the miners' demands until they know whether or not there will be an anthracite strike. If the anthracite strike takes place they will settle with the miners.

The steamships in this harbor which are supplied with soft coal by the Clearfield operators are now short of coal. Some of the local dealers are having hard work to get them a supply.

It was learned last night that it is the intention of Mitchell, in case the answering proposal of the miners is accepted to-day, to order the miners back to work at once, pending the decision of the Anthracite Strike Commission.

COAL MEN TO ROOSEVELT.

They Ask Him to Help Settle Southwestern District Disputes.

KANSAS CITY, April 11.—The Southwestern Coal Operators' Association, at a meeting here to-day, decided to appeal to President Roosevelt to help effect a settlemen of the differences existing between the operators and the bituminous miners now out in the Southwest. W. C. Perry was appointed to go to Washington and present the resolution to the President. Mr. Perry to-night said that he would start on his mission probably within two weeks.

The operators adopted another resolution to the effect that they will never recede from their present position if receding on their part will involve an increase in the price of coal to consumers. Six operators were expelled for signing the 1903 scale.

CHICAGO, April 11.—Following the announcement of higher coal prices Illinois mine operators prophesy a serious shortage of bituminous fuel in Chicago within the next two or three weeks. Simultaneously anthracite coal rose 50 cents per ton, responsive to the feeling that the hard coal operators and miners will fail to reach an agreement in New York.

JIMINEZ SUED FOR FEE.

Cunningham, Friend of Senators, Wants $25,000 for Aiding Revolution.

Echoes of the perennial revolutions which keep the pot boiling in the Republic of Santo Domingo reached the Supreme Court yesterday, where Gen Juan J. Jiminez, the former President of the republic, is the defendant in a suit before Justice Fitzgerald and a jury.

Gen. Jiminez was not present. Joseph Cunningham, who was formerly a well-known figure in Washington, where he was the intimate friend of many Senators and Congressmen, is the plaintiff. He is seeking to recover $25,000 for services rendered in fitting out the Fanita expedition, which sailed from Mobile for Santo Domingo on May 24, 1897.

Gen. Jiminez was represented by Perry Allen, while E. P. Phillips appeared for Mr. Cunningham.

The summons and complaint lacked definite information concerning the nature of the services rendered by the plaintiff, but he said on the witness stand that he had reduced his claim for $65,000 to $25,000 for the reason, he declared, that Gen. Jiminez considered the former amount too much to ask for services which were really rendered to the United States.

According to the plaintiff, he agreed to see certain persons and make certain arrangements, which were not named by him on the witness stand. In a preliminary interview he declared he and Gen. Jiminez reviewed everything that the latter and Gen. Augustin Morales had been doing, and that he was then informed that $25,000 would not be considered an exorbitant demand for his services.

Later the plaintiff said he rendered an account to Gen. Jiminez for $20,000 for services rendered up to a certain time. He was to receive $25,000 more, he said, for going to Washington and other places. Then he made an additional trip to Mobile, for which it was agreed that he was to get $15,000. He had paid some money out of his own pocket besides in connection with the enterprise, and the total figured up to $65,000, he said.

"Gen. Jiminez," said Mr. Cunningham, "remarked that $65,000 was a good deal to ask him to pay for services rendered to 'Uncle Sam.' He thought I ought to be satisfied with $25,000. He said if I would agree to accept that amount he would give me a note, payable in three months at Mobile, and would give me $300 for the expenses I had incurred in Mobile. He gave me the $300."

The memorandum, according to the evidence, was put in a sealed envelope and turned over to the Colonial Trust Company, to be taken care of. It was not to be opened unless $2,000 was paid over to the trust company, except with the consent of the parties interested.

Lawyer Phillips wanted the envelope opened in court, but Joseph M. Babcock of the Colonial Trust Company, who had it with him in obedience to a subpoena, declined to take the responsibility of disclosing the contents unless directed to do so by the court. The package might have been an infernal machine, if the manner in which everybody except Lawyer Phillips fought shy of it might serve as an indication of its real nature. Justice Fitzgerald wouldn't order Mr. Babcock to open it.

Justice Fitzgerald, however, suggested a way to get at it. He said the proper procedure would be to make a motion in Special Term for an examination of the envelope. Then a referee would be appointed to undertake the task. If Lawyer Phillips would consent to the withdrawal of a juror, the Justice said, the case would be on such a footing that the question could be disposed of in court.

The matter was discussed for a few minutes, when an adjournment was taken until to-day.

At the time the Fanita expedition sailed from Mobile it was supposed that its destination was Cuba. Instead the vessel sailed to Monte Christo, Santo Domingo. Morales and Jiminez then seized the palace. Lilias Herreaux was then President of the republic. He collected his forces and drove out Jiminez and Morales, the latter being killed in the attempt to board the Fanita. Herreaux was succeeded by Carlos Morales, who later gave place to Jiminez.

DIVORCED, ASKS FOR RING.

It's a Diamond and Mrs. Roth Says Her Husband Took It Back.

Mrs. Julia Roth's suit against her former husband, Isaac N. Roth, to recover $600, the alleged value of the engagement ring given to her by him, was decided in favor of the defendant before Justice Green, in the City Court, yesterday.

The couple were married in 1889, and when Roth sued for divorce in 1901, naming Marius De Zayas, a Mexican artist, as corespondent, they were living at 235 Brook Avenue, in the Bronx. Mrs. Roth told the jury that she took the ring off one day to wash her hands, just after she and her husband began to quarrel over the Mexican. Roth, she declared, picked the ring up and refused to return it.

Roth testified that after he had taxed his wife with being too friendly with the Mexican she took the ring off and, handing it to him, exclaimed: "Take back your ring; I am not good enough for you."

Motorman Runs Down Four Persons.

CHICAGO, April 11.—Four persons were injured, two of them fatally, to-day, when P. J. Daley, motorman on an Indiana Avenue car, ran into a throng of people who were trying to cross Wabash Avenue at Adams Street. W. P. Kelley, a Pullman car conductor, and D. E. Tamagno, an electrician, were fatally hurt. Daley made no effort to stop his car after running into the crowd. He was arrested.

TO SUMMON DR. MYERS FOR POOLROOM EVIDENCE

The Brooklyn Minister Says the Police Ought to Get It.

THIS SURPRISES BINGHAM

"Don't See Why He Should Be So Particular," He Remarks—Society Charges Police Graft.

A subpoena was issued yesterday morning at the request of Deputy Police Commissioner Mathot by Magistrate Finn, summoning the Rev. Cortland Myers, pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle, Brooklyn, to attend in the Jefferson Market Court to-day and testify in "John Doe" proceedings. Several days ago Dr. Myers wrote to Mayor McClellan, alleging that poolrooms were in full blast in Manhattan, especially in the Tenderloin, under the eyes of the police. A list of these resorts was inclosed. The Mayor referred the communication to Police Commissioner Bingham.

The Commissioner requested Dr. Myers to produce the evidence in his possession, but this he refused to do on the ground that it was the business of the police to collect their own evidence.

It was then decided to summon him to court by regular subpoena to compel him to testify. The officer who was intrusted with the writ failed to find him yesterday, and the case was adjourned until next week, when it is expected that Dr. Myers will be present.

Dr. Myers is President of the Society for the Enforcement of the Criminal Law, a Brooklyn organization, and was very prominent in 1903 in a campaign against Brooklyn poolrooms that resulted in the closing of fifteen. It is believed that his unwillingness to come forward and give evidence is based on a decision given in the Yorkville Court in 1902, after a raid on a poolroom in Forty-second Street. A gambler was killed there by a county detective, and the police wanted to call outside witnesses to prove the character of the place. The Magistrate ruled that citizens could not be forced to give such testimony, and that it was the business of the police to collect it for themselves.

Commissioner Bingham discussed the matter yesterday afternoon. He said:

"Dr. Myers sent me a list of places, all of which were on our own list except two. The trouble is we can't get legal evidence. If he's got it, by God, I want it. If he tells us anything we don't know we'll get busy; but if we fail we want what he can tell us."

"Is it 'up to' him to supply evidence?" the Commissioner was asked.

"I was surprised not to find him willing to tell us what he knows. I don't see why he should be so darned particular. He seems to be at home to everybody except a policeman."

A reporter said:

"In fact you've called his bluff and asked for a showdown."

"I would not put it so crudely. I'm not a gentleman, but I'm trying to be one."

Dr. Myers was not disposed to discuss the affair, but he said:

"If we can do what the Commissioner can't, God help the city. What are we paying the police and the District Attorney's office for if they can't get evidence? Why don't they get men from Philadelphia and Boston and Jersey City, if their own detectives are too well known?

"I have heard it all before. Some years ago I declared there were poolrooms in Brooklyn. The police said there weren't, and, anyhow, they couldn't get evidence. The society set four men to work, and we got enough evidence, slips with the money in it and so on, to convict fifteen poolrooms in one day. It cost the society $3,000, and Kings County got $6,000 out of it."

"Have you used the same methods now?"

"I'm not saying anything about it now. It would be a nice thing for me to spend $3,000 in getting evidence, wouldn't it? I sent a list of 50 or 75 names to the Commissioner, and told him that was only a partial list. I should think there may be 250 poolrooms in the city in full blast. The conditions are worse than ever."

"Have you any personal evidence of the resorts?" he was asked.

"It's not my business to get evidence. I'm a minister of the Gospel. But I'm not the sort of man to get into a thing without knowing where I stand."

"Will you answer when you are summoned to court?"

"Well, I'll see to that when the times comes."

It was said yesterday at the offices of Dr. Meyers' society, 108 Fulton Street, that the graft of the police in the poolrooms has been reduced to a system. Inspectors, it was declared, receive $120, Captains $60, and Wardmen $10 a month for being conveniently blind.

The agents of the society were asked if it was true that their representatives had been in Albany this week seeking the removal of the Commissioner from Gov. Higgins. They declined to deny it.

MOSQUITO FIGHTERS LAY OUT A CAMPAIGN

Warn the Public of the Dread Anopheles Punctipennis

AND OF THE CULEX PIPIENS

In the South the Culex Sollivitans, Which Spreads Yellow Fever, Is the Worst.

The one hundred species of mosquitos, especially the violent, deep-biting, hard-to-kill species known as the Culex pipiens and the Anopheles punctipennis, were discussed at the third annual meeting of the American Mosquito Extermination Society, held in the New York Aquarium yesterday afternoon. The meeting began at 2 o'clock and lasted about two hours, and when the President, William J. Matheson, announced the convention of 1906 adjourned, the expression on the face of every mosquito expert in the room indicated plainly that the coming season was going to be mighty tough on the health of the American mosquito.

President Matheson opened the session with an address in which he told the two dozen or more members of the organization present that the insidious work of the mosquito was responsible for the loss of thousands of lives in the United States every year, and that just as many more persons were incapacitated by diseases spread by these insects.

Mr. Matheson cited authorities to prove that malaria and all its attendant evils is communicated only through the agency of the Anopheles punctipennis. He also told how at the present time trained entomologists and others were studying the habits of the pest, their object being the final extermination of all the mosquitos in this and other afflicted countries.

The society, he added, asked the cooperation of every scientist and layman who wanted to better his own and his neighbor's condition. He prophesied that when once the public was convinced that the extermination of the pest was practical, the State and Nation would see to it that relief was given by law.

A paper that created the liveliest interest was read by Dr. Charles B. Davenport of the Carnegie Institute, at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y. Dr. Davenport said that in many instances sanitary measures were not taken because of a lack of interest, and also because some local Health Boards were composed of physicians who were not altogether unselfish.

A paper entitled "The Mosquito Brief," which is designed to convey to laymen information regarding mosquitos and to form "a confession of faith" for the society, was read and adopted. This brief began with a statement as to the number of species of mosquitos that inhabit marshlands and cesspools of the United States, and went on to say that they breed only in water; that a full-grown female lays 300 or 400 eggs a day sometimes; that mosquitos live about a month, and that while they do not breed in grass, tall-grass and shrubbery are, nevertheless, their favorite harboring places.

The brief further showed that mosquitos are divided into classes, some of them being very domestic and others very wild, while just as many, forming a third class, are purely of a migratory character. Mosquitos bred in fresh waters, as soon as they get their wings, fly a short distance and unfortunately the end of that short distance is generally the home of some man. This mosquito, which is the commonest in the United States, is the Culex pipiens, or house mosquito.

Next the brief dealt with the migratory mosquito, which breeds in salt water and brackish areas, can fly long distances, and seldom enters houses. Of the migratory species the commonest is the Culex sollivitans, which is not a conveyor of malaria, and whose home is in the Gulf States. The most dangerous of the Southern mosquitos is the Stegomyia fasciata, the natural purveyor of yellow fever. Mosquitos, the brief concluded, bite only once.

After the adoption of the brief Frederick G. Beach, the Treasurer of the society, read his report, which showed that fighting mosquitos costs money. He said there was a deficit of $62, and that there was not enough money in the treasury to pay for printing the "year book." Secretary Henry Clay Weeks next read his report, and gained a round of applause when he announced that a bill directed against the mosquito was expected to pass the present session of the New York Legislature. A New Jersey member arose and announced that the Governor of that State was considering a bill which appropriates $75,000 for ditching the salt marshes that are world renowned as the breeding places of the famous "Jersey Skeeter."

The election of officers resulted as follows: William J. Matheson, New York City, President; Walter C. Kerr, New York City, Vice President; Frederick C. Beach, New York City, Treasurer; Henry Clay Weeks, Bayside, L. I., Secretary, and Edward Hagaman Hall, New York City, Assistant Secretary.

HOPPE DEFEATS CUTLER; SCHAEFER WINS EASILY

Young Billiard Champion Leads Boston Player by 118 Points.

NEITHER GAME BRILLIANT

"Wizard" Makes Top Run of Tournament, Scoring 137—Hoppe's Best Effort Is 68.

Victories for the new and the old billiard champions, William F. Hoppe and Jacob Schaefer, were scored yesterday in the international championship tournament in the concert hall of Madison Square Garden. Each won by an entirely different method of 18-inch balk line, two counts in balk. Hoppe's stroke, hard and pounding, was the antithesis of Schaefer's touch, gentle as a Summer's zephyr, which kept the balls together splendidly. The young champion could not attain the softness of touch which produced a great nursing run of 137 for the "Wizard."

Hoppe's carroms were gained by ball-to-ball billiards. He defeated Albert G. Cutler, the ex-amateur of Boston, by 500 points to 382. His average was one notch below Slosson's on the night previous. Schaefer easily defeated Ora Morningstar by 500 points to 233. His average was 18 14-27.

Mark Twain made his second visit to the tournament during the evening, coming as he said: "To see the boy David get away with one of the billiard Goliaths." He was accompanied by Albert Bigelow Paine. They came in while Cutler was in the middle of his fifth turn at the table. There was a spontaneous outburst of applause, and Twain smiled and bowed his white head to all parts of the house before taking his seat. Then he began a running fire of comment upon the play, applauding good shots of both competitors without partiality.

Those who expected Hoppe to show a dazzling run after his win of the bank were disappointed. The young 18.1 champion made 4 on cushion shots and then missed on a bank with which he endeavored to overcome a line-up. Cutler then put together 37 by open and ball-to-ball play, which Hoppe immediately followed with 40 of much the same character. Two turns later Cutler worked out a run of 60, which contained an extraordinary number of beautiful and difficult shots. He rolled the balls into anchor several times in the course of this run. Playing along the rail he lined the balls at 21 and played a daring massé that was perfect. Cutler's position work was excellent in this run, and his stroke easy. He ultimately missed on a long half massé, which went astray on the cushion. This run placed Cutler in the lead by 97 to 45.

Hoppe tried to catch the ex-amateur in the next inning, but he was heavy-handed in the use of his cue. This caused him anxiety, and he displayed unusual care, squinting over the table whenever the shot was a difficult one. Runs of 13, 36, 10, and 22 were his portion following the third inning, and by the latter run he passed into the lead at 126 to 120.

Several unfortunate rolls of the ivory globes prevented Cutler from keeping up with the young champion. In the run of 16 immediately following his passing into the lead, Hoppe executed a masterful draw shot which brought the cue ball back after traversing nearly the width of the table, and resulted in a close gather of the globes. This proved actually a disaster, for Referee McLaughlin ruled that the balls were frozen despite Hoppe's negative shake of the head. The balls were spotted, and after two shots Hoppe retired. In terminating this run he missed on a one-cushion shot.

The phenomenal execution, even with his at times unpleasing stroke, which has brought Hoppe into the champions' class, was best shown on the young player's ninth turn at the table. In this he put together 68, and as Cutler did not allow him to get cold, only counting 3, Hoppe followed with 31. Both object balls were kept rolling before his cue ball, occasionally fairly close but at other times spread, although at no great distance. He held his position by driving one of the object balls after the manner of Frank Ives in a way that provoked the admiration of the big crowd. But the remarkable feature of these two runs was that no shot, however difficult, appeared to feaze Hoppe, who displayed amazing confidence under adverse conditions.

Even a novice could detect the marked difference between the two opponents. It was especially noticeable when Cutler chalked his cue and began upon his eleventh turn. There appeared to be an ease with which the carroms came to him, and while he used the massé and dead ball drive with the same freedom and brilliancy as Hoppe, he, by delicacy of touch, was enabled to hold and control the ivory globes in closer proximity. This inning added 60 to Cutler's string, and all represented a true balk-line method.

By better execution—for Hoppe at this stage was punching into the balls with his cue and exhibited a poor stroke—he crept steadily ahead of Cutler. His inability to put his cue to the ivories properly was demonstrated by his experiencing repeated lining of the balls during every inning. He finally turned into his last hundred with a run of 38 in his twenty-first inning, and then broke the run by a miscue. He also miscued on the next turn, terminating a good cluster of 50, which was the best ball-to-ball billiards that he displayed during the match.

At all times playing the proper shot irrespective of the good leaves that he presented to Hoppe, the Bostonian went after the carroms pluckily. He came up to within 35 of Hoppe by a run of 41 in his twentieth inning. After this Hoppe took no chances, and by laboriously counting he passed the danger point. The last three turns of the young champion were distinctly his best, and he finished playing in fair stroke. The summary:

Hoppe—4 40 1 13 36 10 22 16 68 31 9 27 0 8 9 7 8 38 30 8 38 50 25 2. Total—500 points; average, 20 20-24; high runs, 68, 50, and 40.

Cutler—37 0 60 7 16 0 0 14 3 1 60 3 3 10 18 38 21 0 23 41 13 19 0. Total—382 points; average, 16 14-23; high runs, 60, 60, and 41.

Referee—Edward McLaughlin.

There was an eager expectancy about the spectators at the matinée match as to the form that Jacob Schaefer would show. Many of his acquaintances gathered in the anteroom to talk with him before he went to the table. The "Wizard" soon riddled the rumors that he was not his old self when it came to effecting carroms. He easily defeated his former pupil, Ora Morningstar, by the score of 500 points to 233, and from appearances Schaefer could have made the margin wider had he felt so disposed. His high run of 137 was the best of the tournament so far, and in developing this big cluster of carroms he used a newly conceived line nurse that was both brilliant in execution and which called for the utmost delicacy of stroke. His average was 18 14-27.

Up to the seventh inning Schaefer had netted only a total of 19. He successfully brought the ivory spheres to the line in opening the seventh inning by a pretty little shot of two cushions in one of the corners. This was his opportunity, and after several shots he had the three balls in perfect position, one resting on the short line and the other two inches from it, with the cue ball slightly behind. Playing his cue ball deftly across the face of the object balls, Schaefer counted 34 of his big run, only moving the ivories ten inches. Then he was forced to play to the cushion once, and continued until 111 had been counted before he made his first long drive up and down the table to hold the position. Then followed a series of those wonderful massés which caused the crowd to fairly howl with delightful appreciation. After 137 he was faced with a little draw shot of such a simple nature that he slipped up on it, and the run ended.

Morningstar continued with small runs, in which his open table play was excellent and in strong contrast with the delicate manipulation of his opponent. He fell woefully behind, and practically interest in his cue work ceased, so far as the spectators were concerned. Schaefer's massés were the attraction during the latter part of the game. Summary:

Schaefer—0 1 9 5 0 4 137 0 47 1 1 0 0 12 13 25 0 1 11 8 0 0 58 3 67 94 5. Total, 500 points. Average, 18 14-27, high runs, 137, 94, and 67.

Morningstar—10 0 2 1 30 1 1 8 1 1 5 1 2 1 24 0 15 12 32 49 1 0 27 2 4 3. Total, 233 points. Average, 8 25-26; high runs, 49, 32, and 30.

Referee—Edward McLaughlin.

The schedule of the remaining matches brings Slosson against Morningstar in the matinée game to-day and Schaefer against Cutler this evening. To-morrow Hoppe will meet Morningstar in the matinée contest and Sutton will engage the Frenchman, Curé, in the evening. All of the foremost players are scheduled for Saturday's games, Schaefer and Sutton meeting in the matinée and the evening competition bringing together Hoppe and his recent challenger, Slosson.

ANOTHER FOOTBALL SET-BACK

Harvard Overseers Rebuke Athletic Committee for Authorizing Game.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 11.—The Harvard Board of Overseers to-day checked the growing hopes of the Cambridge student body that football would be played at Harvard next Fall by disapproving the recent action of the Athletic Committee authorizing the continuance of the game under the new rules adopted by the National Football Rules Committee. So once more the question of Harvard's course is open.

The Overseers did not specifically vote the authorization of the game, nor express an adverse opinion on the new rules, but called the attention of the Athletic Committee to its failure to comply with the board's previous request that it report what changes were proposed in the game, pending the receipt of which report the game should be suspended. Just what the significance of the Overseers' action is, beyond the fact that it is a rebuke to the precipitate action of the Athletic Committee, is not clear even to Harvard men.

The Board of Overseers took action against football after having received from a sub-committee on physical training and athletic sports a drastic condemnation of the modern game. The chief allegation of the sub-committee was that football was brutal. The Overseers voted to-day that this report be returned to the sub-committee and that this committee confer with the Harvard Athletic Committee, call the attention of the Athletic Committee to the request for information originally made by the Overseers and then report back to the Overseers at an early date.

It is understood that at this conference the Overseers' Committee and the Athletic Committee will discuss the new rules in detail and that the sub-committee will then make some recommendation to the full Board of Overseers. If this report is favorable it is regarded as likely that football will be played at Harvard this year, as usual, under the reformed rule.

The situation at Cambridge has been very much involved since the agitation against the game started. In the Athletic Committee is vested the authority to authorize or prohibit the game specifically. This it has never done. Both the Faculty and the Overseers voted that it was their sense that the game should be suspended until such changes were adopted as would eradicate the objectionable features of the sport, and until these changes were satisfactorily demonstrated the Overseers requested the Athletic Committee to report such changes to it, which the committee failed to do. It is this failure that is rebuked.

The general situation with respect to the game is unaffected by the rebuke. The Athletic Committee's authorization to play was voted operative only in event of the approval of the Overseers and the Corporation. Until the approval is secured the game is not officially authorized. Neither has it been specificaly prohibited. The Athletic Committee has power to authorize play in spite of the Overseers if it sees fit, in which event the action can only be overruled by the Overseers and the Corporation acting jointly, since the two bodies delegated to the committee the government of athletics. That the Athletic Committee would take such action in the face of the Overseers' disapproval is considered unlikely, but the possibility remains.

The belief is expressed by some that the action of the Overseers is not so much due to opposition to the continuance of the game under the generally approved new rules as it is to the fact that its wishes were apparently ignored. These say that the Athletic Committee blundered, and, while it probably did not jeopardize the game, it certainly delayed the favorable action which was likely. Further developments in the situation are awaited with the keenest concern.

ROCK SAND TO SHIP IN JUNE.

$125,000 Horse to be Brought to Belmont's Nursery Stud.

Rock Sand, the $125,000 thoroughbred horse bought by August Belmont in England, is to remain two months longer in England, and about the middle of June will be delivered to Mr. Belmont's agents and then shipped to the United States to take his place in the stud at the Belmont farm, The Nursery Stud, at Lexington, Ky. The arrangement, made necessary by the fact that the executors of Sir James Miller's estate had made contracts for the services of the horse before Mr. Belmont bought him, has been approved by Mr. Belmont, and the actual transfer of the horse will not take place until the new owner is ready to bring the stallion to America.

The shipment thus will come when the Spring has advanced far enough to reduce the chances of a rough voyage for the stallion. The arrival of the horse will be so late in the season that he will not be available for service in America this year, and so will have nearly a full year in which to be acclimated before beginning his new career in 1907.

Rock Sand now is at the Hamilton Stud, Newmarket, where he is to remain until transferred to Mr. Belmont's agents in June. When brought to America Rock Sand is destined to enter the stud at Mr. Belmont's famous breeding farm, where he will be the second Epsom Derby winner in the Belmont stud—St. Blaise, imported by the first August Belmont, still being alive and in active service at the Nursery.

Rock Sand is the highest-priced horse Mr. Belmont ever bought, but other horses of the Belmont stud cost the owner large sums. Of these the most costly is Henry of Navarre, a Suburban Handicap winner, bought by Mr. Belmont from the late Byron McClelland for a sum stated to be $40,000, and Hastings, bought at the dispersal of the Gideon & Daly stable for $34,000, both of these horses being in training when purchased by Mr. Belmont. Hastings has been the most successful of the Belmont stallions of late years, but Mr. Belmont also has had a large share of success as a breeder with Octagon, Rayon d'Or, and St. Blaise.

AUTOS FOR VANDERBILT RACE.

Announcement That Oldsmobile Will Enter Adds Interest to Contest.

So far from the doubling of the fee for the Vanderbilt Cup contestants having any deterrent effect upon the probable number of entries, it rather seems to have had the result of stimulating interest in the big race. Definite announcement was made yesterday that an Oldsmobile car is now in process of construction at the factory in Lansing, Mich., for the contest. This is the first time that the Oldsmobile manufacturers have ever attempted to build a racing car. President F. L. Smith came to New York early in the week to complete certain arrangements, and he stated yesterday that the Vanderbilt Cup racer had been designed by Howard Coffin, the chief engineer in the Lansing factory.

Jefferson De Mont Thompson, Chairman of the Racing Committee, said that while he had not yet received any positive entries, he had received letters from a number of manufacturers assuring him of early entries.

"A great many are going to enter cars this year," added Mr. Thompson. "From present indications the number will be much larger than a year ago, and it may yet be seen that the committee did wisely to limit the American entries to twenty-five cars, whatever doubt there may have been in the minds of many that that number would never be reached."

FIRST BASEBALL GAMES FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP

Champion New Yorks Play at Philadelphia To-day.

BROOKLYN MEETS BOSTON

Prospects of a Vigorous and Well-Contested Campaign Among National League Clubs.

All indications point to an aggressive and well-contested campaign of the National League baseball clubs, the opening games being scheduled for to-day. It will be the thirty-first season for the league, and from the champion New Yorks down to Brooklyn, tailenders, all the teams apparently have been materially strengthened. Before meeting the strong Western clubs the New Yorks are scheduled to play twenty-two games in the East, and when these are completed a fairly good line can be obtained on the strength of the teams, as compared with last year.

Against the clubs the New Yorks are scheduled to meet first the champions had an easy task last year. They defeated Philadelphia fourteen out of twenty-two games, Boston nineteen, and Brooklyn fifteen. These clubs, however, seem to have been strengthened this year, Brooklyn particularly.

In the West, Chicago, Pittsburg, and Cincinnati have made a number of changes in their teams, and all are regarded now as being very dangerous opponents. The Chicagos are reported to be in excellent condition for the opening, while the Pittsburg players showed much strength in their Southern training campaign. Under the management of Edward Hanlon, the Cincinnatis are expected to show a great improvement over their efforts of last year.

The games scheduled for to-day, with the umpires, follow:

New York at Philadelphia.
Boston at Brooklyn.
Chicago at Cincinnati.
Pittsburg at St. Louis.

Umpires—Hank O'Day at Philadelphia, Emslie and Conway at Brooklyn, Johnstone at Cincinnati, Carpenter and Klem at St. Louis.

AMERICANS WIN AT HOME.

Greater New Yorks Make Good Impression in Game with Providence.

After five weeks of training in the South, the Greater New York baseball team, headed by Manager Griffith, or at least that part of the team that left Atlanta, Ga., at midnight on Monday, arrived home early yesterday morning and in the afternoon played "Jack" Dunn's Eastern League champions from Providence. It was not a day at all fitted for the display of the form of players who will within a couple of days be called upon to take part in their first championship game, but the work of the local Americans indicated that their Southern trip had placed them in superb physical condition and that the team presented yesterday, although it may not be Manager Griffith's final selection, will be quite as good if not superior to any line-up that represented the American League in New York last year.

The Providence team probably was in its greatest strength yesterday, with "Eddie" Poole as pitcher. It had played four games with the Washingtons and two with the Giants. Although being defeated in every instance, the practice was of great advantage to the team that showed itself to be the best in the Eastern League last year. Still they were outplayed by the Greater New Yorks and were beaten by 6 to 2. The local men batted hard, scoring more than two hits to one over their opponents; but at that errors were responsible for the one-sided score.

Chesbro started in to do the pitching for the New Yorks, and in five innings the premier pitcher of 1904 was hit safely only once. Then "Doc" Newton, with his left-handed delivery, officiated during the balance of the game, and was hit but four times. Both of the Providence runs were unearned, Dougherty's fumble of Poland's safe hit and Chase's mistake giving the visitors their first run, while Elberfeld's very wild throw to first was responsible for the second run in the eighth inning.

Brodie's sensational fielding at centre field was by long odds the feature of the game. In the third inning Kleinow hit a long, high ball which seemed almost impossible for any fielder to catch. Brodie, however, after a long run toward left field, put out his right hand, and the ball lodged in it. In the fifth inning Chesbro made a tremendous hit to centre field, but Brodie captured the ball after a long run. In all, he caught five fly balls, most all of which were difficult.

Much interest was centred in the playing of La Porte, who created a very favorable impression by his work at second base for the local team during the latter part of last year's campaign. At third base he showed himself to be master of the situation, while in five times at the bat he hit for a triple, a double, and a single. The score:

GIANTS BEAT COLLEGIANS.

Manhattan Makes Rally in Ninth Inning and Scores Four Runs.

For eight innings yesterday the champion New Yorks played rings around the Manhattan College team, but in the ninth inning the collegians batted Henry Mathewson at a lively rate and scored four runs, making the total 9 to 4 in favor of the champions. McGraw used all his regulars, with the exception of Bresnahan and his pitchers, putting Ferguson in the box for five innings, following with Henry Mathewson. In all fifteen players were used by the champions, and all did well, the only error being charged to Mathewson.

It looked quite like a shut-out for the collegians when they went to the bat in the ninth inning, but when Boylston and Hanrahan hit safely matters began to get interesting. Conley was sent to first on called balls, thus filling the bases. Seton followed with a good hit to left field, on which Boylston and Hanrahan tallied. Burdette was retired, but Conley crossed the plate. Amazaga hit safely, and after Maloney had been thrown out at first Seton tallied the fourth and last run. The score:

Satisfied with American's Training.

While the Southern training trip of the Greater New Yorks was not so successful as was anticipated owing to the bad weather conditions, the men are in surprisingly good physical shape. Manager Griffith in speaking of this yesterday, said that inasmuch as the players were often stopped from participating in games owing to rain or unfit grounds, he paid particular attention to place them in as good physical condition as possible.

"There is not a man in the bunch who is ailing," said Griffith, "and they are as fit as can be to open the championship season on Saturday. I haven't a word of complaint to make against the work of any player, only that I would like to have seen a little better batting. They will surely get their eyes on the ball, however, and then look out for us."

The local Americans are scheduled to play the strong Newark team of the Eastern League at American League Park this afternoon, and then rest on Friday. On Saturday the first championship game will be played against the ex-champion Bostons. The park, which has been much improved since last year by raising a part of the diamond, the addition of thirty private boxes in front of the grand stand, and better facilities for carriages and automobiles, is more attractive than ever.

Mathewson Sick at Plainfield.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., April 11.—Christopher Mathewson, the champion New York pitcher, is laid up here and will not be able to go in the box for ten days at least. His brother-in-law, Dr. P. B. Cregar, at whose home he is confined, says that he is suffering with nasal diphtheria. About the same time a year ago he suffered from a similar attack. Mrs. Mathewson joined her husband here a week ago. She recently fell on the ice at their home in Factoryville, Penn., breaking her arm.

PETER PAUL UPSETS TALENT.

Starts in Two Races at Benning and Wins Last One Easily.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The good card offered by the Washington Jockey Club attracted a large crowd to the races at Benning to-day. The track was heavy on account of the recent heavy rains, but the going was firm, and as a result the horses ran true.

The upset of the day was in the sixth event. Peter Paul was a starter in the fourth, with McDaniel in the saddle and 97 pounds up. He finished in the ruck at odds of 5 to 1. In the sixth he was started again with 107 pounds up, McDaniel again being in the saddle. The closing odds against him were as good as 8 to 1. He got away from the post fourth, went up to third on the turn, and as the horses straightened out in the stretch went to the front and won easily. Duke of Kendal evidently could not give away the weight demanded of him.

An upset also occurred in the third race, when Hocus Pocus took the measure of Daruma, the 1 to 4 favorite, and did it easily. Bobbie Kean, always a hot favorite, won the fourth race without extending himself. In the fifth Nonsense repeated his win of a few days ago at the same odds, 20 to 1. It did not seem possible for him to win until within the last half furlong, when he came fast and nipped the race by three-quarters of a length from Scarecrow. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—For maiden three-year-olds and upward; five furlongs, Columbia course. Donna, 89 pounds, (McDaniel,) 9 to 5 and 7 to 10, won; High Brush, 94, (Miller,) 5 to 1 and 2 to 1, second; Ligero, 103, (Robbins,) 10 to 1, third. Time—1:05. Twister, Hahover Hornpipe, Radical, Waterway, Contentment, Elton Weaver, Criflamme, and Fish Hook also ran.

SECOND RACE.—Selling, for two-year-olds; four a half furlongs, old course. Shackle, 94 pounds, (C. Morris,) 13 to 5 and 4 to 5, won; Bathmarie, 99, (Miller,) 3 to 5 and out, second; Moccasin, 99, (McDaniel,) 20 to 1, third. Time—0:58 3-5. Josie S. and Strongarm also ran.

THIRD RACE.—For three-year-olds; six and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Hocus Pocus, 101 pounds, (Crimmins,) 4 to 1 and 2 to 5, won; Daruma, 101, (Kent,) 1 to 4 and out, second; Gentian, 106, (Springer,) 30 to 1, third. Time—1:25. Riggs also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—For four-year-olds and upward; seven furlongs, Columbia course. Bobbie Kean, 100 pounds, (Miller,) 9 to 20 and out, won; Delphie, 95, (Powers,) 8 to 1 and 8 to 5, second; Parkville, 100, (T. Burns,) 30 to 1, third. Time—1:30. Flat, Amberjack, Peter Paul, and John F. Ahearn also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—Selling, for three-year-olds and upward; 7 furlongs, Columbia course. Nonsense, 101 pounds, (Schaller,) 20 to 1 and 6 to 1, won; Scarecrow, 98, (Christian,) 15 to 1 and 6 to 1, second; Suffice, 101, (Treubel,) 6 to 1, third. Time—1:32 2-5. Sals, Pirateer, Judge White, Society Bud, Mettle, and Vanguard also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward; one mile and 100 yards, old course. Peter Paul, 107 pounds, (McDaniel,) 8 to 1 and 3 to 1, won; Phoebus, 90, (J. Johnson,) 8 to 1 and 2½ to 1, second; Winchester, 102, (Klenck,) 3 to 1, third. Time—1:53 3-5. Duke of Kendal, Bill Curtis, and Northville also ran.

Benning Entries for To-day.

Five races on the flat, including a handicap at five and a half furlongs, and a steeplechase, constitute the card for the Washington Jockey Club's races at Benning to-day. The entries follow:

Long Island Training Gallops.

The training work on the Long Island tracks dropped back to routine jogging and cantering yesterday, and only a few moves at speed were made at either Gravesend or Sheepshead Bay. The most interesting work of the day was at Gravesend, where several Carter Handicap horses were out, but the track was rather bad, and trials that were expected by the horsemen were postponed until to-day. Roseben and Jacquin of the Frank Weir string were the most notable Carter horses that were galloped, Roseben going a mile under strong restraint in 1:53 and Jacquin galloping a mile in 1:48¼. At Sheepshead Bay all the big stables quartered there were represented on the regular track and the training course, but half-speed gallops were in order, and though many famous horses were out, the work was not fast enough to tempt the watchers to take the time.

ATHLETICS HARD HIT BY COLUMBIA FACULTY

Drastic Restrictions on Future Contests Recommended.

ONLY SIX GAMES PERMITTED

Professional Coaching and Training Tables Eliminated—New Rules to be Enforced.

It was learned yesterday from an authoritative source that the recommendations of the Columbia Faculty Committee, appointed by President Butler to investigate athletic conditions at the Morningside institution and report on necessary reforms to be inaugurated in future, contain all of the drastic restrictoins which have been feared by the student body and practically destroy the entire intercollegiate system in force at present. Besides prohibiting the engagement of professional coaches and of training tables, the number of contests is restricted to six in each branch of sport.

Besides these changes, alterations are made in the eligibility code in consonance with the steps that have been taken by other of the larger institutions throughout the country. These include the prohibition of freshmen participation in intercollegiate contests, the limitation of three years upon any student's participation in sport, the proscription of all graduate students, and the continuance of the one year's residence rule for students entering Columbia from other institutions.

These eligibility restrictions were expected, and the elimination of the professional coach feared, but the limitation of games to the extent contemplated was totally unexpected. Under this head the committee defines out-of-town games as those which keep the team out of the city longer than from 12 o'clock noon of one day to 9 o'clock of the morning following. A game with Yale, for example, at New Haven, would therefore be a home game, as a team could make the trip within the time limits without difficulty.

The reform of training methods has been urged since the prohibition of football. The training tables and the professional coach are allowed only in rowing. In rowing the Columbia Association has voted to continue the graduate coaching system, but in such sports as football, track, and swimming, few graduates will or can devote any considerable amount of time to training teams, and the sport is bound to suffer.

In order to encourage wider participation in athletics by the general student body, the committee recommends that more tennis courts be built on South Field, and that the courts of the West Side Tennis Club, on 117th Street, be leased for certain hours of the day. Further, it is suggested that a larger supply of barges be kept at the boathouses in order to give all students an opportunity to row.

The full text of the report, as well as those of the graduate and student committees, is expected to be published next week.

Ross and Wood Win Golf Foursomes.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Alexander Ross, the Pinehurst professional, and W. K. Wood of the Homewood Club, Chicago, made the lowest score to-day in the Scotch foursomes in the tournament of the Columbia Golf Club. Their cards showed 137 strokes, ten points ahead of their nearest competitors. At 147 there was a tie, Donald Ball, the Philadelphia professional, and T. M. Sherman of Utica comprising one team, while the other pair were Bernard Nichols, the Hollywood professional, New Jersey, and L. A. Hamilton of Englewood. Good golfing weather prevailed.

THE ELSBERG BILL.

The bill regulating the construction and operation of transit lines in New York, known as the Elsberg bill, having passed the Assembly unanimously, will now go to the Mayor for the expression of his approval or otherwise. Considering the remarkable success of the measure in its final form, it is not probable that the veto of the Mayor, should he decide to interpose one, would affect its ultimate passage. Nevertheless, we have no doubt that his Honor will take the bill under very careful consideration, that he will avail himself of every means to ascertain both public and expert opinion as to its operation, and that he will not hesitate to suggest such modifications as seem to him best under existing circumstances.

There is much that is good in the bill. It is proper that the power to grant perpetual franchises should be eliminated expressly, though there is practical certainty that none would ever have been granted had there been no change in the statute. It is well that the Rapid Transit Commission should have the choice between separating or combining contracts for construction and operation, though substantially that was within their discretion before. It is wise to define the reserve power of the city ultimately, in conditions requiring it, to operate as well as to construct transit lines, since the possible exercise of this reserve power may be counted on in emergencies to protect the interests of the city. It is well that provision is made for pipe galleries in future subways, and that these galleries shall not be under the control of any monopoly. The provision for a change in the composition of the Rapid Transit Commission we regard as of chiefly theoretical and logical interest, the whole history of the commission showing that there has never been a board more impartial, vigilant, and faithful to civic obligations than this commission. We doubt if appointees by the Mayor will equal the men we have had in special qualifications, and we are sure that they will not have a keener sense of responsibility. We shall be very fortunate if they have one as keen.

The clause of the bill tying the hands of the Rapid Transit Commission and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment in the matter of contracts, and limiting the terms of contracts to twenty years, with one renewal, we look upon as foolish, risky, and directly opposed to the sound principle and practical policy of essential home rule for the city. We object, and strongly, to the narrow limits actually fixed in the bill, and we object still more strongly to the withdrawal from the city authorities of the discretion to act in this matter as the interests of the city demand. It is highly improbable that responsible contractors will undertake the equipment and operation of the lines of which we stand in immediate and pressing need under a lease for twenty years, with a renewal, under revision, for twenty years more. And it is an open secret that the most strenuous advocates of this narrow limitation of the discretion of the city authorities both thought and wished that it would compel municipal operation. Meanwhile, what it plainly does do is to give a certain advantage to the combined transit corporations, who could take such leases, whether profitably or not, with much less risk than independent contractors. As a device for promoting competition the short leases are obviously futile.

But the absurdity and wrong of this particular provision lie in the fact that it deprives the city completely of the benefit of the discretion of its own authorities, exercised in accordance with their best information and judgment, and subject to direct responsibility to the community immediately and permanently affected by their action. Consider for a moment who and what are the authorities thus bound hand and foot by the Legislature. There are first the Rapid Transit Commissioners, who, as we have said, are men of great ability, special and peculiar experience, and the training which experience gives, and of the highest character. They have done excellent work already under difficulties and discouragements which few people now remember, and they have shown entire readiness and ability to meet new requirements. Acting with them, and possessing what amounts to the veto power, are the members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, the Mayor, the Controller, the President of the Board of Aldermen, and the Borough Presidents, the two first named being also ex-officio members of the Rapid Transit Commission. It is ridiculous to assume that the Legislature is better fitted than these officials to say what shall be the leases to be made of city property for the service of the people of the city. The assumption would warrant the defeat of the whole bill if that were practicable. As it is, the Mayor would be quite justified in putting it up to the Legislature to reconsider the bill.

THE DEBATE IN THE SENATE.

EDMUND BURKE, when somebody said to him that when posterity came to read his speeches it would wonder that they should have had no effect upon the body to which they were addressed, made answer: "Waiving your compliment to me, I should say that in general it is very well worth a man's while to speak well in Parliament," and went on to give good reasons why.

Of that wise saw we have a very modern instance. Since the debate on the Wilson Tariff bill in the House of Representatives there has, we think, been no debate in either house of Congress comparable in ability, interest, and illumination to the present debate in the Senate on the Rate bill. The first of the noteworthy contributions to the enlightenment of the Senate and the country was made more than a month ago by Senator FORAKER. It was of that address that Senator BAILEY was quoted at the time as saying: "If that speech goes unanswered the Hepburn bill deserves to be defeated." And now, after the speeches of Senators SPOONER and KNOX, it is Senator BAILEY himself who has undertaken the task of a reply. He has so acquitted himself of that task as not only "the applause of a listening Senate to command," but also, as is credibly reported, to obtain the immediate and practical success of winning votes for his side. For Senator HALE and another Senator whose name is not given, but whose importance is vouched for, have announced themselves to have been converted to his view of the case. Verily "it is very well worth a man's while to speak well" in Congress.

We think that no session of that Senate of which we are in the habit of lamenting the decline ever furnished more intellectual pabulum than the four speeches to which we have referred. There is perhaps in none of them any of those declamatory passages, those "purple patches" which are fit for incorporation in a schoolboy's "speaker." But they are none the less public services. The debate in the Senate on the Wilson Tariff bill was not at all comparable to that in the House. It was not on the floor of the Senate, but in the dark of its lobbies and committee rooms that the Wilson tariff measure was shorn of its force and effect, and the most memorable speech in the Senate was that in which Senator CAFFERY exposed and denounced the treachery by which this emasculation was accomplished. But it is in open Senate that the arguments are adduced which have so impressed the Senate and the country. And the actual change of votes among the hard-headed lawyers who listened to Senator BAILEY is an immediate and practical success beyond the eloquence and the argument of BURKE. While this by no means shows that Senator BAILEY is as great an orator as BURKE, it tends to show that the United States Senate at the beginning of the twentieth century is a body more candid and more amenable to reason than was the British House of Commons toward the close of the eighteenth. This is another of the innumerable indications that the world grows wiser and better as it grows older.

"IMMEDIATE" TARIFF REVISION.

Speaker CANNON and Mayor DUNNE evidently use the same dictionary, in which "immediate" and "never" are synonyms. Says the Speaker:

> If a majority of the people demand immediate general revision they will elect a majority of the members of this House in favor of immediate general revision.

This scheme of "immediate" tariff revision postpones it at nearest to, let us say, a year after the inauguration of President ROOSEVELT's successor—and tariff revisions never come as soon as reckoned. The Congress which we elect this Fall will organize for business about Christmas, 1907, and adjourn until after New Year's, 1908, by which time the Presidential campaign will be making steam, and the argument for postponing "immediate" revision will be stronger than now. That there are no good times for tariff revision is a prime Republican dogma, but even in the Republican creed some times are worse than others for tariff revision, and the worst of all is a Presidential campaign. Moreover, if the Congress to be elected next November should in good faith receive a popular mandate to give its first attention to tariff reform it is as sure as anything in human affairs that in the interval before the execution of the mandate became possible something will have happened to obscure the issue, and the latest thing is the thing uppermost in the minds of Congressmen as well as of other mortals. For example, railway rate regulation was an issue never dreamed of in the election of the Congress now legislating, and was not even included in the Republican platform. This sweetly unreasonable arrangement of dates is so familiar to Speaker CANNON that he must be assumed to have said "immediate" with his tongue in his cheek. If his interview had not been dated Washington we should have suspected that the interviewer caught him just after a ramble with Peter Pan through the land of "Never, Never, Never." It is worth while to remember that "immediate" reform of anything cannot be had under our system as the result of a popular mandate. There is always a full session of Congress after an election and before the new legislators take their seats.

WINTER WHEAT.

There is no logical connection between the stringent money market and the Winter wheat crop report. Nevertheless the money market is responsible for a frame of mind which has put a gloomier interpretation upon the crop report than experience justifies, and accordingly it may be anticipated that when money works easier the expectation of the wheat yield will also improve.

It is not to be expected that this year's Winter killed area will equal last year's 1,300,000 acres, and the deterioration which usually accompanies the progress of crops toward maturity is by no means a certainty. There are at least a half dozen cases in which Winter wheat has maintained its April condition, or even improved it before harvest. Moreover it is upon the record that the greatest crop known, in 1901, was harvested after a depreciation in condition of 9 points. It may be anticipated that when Wall Street feels happier it will be reckoning how near the record this year's crop will be, instead of how much it will fall below it. The second or third largest crop upon record is the present prospect, and it is nothing to be gloomy about.

PRIVATE POLICEMEN.

Gen. BINGHAM's complaint that the cost of keeping order in the police courts should not be charged to his department seems perfectly well founded. He has convinced the Finance Committee of the Board of Aldermen that a special appropriation of $112,000 should be made to cover the cost of these details, insisting that the Police Department was entitled either to the men or to the money they drew.

One of the most useful of Gen. BINGHAM's services as Commissioner has been his diligence and success in cutting down "details" in his department and thus increasing the number of policemen available for patrol duty, which is notoriously inadequate. In this conference with the committee of the Aldermen he complained of the custom of detailing policemen for baseball grounds and theatres, and added: "I feel strongly that owners of private enterprises should pay their own special policemen."

This is clearly the just principle. Of course, policemen are especially needed where crowds assemble. But there seems to be no reason why the manager of a public entertainment, or of an "occasion" of any kind which he has arranged for the purpose of attracting a crowd for his own profit, should not pay the expense of keeping order in such a crowd, instead of saddling it upon the city. Hotels do their own policing, and there seems to be no reason why this should not be done at his own cost by every manager of a place of public resort, and, for that matter, by every projector of a private entertainment on such a scale as to require police protection. Such a projector now pays, if at all, in tips which benefit the policemen without relieving the city. A demand for special guardians of order for "private enterprises" would speedily produce its own supply, which will not be forthcoming so long as the public force can be drawn upon for private purposes.

The fair domain of old Virginia and the Jamestown Tercentennial Exposition were the theme of Representative CHARLES A. TOWNE's speech in the House on Tuesday. We shall not be permitted to forget, nor do we wish to, that at Jamestown in 1619 was assembled the first representative legislative body on this continent. Also:

> Upon that soil were fought the last battle of the Revolution, which established our nationality, and the last battle of the civil war, which preserved it.
>

The bill making Watkins Glen a State reservation awaits the Governor's signature. It appropriates $50,000, one-half the price formerly asked for this attractive piece of natural scenery. Through the instrumentality of the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society the property, which had come into the possession of the Andrew H. Green estate, has been offered unconditionally to the State at its cost value. Gov. HIGGINS will have the approval of the public if he signs this bill.

It is rarely that a newspaper has the opportunity to offer to its readers such an example of direct observation and description of a scene of great disaster as that furnished by MARION CRAWFORD in his dispatch from Sant' Agnello, near Naples, published in THE TIMES of yesterday. It adds to the information which only an eye witness could obtain the note of personal feeling which only such a witness could express. The occurrences amid which it was written were of a nature to confuse an untrained mind, but in the case of our gifted correspondent their solemn impressiveness was conveyed with sober eloquence and fine simplicity. The dispatch was a not unfitting analogue to the letter of the younger PLINY, published on the previous day.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Joyous Hopes Deceived. Rarely indeed have the legitimate expectations of the American public been as cruelly and completely disappointed as by the failure of DOWIE to proceed instantly to Zion City and "have it out" with his sometime followers and present enemies. We were all waiting in perfect confidence for one of the most picturesque rows imaginable—waiting in happy indifference as to whether DOWIE beat VOLIVA or VOLIVA DOWIE, and our joyous anticipations were quite innocent, too, because it was to be merely a war of words, with no chance of bloodshed. But what has the prophet done? Starting with frowning brow from Mexico at the first hint of revolt in Zion, he hurried northward with voluble announcements at every stopping place that he was ready to meet his accusers face to face, and that he would crush them by the mere majesty of his presence. We wanted to see the crushing. But what has he done? Brought his valorous charge to a halt just before coming in sight of the intrenched forces and hidden himself in a Chicago hotel to talk the situation over with some hastily summoned lawyers! This is most lamentable—a clear case of betrayed confidence. Contrary to all suppositions, it is now evident that DOWIE lacks the sporting instinct. And he lacks much more; he lacks the intuition that enables the born leader to recognize the psychological moment for attack. As a result he has lost his one chance for bringing the Zionites back to their allegiance. Had not his courage failed him, had he made an impressive entrance into the city that undoubtedly was the work of his hands and mind, had he talked the old nonsense with the old eloquence and scattered mingled promises and threats in his old way, it is at least possible that he would have awakened again the old trust and enthusiasm and have put his would-be successors to instant flight. The possibility is gone now. In a legal struggle, which will necessitate a tiresome accounting for moneys received and expended, DOWIE will not be DOWIE, but merely a broken charlatan, hanging desperately at the ends of all his ropes. Almost certainly the young and practical VOLIVA will be more than a match for "Elijah III." in a prosaic investigation of Zion City finances, where emotion will not count and figures will. It is really too bad—and not least bad, perhaps, for the scatter-brained inhabitants of Zion. DOWIE did give them something, but it is not at all likely that there will be anything left for the unfortunates after a long litigation over the assets which DOWIE wants to keep and his rivals want to get hold of.

Transition and Divorces. Divorce problems remain about what and as they were before the Society for Political Study took hold of them, despite the fact that the amiably ambitious ladies reached the conclusion that a National divorce law applying to all the States alike would be a good thing. Others have held the same opinion, but the law will not be appreciably easier to get because the political students have voted for it. We were struck, however, by the novelty of one statement made in the course of their discussion. "In the newer States," said this speaker, "where everything is in a state of transition, there are more reasons for divorce, and more reasons for seeking it should be recognized as adequate." Here, now, is what at least purports to be the explanation of a phenomenon that has long mystified so many of us—the generosity, by some described as reckless, with which "the newer States" have accorded freedom from marital bonds to practically all who wanted them and had the not too exorbitant "price." Hitherto there has been an inclination to suspect, if not exactly to believe, that certain Western States granted their divorces for almost any reason that could be formulated, and almost while the applicant waited, simply because it "made business" and was profitable to lawyers, the keepers of hotels and livery stables, and to the renters of furnished cottages. And here cometh an observer with the new theory that these States devise their divorce laws with reference to local interests that are sociologic rather than financial. We confess our inability to understand the theory—to see why Dakota, for instance, needs to be any more ready to sever the bonds of her own husbands and wives than should New York or South Carolina. The reference to "a state of transition" sounds well—it always does, for that matter—but somehow it doesn't seem to mean much—and, for that matter, it never does. Still, the lady's theory is what is neatly called "a contribution to the controversy," and, for all we know, it may be a valuable one. Perhaps somebody, more familiar than ourselves with Dakotan conditions can throw light on the subject.

Heading Off Competitors. "Four hours from New York to Boston" will indeed be a boon, especially as it involves a similar shortening by two hours of the journey the other way, but President MELLEN need not expect to cause much excitement by his announcement or to have it received with tears of gratitude. Favors, like dinners, should not be too long delayed, and, instead of rejoicing over the improvement in the service between the two cities, the chances are that people will sourly wonder why the thing wasn't done years and years ago. The most cynical of them may go the length of declaring that it wouldn't have been done now had it not been for threats of competition in a field where it has hitherto been unknown. Even for this cruel supposition there is excuse, however it may be as to justification. The rate of fifty miles an hour, called for by the new schedule, is not remarkable, but if well maintained it is good running and vastly better than anything the traveling public has ever had—in that particular direction. Both New Yorkers and Bostonians will be made appreciably happier by it, the Bostonians because they can get here two hours more quickly than before and stay here two hours longer, and the New Yorkers because their enforced absences can be shortened by twice that period.

Already Scalped.

From The Kansas City Journal.

Jacob Pitzer of Greeley County killed several wolves last week and brought their scalps for their bounty; that is, he brought the scalps of all but one.

This one had been well scalped two years before, and the skin had grown over again. It is probable that the wolf had been caught and was apparently dead, and the scalp taken off and collected for, of course, and then Mr. Wolf came to life.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The Texans in Congress had a time of it yesterday between the brilliant speech by their Senator, Mr. Bailey, at one end of the Capitol and the witty effort of J. Adam Bede at the other in favor of making five States of the Lone Star State and giving her ten Senators instead of two.

The Texans wanted to hear both speeches and kept the telephone between the Senate and House hot with questions as to when Bailey would speak. Bede first gave notice that he would begin at 1 o'clock. Then word came that Bailey had begun and he changed the time to 1:30. When the hands of the House clock reached that moment he made another change and planned to start at 3 o'clock. But at that hour Mr. Bailey was still talking, so he put it off another hour. At 4 he decided to go ahead, no matter when Bailey stopped. The Texas members, as soon as they finished shaking hands with Bailey, darted down the corridor and back to the House just in time to hear Bede close.

"Great Scott!" said one of them, "this is a circus even for Texas. And there was a double ring at both ends of the tent."

Speaker Cannon has received hundreds of telegrams from Oklahoma expressing the opinion of hundreds of people about him. This one, however, which he declares is the most remarkable inquiry ever propounded to an American statesman, he proposes to frame: "Shall Oklahoma, the gem of hope, be sacrificed on the Shylock of Despair?"

Mrs. Edward Vail of Wichita, Kan., will receive a rose from the White House conservatory as a compliment from President Roosevelt upon her championship of his administration. Yesterday Edward Vail of Wichita and Miss Cornelia, his daughter, called on the President. When presented, Mr. Vail told the President that his wife would not read newspapers which contained attacks on his administration.

The President darted back into his private office. Returning with a handsome rose in his hand he turned to Miss Vail and said: "Will you press this and give it to your mother with my compliments?"

Evening Services on Good Friday.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reply to "Episcopalian" in this morning's paper, I would say there is an 8 P. M. service on Good Friday, at the Church of the Transfiguration, in Twenty-ninth Street, between Fifth and Madison Avenues, and at Calvary Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street. READER.

New York, April 11, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reply to "Episcopalian's" query as to whether any of the churches in the city hold service at 8 P. M. on Good Friday, I know of two: The Church of the Holy Communion, Twentieth Street and Sixth Avenue; also St. Mary's, Alexander Avenue and One Hundred and Forty-second Street, Bronx, which is but a few steps from the One Hundred and Forty-third Street station of the Third Avenue Elevated. ANOTHER EPISCOPALIAN.

New York, April 11, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

For the benefit of your correspondent, "Episcopalian," I would suggest these churches, where a short service is held at 8 P. M. on Good Friday: St. Chrysostom, Thirty-ninth Street and Seventh Avenue; St. Paul's Broadway and Vesey Street; St. Agnes, Ninety-second Street and Columbus Avenue, (all Trinity parishes;) St. Ignatius, Eighty-seventh Street and West End Avenue; St. Mary the Virgin, 139 West Forty-sixth Street; Holy Trinity, 122d Street and Lenox Avenue; St. Matthew's, 32 West Eighty-fourth Street; Chapel of the Incarnation, 240 East Thirty-first Street. Retort from a Wearer of Whiskers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I ask if the "Others" referred to by "Old Shaver" in yours of this date are youths of tender years who, after industriously endeavoring to shave whiskers on to themselves, have ignominiously failed, or old people who, having possessed them, have seen them disappear on the approach of old age.

I always had an idea that "old" people at least knew that whiskers were put by nature upon human beings for the purpose of their remaining there, and not for the purpose of being removed by shaving or by any other process.

To be consistent, "Others" should have the roofs of their heads shaved. In that way they would remove themselves still further from untidyness, neglect, lazy streaks, and tramps than before. UNSHAVEN OLD SHAVER.

Protest Against Signs on a Church.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been glad to see that the avaricious spirit which led to defacing the Palisades with advertisements of all kinds has been driven to expend itself elsewhere. But when that spirit breaks out anew in blazing letters from the steeple of an old Broadway church, which has so long added a bit of the picturesque to the sky line for many blocks down Broadway, it is too bad.

Of course, the building is no longer used for church purposes. Yet that should not preclude a decent respect for the sentiments of the people who once worshipped there—a respect that is the inmost right of every man regardless of creed or kind. W. S. W.

DEEP SEA THOUGHTS.

A sailor's life is a wonderful thing—so variegated-like!
He never knows where he is going to land or what he is going to strike.
He may be wrecked on a coral reef and eaten by hungry sharks,
Or he may not be—do you catch my drift and the tenor of my remarks?

He may, you see, depart from port where the water is calm and flat,
And presently hit a frightful storm—do you see what I'm driving at?
Well, that is the hand of fate, you know, a hidden, tremendous force
Which guides and steers and goes butting 'round—you know what I mean of course.

This element of uncertainty, of something-may-happenness,
Is what I'm endeavoring to get at—you follow me, more or less?
The sight of a barometric drop produces a shuddering
And trains of extremely high-class thought and—well, all that sort of thing.

And thus the sailor is hushed and awed and filled with a childlike doubt,
A sense of pulsating mystery—I was trying to bring that out.
It's deucedly psychological and, according to those who know it,
Reacts—do you see?—internally, and—oh, read a deep-sea poet!

TARIFF TALK IN THE HOUSE.

Watchmakers Defended for Making Lower Prices Abroad.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The first attempt to reply to the tariff revision speech of Representative Rainey of Illinois, who used the Watch Trust as an illustration, was made this afternoon by Representative Tirrell of Massachusetts.

Mr. Tirrell read a statement by E. C. Fitch and Royal Robbins, President and Treasurer of the Waltham Watch Company, to the effect that "there is no watch trust in the United States and never has been."

Mr. Tirrell discussed the charge of selling cheaper abroad than at home. He cited his own experience as a manufacturer of wood pulp to prove that only by selling the excess product abroad at what could be got for it, could the mills be kept going the full time necessary to derive the most from them.

"When the American manufacturer produces more than he can sell here at a small margin of profit," said the speaker, "he must ship abroad and sell at a less price or let his plant lie idle. In that way he introduces his goods to the foreign market. Then when they have been established and the foreign consumer will have them even at a higher price, the manufacturer can make a profit on his foreign shipments."

Mr. Williams, the minority leader, asked why American factories sold their surplus abroad at less prices than at home.

"Here at home with a sheltered market," he continued, "sheltered by the tariff, for the planting, growth, and consummation of combinations between manufacturers, the moment he undertook to sell the surplus here at less than cost, he would break the market prices agreed upon by the various factories entering into the combination."

BILL TO ROUND UP CHINESE.

But Representative Denby Proposes More Liberal Regulations.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Representative Denby of Michigan introduced a bill to-day making extensive revision of the Chinese Exclusion act. It extends the operation of this act ten years, and incorporates the recommendations of Commissioner General Sargent for American Inspectors in China under the supervision of the Immigration Service, and for the re-registration of Chinese now in this country.

It permits Chinese residents of this country to go and come at will under proper regulation in regard to return certificates, &c. It admits Chinese applicants for the writ of habeas corpus to bail, a privilege now denied them. It repeals the provision of existing laws placing the burden of proof upon a Chinaman arrested for being unlawfully in the United States to show his right to be here.

It enlarges the exempt classes beyond those mentioned in the treaty of 1880 to include accountants, bookkeepers, bankers, members of the learned professions, editors, or members of other classes not falling within the category of laborers from entering the United States.

FOREIGNERS NOT FAVORED.

E. H. Gary Says Steel Prices Are Not Lower Abroad Than Here.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—E. H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation, addressed the House Committee on Merchant Marine to-day at the Ship Subsidy bill hearing relative to the foreign and domestic prices of steel. He said there was no great difference between the home and the foreign price. At present it was practically the same.

He denied the testimony of James G. Wallace, Vice President of the American Shipping Company, given before the Merchant Marine Commission last Summer, to the effect that the Steel Corporation was selling large quantities of steel for ships abroad for $24 a ton, while it was charging $32 for the same material in the home market. As to the cost of steel material for ships, there was practically no difference between the foreign and American markets. He pointed out the disadvantage of the American manufacturer in reaching such markets as South Africa and Argentina as compared with the German or British manufacturer, because of the lack of American shipping facilities.

GERMANY'S BIG DRINK BILL.

60,000,000 People Spend $672,000,000 for Liquor Annually.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Germany's enormous drink bill is explained in letters to the Bureau of Manufactures from American Consuls Brittain and Guenther. Each inhabitant consumes a yearly average of 6¼ quarts of wine, 129¾ quarts of beer, and 9 quarts of brandy.

For a population of 60,000,000 people, the liquor expenditure is $672,588,000. The average for male citizens over 15 years would be $27.36. By contrast, German expenditures for schools were $99,722,000, for working people's insurance $104,244,000, and for the army and navy $203,847,000.

ODELL PLAN MAY WIN SOON.

Reapportionment Matter Likely to be Settled Early Next Week.

Chairman Parsons of the Republican County Committee has been requested to call a special meeting of the Executive Committee for the early part of next week so that the relative merits of the Odell and Parsons reapportionment plans may be fought out in that body.

According to one district leader who has been lined up with Chairman Parsons, the Odell-Halpin plan for the redistricting is so superior to the Parsons plan, in the opinion of the district leaders, that the Parsons plan may not have ten votes on the final test. At the Odell conference against the Parsons plan twenty-two district leaders out of thirty-six pledged themselves to the Odell plan.

It was learned yesterday that under the Odell plan, William H. Ten Eyck, now leader of the Thirty-fourth District, will get a new district, to be known as the Thirty-third. E. H. Healey, who now leads the Thirty-fifth, will have a newly carved out district, to be known as the new Thirty-fourth. The Annexed District will be made a full Assembly district, and William S. Germain is expected to retain his leadership there.

RECOUNT BILL PROTESTS.

Municipal Ownership Mass Meeting Opposes Legislature's Action.

Resolutions of protest against the action of the Assembly in recommitting and pigeonholing the Raines-Murphy Recount bill were adopted last night at the meeting of the Committee of One Hundred of the Workingmen's Municipal Ownership Association. The meeting was held in Beethoven Hall, the organization representing about every branch of organized labor in the city.

The resolutions were introduced by Frank McArdle of the International Brotherhood of Foundrymen, and under them a committee was named to co-operate with like committees from other organizations in arranging a mass meeting to make a public protest against the Legislature's action. The committee consists of Charles Lowy of the cigar packers' organization, Frank McArdle of the foundry workers, and James A. Stewart of the engineers.

CRUISER WASHINGTON FAST.

Shows a Speed of 22.41 Knots on Standardization Trial.

ROCKLAND, Me., April 11.—In her standardization trial over the Owl Head course to-day, the cruiser Washington covered her fastest mile at the rate of 22.52 knots an hour.

Although the propeller revolutions necessary to produce contract speed and the horse power were not figured to-night, officers of the New York Shipbuilding Company expressed confidence that the vessel will exceed the contract speed.

The vessel went fourteen times over the mile course. The average rate of five high-speed runs was 22.41 knots. The maximum revolutions of her propeller a minute amounted to 128.13, the average revolutions on the high-speed runs being 124.99.

COAL ROADS IN POOL ON RATES FOR 6 YEARS

All Lines Agreed to Raise Price, Chairman Searles Admits.

KEPT PRICE OF COAL UP, TOO

Whole Plan Was to Prevent Business Demoralization—Frank Talk at Commerce Hearing.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—That rates are fixed by the traffic associations, composed of various coal-carrying railroads, was the admission drawn to-day from railroad officials at the final hearing of the Inter-State Commerce Commission's investigation into the alleged abuses of the coal trade.

Joseph G. Searles, Coal Traffic Manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, who is also Chairman of the All-Rail Traffic Association, testified that this organization not only fixes the percentage of tonnage allotted to each railroad, but also establishes the rates. Counsel for the commission produced the minutes of a meeting of the Tidewater Bituminous Steam Coal Traffic Association, held on Sept. 19, 1900. The records showed that a resolution offered by the Norfolk & Western Company, permitting that company and the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad to carry tidewater coal at the rate of $1.25 a ton, was voted down and that the rate was fixed at $1.40 a ton on Mr. Seales's resolution.

The Tidewater Association is composed of the Pennsylvania, Norfolk & Western, Chesapeake & Ohio, New York Central, and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroads.

Mr. Searles admitted that there had been an agreement as to the tonnage to be allowed each road, and that if one road shipped more and another less a settlement was made. He said that there had been no settlements since 1896.

In explaining the establishment of rates Mr. Searles stated that each company fixed its price, which was later agreed to by the members of the association. If any company should reduce the rate, he said, it would demoralize the general situation. Mr. Searles denied that this was an understanding to maintain rates between all-rail and all-water associations for the purpose of preventing competition.

It was shown by the records of the "Traffic Association" that in 1899 the rate on soft coal to New York and New England points was $1.55, except to the Boston & Maine connection, which had a $1.45 rate. In 1900 these rates were raised to $1.85 and $1.75 respectively. Since then there has been no change. Mr. Searles denied also that the purpose of these rates was to stop competition.

Mr. Searles said that the cutting of prices did not demoralize the all-rail coal Traffic Association, but that it demoralized business. He said that when the members of the association agreed on anything it was referred to the Presidents of the roads, and that the latter conferred together. The purpose of the all-rail organization, Mr. Searles said, was to maintain the price of coal, and that there was an express agreement between all parties to maintain the rates.

W. W. Atterbury, General Manager of the Pennsylvania, was recalled, and produced the documents relating to tonnage which the commission asked for yesterday. Mr. Atterbury, in answer to Mr. Glasgow, said that he did not know that there was an unprecedented demand for cars at the bituminous mines at the time of the anthracite strike of 1902. The question was repeated to Mr. Atterbury several times, and met with the same answer, "I do not know."

When the commission adjourned to-day it was not stated where the next meeting would be held.

TO IMPROVE BRIDGE TRAFFIC.

Report of Commissioner Stevenson on Contemplated Changes.

Replying to recent criticism from the Brooklyn Reform League, Bridge Commissioner Stevenson issued a statement yesterday showing the improvements made and those projected on the Brooklyn, Williamsburg, and Manhattan Bridges. He calls attention to the fact that he has just advertised the contract for the Manhattan Bridge, and that the delay was due to "innumerable differences of opinion between engineers."

Concerning the Brooklyn Bridge, the Commissioner says the trolley service has been increased during the rush hours by a better system of inspection for the loops, and on the span, and he shows that improvements have been made by the opening of the additions to the Manhattan terminal platforms.

Announcement is also made for the first time that a tunnel is being constructed under the present trolley loops, so that connections will be made with the bridge subway station and to permit the landing of passengers at the foot of the stairways leading to the "L" platforms. A new stairway is all projected from each of the terminal platforms.

Referring to the Williamsburg Bridge, the Commissioner says that relief on that bridge will be secured through the use of a temporary terminal for trolley cars. The terminal, he says, is now under construction and will be completed in May or June. When completed it will double the trolley-car capacity of the bridge.

TILLMAN ASKS FOR A VOTE.

But Aldrich Says More Rate Bill Speeches Are to Come.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Senator Tillman made another effort to-day for an agreement on a final vote on the Railroad Rate bill. He made complaint that the debate on the measure was "lagging."

Mr. Aldrich challenged that statement, saying he had never known a time when the debate on so important a measure had been so continuous and so well sustained.

"If," he said, "the Senator is able to restrain his zeal for a few days until some important speeches are made I hope we will then be able to reach an understanding. I should say that before the end of the week we ought to foresee the end of the general discussion."

No speeches were made on the Rate bill to-day.

DRY DOCK DEWEY ADRIFT.

Storm Parts Towlines and She Is Not Recovered for Twenty-three Hours.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The dry dock Dewey broke its towlines in the Mediterranean off Malta and drifted about in a storm for about twenty-three hours, but is now again in control of the vessels which are towing it.

This information reached the Navy Department in a dispatch from Admiral Sigsbee, dated at Messina, Sicily, yesterday. The cruiser Brooklyn stood by until the safety of the Dewey was assured.

More Votes Recounted.

Ballot boxes from three of the election districts in the Thirteenth Assembly District were brought before the Assembly Committee on Privileges and Elections yesterday, in the contest brought by Joseph B. Traut, M. O. L. candidate, against Assemblyman John C. Hackett, Tammany. Traut was defeated by 68 votes on the face of the returns.

President Favors the Delaware.

WASHINGTON, April 11. — President Roosevelt, Secretary Bonaparte, and Senator Allee of Delaware had a talk at the White House to-day about the naming of the proposed great battleship. It was agreed practically to-day that unless Congress should require specifically that the vessel should be called the Constitution it would be named the Delaware, in accordance with the law that battleships shall be named after States.

New Post for Admiral Cervera.

MADRID, April 11.—Vice Admiral Cervera, who commanded the Spanish fleet which was destroyed off Santiago, Cuba, in 1898, by an American fleet, has been appointed Naval Commander at Ferrol.

LOCAL BANKS ENGAGE $6,000,000 GOLD ABROAD

Then There Is a Rapid Recovery in Exchange Rates.

CITY BANK GETS THE MOST

New York ordered a large amount of gold abroad yesterday after a further sharp decline in exchange, which brought rates to a point at which this market was in a position to draw sovereigns from the Bank of England for import to this country.

To protect its supply of British coin the Bank of England consented to give up a part of its holdings of American eagles and of gold bars, and Paris also yielded its share of the precious metal. Before noon yesterday New York banks had got more than $6,000,000 gold in London and Paris. The amount taken would have considerably exceeded this sum if the taking of this gold had not been followed by such a rapid recovery in foreign exchange rates that it became unprofitable to import the metal. In fact, one prominent international house which had actually taken gold in London canceled the engagement when exchange in New York rebounded after the decline that came early in the day.

It was an extraordinary day in the foreign exchange market. Demand sterling, which closed on Tuesday at 4.8350, dropped soon after the opening of business to 4.8290 for bankers' bills and as low as 4.8275 for stock bills. Only twice in the last thirteen years had exchange sold as low as this, and little surprise was shown when it became known that at last the Bank of England had been forced to give up a large amount of American eagles. The rebound from the low point of the day was as rapid as was the previous decline. From 4.8290 demand sterling rose 50 points in an hour, and before the close of the day the rate had risen 100 points more to 4.8440. The rate at the close was 4.8410. This recovery of 150 points from the low point to the high point of the day is one of the sharpest single day movements that has occurred in many years.

City Bank's Imports.

Most of the gold engaged for import yesterday was taken by the National City Bank, which got $5,000,000. Most of this was taken in London, but a large amount was also obtained in Paris. The consignment from Paris consisted of American eagles, but a part of the London gold was in bars. The Guaranty Trust Company engaged in London $1,000,000 in American eagles and $100,000 in bars. All of the gold taken in London was supplied by the Bank of England, but the American eagles which the National City Bank got in Paris came not from the Bank of France but from one of the smaller banks. It was rumored that the Paris gold was part of the shipment from Russia, which recently went to Paris after having been offered to New York at a price which was above what could be paid then by New York bankers.

In addition to the gold engaged in Europe, several consignments of American gold coin were received from Canada. So far this week the New York banks have got from Canada $500,000 of gold, of which $250,000 arrived yesterday.

After the close of the market the opinion was expressed by international bankers that the advance in exchange rates would prevent any further engagements of gold for the time being. It is recognized, however, that the course of the exchange market depends principally on the fluctuations in money at this centre, and on this question opinion is still divided.

Call Money Rates.

Yesterday's movement in the New York money market was not so violent as the fluctuations in exchange, but they attracted almost as much attention. The range for the day in call money was from 19 per cent. down to 2 per cent., the latter rate being reached just before the close. The 2 per cent. rate, it was generally admitted, did not reflect the true position of the money market any more than had the abnormally high rates quoted earlier in the week. There was no expectation that the money market would remain at such a low level. It was considered merely a temporary reaction from the abnormally high rates which had prevailed this week. At the same time the opinion was expressed in well-informed quarters that there is no likelihood now of a return to the 25 per cent. rate which was paid by borrowers the first two days of this week.

New York City, it was learned yesterday, has paid off the $2,500,000 loan from the National City Bank, which fell due last Monday. A loan of a similar amount falls due to-morrow, but in all probability this loan will be renewed for a week. The publication of the fact last week that the city had resorted to a temporary loan to obviate the necessity of paying more than 4½ per cent. for a renewal of its revenue bonds which fell due last week resulted in the city's receiving several offers from the savings banks to purchase its revenue bonds on a 4½ per cent. basis, which has been fixed by the Controller as the maximum interest which the city ought to pay. It was out of the funds got from these savings banks that the city was able to pay off the $2,500,000 loan obtained last week from the National City Bank.

GOLD COMING FROM LONDON.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1906.]

LONDON, Thursday, April 12.—New York, which has been borrowing money in Europe, chiefly in London, for a good many weeks, yesterday took in gold part of what it had here to its credit. It is expected that New York will take considerably more in a few days.

The amount taken yesterday was £452,000, and it will go to the United States in the form of eagles, bought from the Bank of England at 76s. 3d. an ounce.

Withdrawals of gold for shipment to America have been expected for some time, and talk has been heard this week to the effect that at least £2,000,000 in gold will soon leave London for New York.

"I don't believe the shipments will reach anywhere near the £2,000,000 mark," a well-informed city man said to me yesterday. "They may run up to £1,000,000, but I doubt if they will go beyond it. When your people have got £1,000,000 of our gold I believe they will be satisfied."

The Times in its city article says the best-informed opinion is inclined to the view that no prediction can safely be made as to the amount of future withdrawals in the present state of monetary affairs in New York.

Yesterday's withdrawals caused a hardening of rates in the money market, and a certain degree of weakness in consols. In addition, the exports were used as a lever to raise the prices of American shares here. The Times remarks on this point:

"It is to be feared that the gold exports may have the effect of stimulating fresh speculation in New York, and so of increasing the unhealthy symptoms which at present predominate in its money market. The credits which American financiers have obtained in Europe are on a scale which calls earnestly for a policy of strict moderation until they have been reduced."
